How Raine Looted Bank of $1,200,000 in Two Years Without Alarming Directors

COVERED SHORTAGE BY CLEVER DRAFT SYSTEM

After Carrying His Personal Checks as Long as Possible, He Would Direct Cashier to Take Them Up With Orders on Firms He Alleged Were Indebted to Him and Then Would Destroy These Drafts.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 14.

CHARLES HUNTER RAINE, defaulting president of the Mercantile Bank of Memphis, who, it is charged, embezzled practically all of the bank's cash assets, amounting to more than $1,187,000 and played the money on the losing side of the cotton market, sits behind steel bars in the jail here and indulges his passion for speculation by playing solitaire with a well-thumbed pack of cards.

That this man, who is accused as the biggest individual bank defaulter of whom there has been any record in recent years, should find solace in a game of cards in which he is his own opponent is regarded as typical by many who have closely watched his career as a banker.

They believe that speculation has become a monomania with him.

To the few intimate friends who have been permitted to visit him in jail he talks of the immense riches he would have acquired and the wonderful things he would have done if the cotton market had gone his way, instead of wrecking his bank and wiping out the savings of more than 4000 depositors.

He seems to feel more keenly the failure of his judgment as a cotton speculator, rather than his failure honestly to administer the trust imposed in him as a bank president.

As to that phase of his crime he says: "I am getting my lesson. I hope it may be a lesson to others."

Wild Plunging Began After Death of Wife Two Years Ago

RAINE is a widower, 55 years old. His wife died suddenly about two years ago. It was about that time that Raine began to plunge heavily in the cotton market, though this was not then generally known.

After the Mercantile Bank crash last Sunday, it was believed that Raine's beautiful Memphis home would be turned over as partial restitution for the money which had been stolen from the bank. But when the title to this property was traced by State Bank Examiner Hutton it was found that at or near the time he began his heavy cotton speculations Raine had deeded his home to his wife, retaining for himself only a life interest in it.

Mrs. Raine died a year or less after this deed was drawn. She willed the property to a woman relative, who has since died, willing it to another relative. Raine's disposal of the property by deeding it to his wife makes it impossible to seize it to make good any portion of his defalcation.

When the directors of the Mercantile Bank, at a special meeting Sunday afternoon, went over the bank's books with Examiner Hutton and unanimously agreed that the institution was hopelessly insolvent, they believed that Raine had in his possession at least $400,000 worth of personal assets, including his home property. This amount was deducted from the total defalcation, as shown by the books, and on Monday a formal bill of complaint was filed in the Chancery Court, accusing Raine of having embezzled $787,000.

Later investigation showed that Raine did not have the $400,000 personal assets he was thought to have. In subsequent estimates of the shortage this amount has been added to the amount named in the bill of complaint, bringing the total estimated defalcation up to $1,187,000.

Raine Survival of Dying Type of Luxury-Loving Southerner

NOW that Raine is behind prison bars many business men in Memphis have joined the ranks of the "I-Told-You-So's."

Hunter Raine, as these conservative business men describe him, was a sort of link between the spirit of the old and the spirit of the new South. A man who had been closely associated with him described him to a Post-Dispatch correspondent as the survival of a luxury-loving type that is fast disappearing.

He loved money for the things that it would buy, and the more expensive the things were the more he loved to buy them. His home was a dream of luxury in startling contrast with the jail cell where he now knows no luxuries except his pack of cards and a bottle of rare old whisky.

It is recalled that business men of the new type lacked confidence in Hunter Raine because of his love of speculation. Some even went so far as to class him as a "sport," because it was rumored that he played a good hand at poker, that he was not averse to an occasional flyer at faro or keno, and that he even had been known to back his judgment on a horse race.

Such things find scant approval in the regenerated South of today.

Though Raine Thursday pleaded not guilty to charges of embezzlement, larceny and breach of trust, he previously had admitted to the Board of Directors of the bank that he alone was responsible for the defalcation.

As he described his operations he would draw a check for $50,000, $100,000 or $200,000 and would order Claude Anderson, cashier of the bank, to cash it. He would direct Anderson to carry the check as cash, explaining that he was operating for a syndicate of wealthy New York men who were playing the cotton market and that these New Yorkers would honor his drafts upon them at any time.

Destroyed Drafts He Drew to Take Up His Personal Checks

WHEN Anderson would call on him for cash Raine would draw a draft on some cotton man in New York, payable at the American Exchange National Bank of that city. His personal check would then be returned to him by Anderson and destroyed.

Anderson has said that in each case he supposed that Raine forwarded the draft to New York. At the direction of Raine, Anderson would charge the New York bank with the draft. Instead of sending the draft to New York Raine would then tear it up. Later he would tell Anderson that he had received notice that the draft had been honored. Anderson then would credit the New York bank and enter the amount in the Mercantile Bank's cash account. The entire draft transaction, so far as Raine was concerned, was purely fictitious and used by him as a means of withdrawing large sums of money from the Mercantile for his own use.

It was through the efforts of his brother, Gilbert Raine, principal owners of the News-Scimitar, a Memphis afternoon newspaper, that Hunter Raine was induced to employ counsel and plead not guilty.

Until Hunter Raine was accused of looting the Mercantile Bank he and his brother, Gilbert, had not spoken to each other for 10 years. Their estrangement came about when Hunter Raine was elected to Gilbert Raine's place as a director of the Commercial-Appeal, Memphis' only morning newspaper. Gilbert Raine then sold his interest in the Commercial-Appeal and acquired control of the News-Scimitar. Hunter Raine is still a director of the Commercial-Appeal, though it is said that his stock interest in the paper is not large.

Queer Complications Follow His Connection With Two Newspapers

THE fact that the accused banker and his brother are so closely allied with the two leading newspapers of Memphis has caused some queer complications. Gilbert Raine, after visiting the jail and being reconciled to his brother, used the news and editorial columns of the News-Scimitar to demand an official investigation as to whether any directors of the Mercantile Bank beside Hunter Raine knew of the improper use of the bank's money. While not attempting to excuse his brother, Gilbert Raine is demanding that if others were equally guilty they also should be punished.

The Commercial-Appeal, though Hunter Raine is one of its directors, insists that Raine was the only director of the Mercantile Bank who knew of the defalcation.

Before the ink was dry on the court's decree appointing a receiver for the bank, last Monday, criminal proceedings were under way against Raine. A bench warrant sworn out by the Attorney-General, accused the banker of embezzlement of $788,000. The warrant was given to deputy sheriffs to serve. They found the banker at his home.

"Hello, boys," was the greeting he gave them. "I've been expecting you. Got a warrant for me, haven't you?" and a smile flitted for a brief instant across his features.

"Well, I've sat up all night waiting for you. Let me shave and dress and I'll be ready to go with you."

The banker went to his room and soon reappeared in a neat business suit. With the officers at his heels he went over the man-

RAINE A LEADING SOCIAL FIGURE IN MEMPHIS

RAINE is a widower, 55 years old. He has been in the banking business since 1883, when he was appointed the first cashier upon the organization of the Mercantile Bank.

He has been prominent in the social and military life of Memphis, having been an officer of the Chickasaw Guards and president of the Chickasaw Guards Club, one of the most exclusive social organizations in the city.

He has taken an active interest in the Memphis Country Club.

He was fond of social gatherings, but not especially noted as a "spender."

Proof of Bible's Inspiration Is Its Embodiment of the Whole Science of Living, Says Bryan

Secretary of State, in Brilliant Oration Before International Students, Declares That None but Divinely Appointed Men, With Their Limited Opportunities and Facilities and the Lack of Knowledge of Other Peoples, Could Have Written a Work That All the Philosophers of the World Today, With Millions of Books to Cultivate Their Minds and Telegraph Wires That Keep Them in Touch With the Pulse of All Mankind, Could Not Approach in Logic, Reasoning, Example and Precept.

Old and Young Find Solace in Its Words and Every Reader Is Elevated by Persual of It. Everywhere It Goes, There Go Civilization and Progress to Develop Our Enlightened Humanity.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.

BY unanimous assent, the great feature of the midwinter Bible conference for preachers and laymen that was conducted here during the past week by the Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, the noted English evangelist, is considered to be the brilliant defense of the Bible as a divinely-inspired book by William J. Bryan, Secretary of State. Mr. Bryan was in superb voice and those who were fortunate enough to hear his argument say it should be ranked with the great orations in his career. Following is a stenographic report of his address:

IS the Bible the work of man, or is it an inspired book? Is it the product of human wisdom, or did its authors speak as they were commanded by the Lord?

Atheists and materialists declare that it is merely the work of man—that it was written under the limitations that apply to human wisdom. Taking this position, they must necessarily contend that, unless man has degenerated in ability and declined in wisdom, he can now produce a book equal to the Bible. Let them produce it.

Judged by human standards, man is far better prepared to write a Bible now than he was when our Bible was written. The characters whose words and deeds are recorded in the Bible were members of a single race; they lived among the hills of Palestine, in a territory scarcely larger than one of our counties. They did not have printing presses and they lacked the learning of the schools; they had no great libraries to consult, no steamboats to carry them around the world and make them acquainted with the various centers of ancient civilization; they had no telegraph wires to bring them the news from the ends of the earth and no newspapers to spread before them each morning the doings of the day before.

Science had not unlocked nature's door and revealed the secrets of rocks below and stars above.

From what a scantily supplied storehouse of knowledge they had to draw, compared with the unlimited wealth of information at man's command today! And yet these Bible characters grapple with every problem that confronts mankind, from the creation of the world to eternal life beyond the tomb. They have given us a diagram of man's existence from the cradle to the grave, and they have set up sign posts at every dangerous point along the path.

We turn back to the Bible for the Ten Commandments, which form the foundation for our statute law and for the Sermon on the Mount, which lays down the rules for our spiritual growth. The Bible gives us the story of the birth, the words, the works, the crucifixion, the resurrection and the ascension of Him whose coming was foretold in prophecy, whose arrival was announced by the angel voices, singing peace and good will—the story of Him who gave to the world a code of morality superior to anything that the world had known before or has known since—the story of Him who is the growing figure of all time, whom the world is accepting as Savior and as the perfect example.

Challenge to the Atheists.

LET the atheists and the materialists produce a better Bible than ours, if they can. Let them collect the best of their school to be found among the graduates of universities—as many as they will and from every land. Let the members of this selected group travel where they will, consult such libraries as they please, and employ every modern means of swift communication. Let them roam at will wherever science has opened a way; let them take advantage of all the progress in art and in literature, in oratory and in history—let them use to the full every instrumentality that is employed in modern civilization; and when they have exhausted every source let them embody the results of their best intelligence in a book and offer it to the world as a substitute for this Bible of ours.

Have they the confidence that the prophets of Baal had in their God? Will they try? If not, what excuse will they give? Has man fallen from his high estate, so that we cannot rightfully expect as much of him now as 19 centuries ago? Or does the Bible come to us from a source that is higher than man—which?

But our case is even stronger. The opponents of the Bible cannot take refuge in the plea that man is retrograding. They loudly proclaim that man has grown and that he is growing still. They boast of a world-wide advance, and their claim is founded upon fact. In all matters except in the science of how to live man has made wonderful progress. The mastery of the mind over the forces of nature seems almost complete, so far do we surpass the ancients in harnessing the water, the wind and the lightning.

For ages the rivers plunged down the mountain side and exhausted their energies without any appreciable contribution to man's service; now they are estimated as so many units of horsepower, and we find that their fretting and foaming was merely a language which they employed to tell us of their strength and of their willingness to work for us. And, while falling water is becoming each day a larger factor in burden bearing, water, rising in the form of steam, is revolutionizing the transportation methods of the world.

Bible Always Uplifts Its Readers.

THE wind that first whispered its secret of strength to the flapping sail is now turning the wheel at the well.

Lightning, the dread demon that, from the dawn of creation, has been rushing down its zig-zag path through the clouds as if intent only upon spreading death, has been metamorphosed into an errand boy and brings us illumination from the sun and carries our messages around the globe.

Inventive genius has multiplied the power of a human arm and supplied the masses with comforts of which the rich did not dare to dream a few centuries ago. Science is ferreting but the hidden causes of disease and teaching us how to prolong life. In every line, except in the line of character-building, the world seems to have been made over, but the marvelous changes by which old things have become new only emphasize the fact that man, too, must be born again, while they show how impotent are material things to touch the soul of man and transform him into a spiritual being.

Wherever the moral standard is being lifted up—wherever life is becoming larger in the vision that directs it and richer in its fruitage, the improvement is traceable to the Bible and to the influence of the God and Christ of whom the Bible tells.

The atheist and the materialist must confess that man ought to be able to produce a better book today than man, unaided, could have produced in any previous age. The fact that they have tried, time and again, only to fail each time more hopelessly, explains why they will not—why they cannot—accept the challenge thrown down by the Christian world to produce a book worthy to take the Bible's place.

They have prayed to their God to answer with fire—prayed to inanimate matter with an earnestness that is pathetic—they have employed in the worship of blind force a faith greater than religion requires, but their Almighty is asleep. How long will they allow the search for the strata of stone and fragments of fossil and decaying skeletons that are strewn around the house to absorb their thoughts to the exclusion of the Architect who planned it all! How long will the agnostic, closing his eyes to the plainest truths, cry "Night, night," when the sun in his meridian splendor announces that noon is here?

The Bible has stamped its impress upon the map of the world; its boundaries are clearly marked and the light that emanates from the Christian nations is flowing outward toward those who sit in darkness. Back of the progress that marks the present day is the code of morals that Christ proclaimed and back of that code of morals is the divine character of Him who is both Son of God and Savior of Mankind.

Tolstoy's Rebuke to the Cultured.

IF, as we contend, this is the work of God, the importance of the study of it cannot be overestimated. If any of you are disposed to think that one can intellectually outgrow the Bible, you ought to read the rebuke that Tolstoy administers to what he calls the cultured crowd. He says that there are some who regard religion as a superstition—good to restrain the ignorant; but that with a certain amount of intellectual progress one can outgrow the necessity for it.

His answer is this: "Who has experienced religious feeling knows that it does not rest on a vague fear of the unseen forces of nature, but it does rest on man's consciousness of his finiteness amid an infinite nature," and of his sinfulness and this consciousness, Tolstoy adds, man can never outgrow.

We all need religion to nourish the spiritual nature. If spiritual emaciation was as easily discerned as emaciation of the body, it would be as easy to persuade people to be regular in the taking of spiritual nourishment as it now is to convince people that they should eat three meals a day.

If I was a minister and found a member of my congregation growing lukewarm or becoming skeptical, I would take him to a rescue mission and let him see the spiritual regeneration that can take place. Some two years ago I visited a rescue mission on the Bowery in New York, and listened to the testimony of a dozen men who told how, after careers of dissipation and crime, each one had found his way into that little room and there been born again.

Their faces gave proof of the change that had taken place, and when I compared them with the young men who came forward to asked for prayers—young men whose faces [illegible] longer suggested that they had been made [illegible] the image of God—then I realized more [illegible] than I ever had before the miracle that is [illegible] formed when a man's heart is touched, so that he hates the things he loved and loves the things he hated.

The Christ who can go down into the gutter and lift up one who has fallen so that his own flesh and blood had given him up for lost, the Christ who can cleanse and fill that heart with a passion for service—that Christ could have broken the bonds of the tomb.

The commission-manager plan of municipal government is being tested out in more than a dozen American cities. Most of them are small. Dayton and Springfield, O., with 130,000 and 50,000 inhabitants, respectively, are the largest.

The city manager, employed by the commission, is "the administrative head of the municipal government and responsible for the efficient administration of all departments."

The 298 cities which have adopted commission government had 7,455,276 inhabitants in 1910. Twelve—an incomplete list—cities which have adopted the commission manager plan have approximately 260,000. Here is a partial list of hem:

Springfield's city manager is Charles B. Ashburner. He has been making things hum during his brief incumbency. Modern business system has been installed in every city department. Fire-fighting equipment has been motorized, and street-sweeping machinery will be. City jobs high and low are given for merit; not otherwise. And the merit required is ability to do the work, not to "swing a precinct" or a ward. The old cumbersome Board of Health has been abolished; in its stead one expert has been appointed to manage that work, giving his whole time to it. Police and fire chiefs have been instructed to enforce all peace and safety ordinances, without exception. City employes have "quit drinking" while on duty. That waits until the day's end, and is done, if at all, on the employe's time, not the city's. Cleaning of the entire city will be attempted, under the front-foot assessment plan, and with the most modern machines.

The Board of Directors—the commission—meets daily at lunch, at the Bagonda Club, for informal discussion of city policies. Once a week it meets to transact business. There is no oratory. Decisions reached informally during the week are registered swiftly at these legislative sessions. Nothing is ordered without due consideration of its effect on the city as a whole and of its proper place in a city-wide scheme of betterments and public services. City hall reporters lament the lack of "exciting stories."

The experience of the first commission governments, in the Southwest, may serve to guide these later innovators. The first fact to be borne in mind is that abolition of ward government and of wards did not mean abolition of the ward politicians. They remained. And they were keenly watchful to pick flaws in the new system.

The business man, drawn from his own office, where his word was law, to a city office, where the first consideration must necessarily be to please all the people, or at any rate a voting majority of them, was in some instances simple-minded enough to think that "only results count;" that if he did good work the work would speak for itself. It didn't, and it won't. Somebody has to inform the people, the citizen-stockholders, of the good work that is being done, and how and when and why. Very properly so. This is the function, as our American city life is organized, f the newspaper reporter seeking "good stories" t city hall. Some of these business men govern- g Southwestern cities underrated the importance the reporter. They never had used him in ir own affairs, and they didn't know how to him in their new sphere. A few of them n were unwise enough to snub him, not grasp- the fact that he was the unofficial representa- of several thousand citizens, who through expected a daily report on anything of im- nce done in their municipal business house. est commission government in the South- made this mistake, and went to defeat chief- ause its head, who had all the powers which field divides between her Mayor and her anager, in personal pique closed the city and offices against the reporters of a er that criticised him.

he commission-city manager governments will tty certainly succeed, since the principle is the oved one on which most American business is conducted, if they do not forget to turn all their acts and records inside out for inspection by "the eyes of the voters," the city hall reporters. The electorate will forgive a good many mistakes, but won't stand for a minute's assumption by any city official that the public business is a private affair between trusted experts.

A CONVINCING STATEMENT.

Every citizen of St. Louis should read carefully the Municipal Bridge Petition submitted to the Conference Committee of the Municipal Assembly by the Business Men's League and the civic organizations co-operating with the league for the completion of the bridge.

We reprint the statement of the petition in full in today's Sunday Post-Dispatch. No St. Louisan who wants to understand the bridge situation and to think and act intelligently on the approach question can afford to miss a word of it.

The petition contains a thorough review of legislation concerning the eastern approach. It states clearly the legal, physical, railroad and engineering aspects of the approach issue. No facts are overlooked.

With the statement of the facts about the approaches is the engineers' report approving the Reber approach, giving reasons therefor and the reasons for the rejection of the other suggested approaches.

It contains also Comptroller Player's statement concerning the cost and availability of the approaches.

Taken as a whole, the petition is a complete, comprehensive, convincing and unanswerable argument in favor of the city's (Reber) approach.

It is no less a complete, comprehensive, convincing and unanswerable argument against the A. & M. grab.

The petition, with the indorsement of 64 civic organizations representing thousands of citizens, should settle the approach question, not only in the minds of all the people, but in the minds of all the members of the Municipal Assembly.

It should result in the submission of the $2,750,000 bond issue for the Reber approach.

TIME TO THINK OF FLIES.

With more than a foot of snow on the ground and freezing temperature, it may seem a strange moment to speak to St. Louisans about flies. When you look at the Sunday Magazine which comes with this issue of the Post-Dispatch, however, you will be told how Cleveland last summer won the title of "the fly-less city." The results achieved there would be almost incredible were not the verification so easily secured. That Cleveland citizens found it possible to dispense with the use of house screens and that even in markets and stables the house fly became something of a curiosity, was due to a campaign of fly extermination which began early in March.

The expense to Cleveland did not exceed $2000. It would be a fine thing for St. Louis to do this year what the sixth city did 12 months ago.

PETTY GRAFT IN CONGRESS.

The Democratic Congress can shame its Republican predecessors—and prove its own honesty—by abolishing the petty graft of excessive mileage and clerk hire. Each member draws 20 cents a mile each way. Congress allows 5 cents a mile for witnesses or employes traveling at National expense—and it is enough. The plain graft in this allowance, last year, for members of House and Senate, was $169,500. Each member is allowed $1500 a year for clerk hire. Many pay less and pocket the saving.

There is petty graft also in other allowances Congress votes to its members. The whole runs to nearly $500,000 a year. It is "petty" only in the manner of its taking, and in contrast with the $7500 a year salary paid these public servants.

IRISH HOME RULE.

The Conservative party in England, driven to desperation by hunger for office and the contrast between the increasing power of the Liberals and its own steadily diminishing importance is resolved in the session of Parliament that opened last week, on a last effort to drive the coalition Government out by concentrating on the first measure coming under the operation of the Parliament act, the Irish Home Rule bill. The Tories will try to defeat the Asquith Government by either physical or moral violence. They feel that the Home Rule bill is being closely followed by three measures—Welsh disestablishment, electoral reform and land distribution—which, if the way is smoothed for them by the Irish bill becoming a law over the veto of the House of Lords, will mean the annihilation of conservatism for all time. They think the very life of their party is at stake.

The "Ulster argument" is the only argument the Tories urge against Home Rule, but a review of the past 18 months shows that they have been steadily weakening on this point. At first Sir Edward Carson claimed to speak for "Protestant Ireland." Driven from that line of defense he claimed to represent Ulster, which thereupon elected a majority of Nationalist members including representatives of Belfast and Londonderry. Today Sir Edward Carson pleads for "Protestant Ulster," meaning four obscure counties whose population, as Mr. Asquith points out, is less than 7 per cent of the whole country. For these he asks temporary exclusion from the operation of the Home Rule bill. This modest request into which all the fulminations of Sir Edward Carson have tapered down will probably, when the last moment comes, be granted by the Liberals with the hearty approval of the Nationalists, and Home Rule will go through "by consent."

The idea of four small agricultural counties in Ireland creating a "civil war" does not impress people aware of the military resources of the British Empire.

Meanwhile the people least excited about these events are the Irish. They know that they have a compact, independent party, casting 86 votes as a unit, in the House of Commons, counting 172 on a division. They believe no party at a general election can secure a working majority independent of this Irish vote, which therefore holds the balance of power.

CARDS FACE UPWARD.

It may be argued that a private banking business is none of a newspaper's business. Yet the value of publicity to honest banking must be admitted. President Taylor of the Commonwealth Trust Co. shrewdly recognized that a private banking business is some of the public's business, and in permitting a Post-Dispatch reporter to attend his inquiry into an alleged usurious transaction he serves the public as well as his institution a good turn.

"Cards face upward" is a good rule in any game played with the public. "Nothing to conceal" as a banking principle not only conforms to the spirit of the laws controlling that business, but is good policy.

The best business policy in these progressive times involves utter frankness in addition to the old-fashioned honesty.

UNCLE SAM AS MIDDLEMAN.

The announced plan to utilize the parcel post on a vast scale as a publicity agent between food producer and consumer, collecting data from the farmer as to what he has to sell and distributing the information with the morning's mail to city consumers, will startle the economists. Last year the Bureau of Markets of the Department of Agriculture was created. And now the appropriation to carry on its work has been raised from $4000 to $194,000 per annum. It is this Bureau of Markets which, according to the latest news from Washington, is gradually to take the place of commission men, newspaper advertisements, and all other agencies for the distribution of food products.

The announcement is startling when it is considered that this will in all probability be an entering wedge—an excuse for a universal undertaking by the Federal authorities of marketing in general. The high cost of food is only one branch of the high cost of living problem. If Uncle Sam is to step in between the food producer and food consumer, why should he not step in between the clothing producer and consumer, the shoe producer and consumer, the furniture producer and consumer, the piano and automobile producer and consumer? Why should he not eliminate all distributers of necessaries and luxuries, as well as food wholesalers and commission men?

As to the publicity part of this new marketing plan, if Uncle Sam is to give several million farmers effective advertising for their wares, and many millions of city consumers adequate data as to what and where to buy, he will become the biggest Want Ad publisher in the world. He will have to set up print shops in every community. And he will have to employ a small army of printers and pressmen to run the new industry. The possibilities of the scheme will doubtless delight the State Socialists everywhere.

WILD LIFE IN MISSOURI.

Game laws are sometimes the hardest of all to obey. The dispatch from Saline County reporting "millions of wild ducks" raiding the feed lots and so forcing farmers to shoot them, "regardless of the law," is quaintly reminiscent of the tale told by the boy, out with his first gun, of how he killed the neighbor's pet rabbit in self-defense.

MISSOURI'S THIRD GREATEST THINKER.

Our great thinking contest moves apace. The nomination for third place has been made, viz:

> I see that Hon. Walter Williams is named as Missouri's Greatest Thinker by Mrs. Lily Herald Frost, editor of Vandalia Leader, and she has been chosen as Missouri's Second Greatest Thinker by you. I name as Missouri's Third Greatest Thinker Mr. J. P. Worrel, editor of the Red Ranger, at Rushville, Mo.

Editor Worrel's work easily entitles him to third place, if not better, in any thinking contest. His Red Ranger is the greatest fox-hunting paper published in the United States, and is a credit to Missouri. He is a world-famed judge of foxhounds, and in order to get the correct angle on foxhounds one must think like a fox, which can out-think every other varmint. We will wager that our esteemed brother editor, to whom we present our compliments, can out-think Bill Stone, Chester H. Krum, Joe Folk, William Marion Reedy and Abe Slupsky put together, which is some high old thinking.

ABOLISHING CANADA'S NOBILITY.

A debate in the Canadian House on abolishing nobility and other titles was significant. Ex-Premier Wilfred Laurier, himself the possessor of one of the most modest of these titles, made this statement:

> The titles we have in this country and in the motherland are all relics of the feudal state in Great Britain. The title I bear is a relic of the old state, and I do not think that in a democracy like Canada such titles can ever take root. I agree with my friend that they are not in consonance with the spirit of the age.

Other expressions showed how little the usual attributes of a monarchy are esteemed in the single important country of the Western Hemisphere remaining under royal rule. Both parties united in killing the bill, but the day is not distant when it will be taken up and passed. Titles emphasizing class distinctions have no place on this continent. The best way of making certain that European court honors will be reserved for Europe and will not be imported in further quantities to "take root" on this side of the water is to make them illegal.

SOCRATES ON SUFFRAGE.

Glaucon: Why is the President afraid to say what he thinks of suffrage, Socrates?

Socrates: It is because the country is afraid of suffrage. There are a great many women.

Glaucon: True.

Socrates: They would cast a great many votes.

Glaucon: So they would.

Socrates: Very well. The country therefore has to consider what the disposition of women is, and what would probably happen.

Glaucon: Of course.

Socrates: If women did no more than bring about those reforms which have to do with increasing human happiness, there would be no widespread objection to letting them vote.

Glaucon: None at all.

Socrates: Many of the very men who are opposed to suffrage would welcome their assistance.

Glaucon: Truly.

Socrates: There is, however, something more than the desire for social justice back of the woman movement.

Glaucon: Ah!

Socrates: It is the disposition to make moral questions of political questions, a thing very characteristic of women.

Glaucon: No doubt.

Socrates: In the interval since this republic was founded the men have gradually learned to distinguish between moral and political questions.

Glaucon: Exactly.

Socrates: They are none too good at it, but they have improved.

Glaucon: Certainly.

Socrates: They therefore shudder to think of letting the women, who are inexperienced, upset in a day all those delicate adjustments and balances which are the product of a hundred and twenty-five years' experience.

Glaucon: Naturally.

Socrates: The great pity is that the women did not begin voting in this country when the men did.

Glaucon: Alas, yes!

Socrates: In that case, we would all know pretty well what is political and what is moral, and could safely vote together.

Glaucon: True.

Socrates: There is no blame attaching to the women for this. The men themselves were for a long time disposed to believe that all public questions are moral questions.

Glaucon: Certainly.

Socrates: The Puritans always did it.

Glaucon: Yes.

Socrates: This is, then, the reason why the President will not say what he thinks about suffrage, knowing full well that the women, who are inexperienced in these things, could not understand what his reason is.

Glaucon: No doubt.

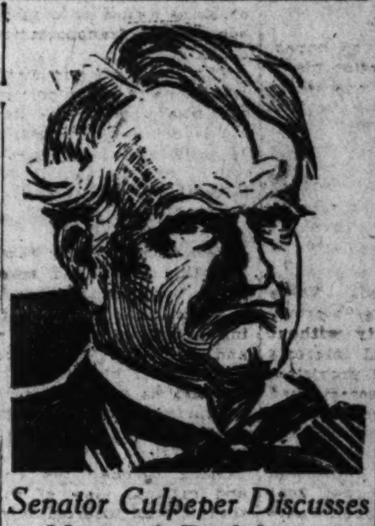
Socrates: He must therefore dodge them when he can, and look sympathetic but helpless when he cannot. If he asked the women if they would get the vote only to go out full cry after such things as hard drink and cigarettes, they would deny it. Nevertheless, he feels that this is exactly what they would do, and the country feels it, as well.

Thrasymachus: But is it true?

Socrates: I don't know. Probably the President doesn't know. All anybody knows is that we came that way when we started to vote, and it is hard to believe that the women are going to start in at the point to which we have progressed.

Glaucon: It is hard.

Socrates: Truly. Now, let us get a newspaper and see what our fellows in Mexico are doing.



Senator Culpeper Discusses National Prohibition.

By LEWIS B. ELY.

SAYS the Third Senator from Missouri:

"We in Congress are being bombarded with petitions from every congressional district in the United States demanding that we down the effort to amend the Constitution and make prohibition national.

"I would not even make prohibition local—much less national. I would not either amend the Constitution of the United States or amend the constitution of the American workingman by cutting off his beer.

"I am opposed to prohibition of any kind on principle, as a free man in a free country where we ought to have a political right to enjoy our natural rights so long as we don't abuse them or hurt other people. I agree with Jefferson that 'if we are made in some degree for others, yet in a greater degree are we made for ourselves. It were contrary to feeling, and, indeed, ridiculous to suppose that a man has less rights in himself than one of his neighbors, or, indeed, all of them put together. This would be slavery.'

"Last summer my no-account and dissipated hired man, Pevely Sadders, made a remark that illustrates the narrowness of the sumptuary reformers, although Pevely leans the other way. Jim Fullalove rode by on his bald-faced pacing sorrel, bound for home, with a side of meat strung on one side of his saddle and on the other a package of shoes, some calico, ticking, ribbons and a bandbox.

"'Them Fullaloves ain't got no sense!' exclaimed Pevely. 'Look at Jim Fullalove goin' home with a side o' meat and a lot of gew-gaws for the women-folks! I tell you them Fullaloves is wasteful fools—everything they get they put in their stomachs or on their backs, and I'll bet right now Jim Fullalove ain't got one quart of whisky in his house or a houn' dog on the place!'

"'Pevely Sadders,' said I, 'you exhibit the narrowness of the bigot and the meanness of the busybody. The next thing you know you will be wanting to reform Jim Fullalove and introducing a bill in the Legislature to make him keep whisky and hounds whether he likes them or not. You must allow a man to differ with you and your mode of living without branding him a fool or indicting him as a felon,' said I, 'or the country will be about as free and comfortable to live in as the county jail.'

"Nevertheless Pevely Sadders' remarks set me to wondering how the sumptuary reformers would like it if the other fellows turned the tables on them and gave them a dose of their own medicine."

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MILDRED.—To make auburn hair a shade darker: Hydrochlorate of pilocarpine, 6 grains; tincture of jaborandi, 4 drams; spirits of rosemary, 2 drams; yellow vaseline, 4 ounces; alcohol, 4 ounces. Rub in scalp thoroughly every night.

B. C. B.—One person finds a cure in sprinkling dry salt over the scalp and massaging. Another uses salt water with success, moistening the scalp two or three times a week. Another disheartened by the salt trial finds a panacea in cold tea, accompanied by rubbing the scalp with the tips of the fingers in rotary motion. A tea made of yellow-dock root is sometimes efficacious. Perhaps the great majority of failures in the use of any one of these simple remedies is lack of persistence in their application. A popular prescription for the arrest of falling hair and bringing new hair in sight on thin and bald spots consists of one-half ounce oil of mace and one pint deodorized alcohol.

CLEANSING.

HARRY POLK.—Try writing U. S. Consulate, Windsor, Canada, as to teachers in Canada. Try sending other question to Isthmian Canal Commission, Washington, D. C.

H. C. B.—To clean furs, Russian method: Some rye flour is put into a pot and heated upon a stove, with constant stirring as long as the hand can bear the heat. The flour is then spread over the fur and rubbed into it. After this the fur is brushed with a very clean brush, or better, is gently beaten until all the flour is removed.

DATES.

LAWSON.—The Greeks employed instrumental music in religious rites two centuries B. C. The origin of music is lost in antiquity. Among civilized peoples it is probably to be traced to the ancient Egyptians, who employed the art in their religious rites. From the Egyptians the Greeks and Romans derived their knowledge of music. The ancient Hebrews probably took with them to Palestine some of the songs they had learned in Egypt. The hymns used in the temple were the basis of the Christian melodies, and from these melodies was formulated the first authoritative musical system.

HEALTH HINTS.

CONSTANT READER.—See corn doctor.

READER.—As to length of time in any operation, it depends upon the operator. Varicocele is operated on under local anesthesia; it is better to use general anesthesia.

R. T. C.—Potassium permanganate crystals are rather severe. Usually a strong solution is used locally, and as an injection, for bite of poisonous reptile. We see no harm in using the crystals; whether they would be effective we cannot say.

C. O. G. E.—Poor circulation of the blood may mean bad heart action, which does not force the blood properly. It may be caused by anemia or impoverished blood. It may mean dilated arteries or veins. But more often than anything else it is an expression used to conceal ignorance of what is really the matter with the patient.

MRS. M. F.—Where rent has not been paid landlord is not required to give month's written notice to vacate.

A. W.—Cracks in stove: Make a thick paste by moistening litharge with pure glycerin and then use the paste to putty up the cracks.

MYRTLE.—"It happened to Rome and it will happen again," may have reference to the evils that may come to us through luxurious living, or by committing other sins of the Romans.

ED.—They are Indian runner ducks because they came from India. No difference in laying qualities of the different colors. Pond not necessary. Ducks are bad setters, and hens hatch many of the eggs. Indian runners are small compared with other ducks.

E. B.—To make a tent waterproof and fireproof: Rain water, 3 buckets, 4 pounds sugar of lead, 4 pounds alum. Mix thoroughly. Never take down a wet or damp tent. Mildew destroys tents and is always caused by heat and dampness. For ventilation make holes.

U. D. C.—We have no details of the battle of Tecumseh, Ala., or of the first flag of Alabama. A letter to the Adjutant-General of the State, asking for information, has not been answered in any way, although stamped addressed envelope was inclosed with request. Perhaps Alabama has no records that would answer you.

E. S. P.—Naturalization of an Italian citizen in another country, without consent of the Italian Government, is no bar to liability to military service. A former Italian subject under 20 years of age may visit Italy without being called on for military duty, but one between 20 and 39 may be arrested and forced into the service, if he has not previously served. After the age of 39 he may be imprisoned. We have no treaty with Italy defining the status of former Italian subjects who have become American citizens.

DORA.—To obtain a child from asylum, letters vouching for character from a physician, priest or minister. If these guarantee that applicant is fit person, then one is given. Principal St. Louis hospitals and asylums entering into this work are city hospital, Bethesda Foundling Home, Mothers' and Babies' Home, St. Ann's Asylum, House for Convalescent Women, Rescue Home and the various orphan asylums. Addresses of all these are in city directory, in any drug store. To legally adopt child there must be deed duly acknowledged and recorded. Cost would depend upon manner of adoption and party having it in charge—usually small.

MARTHA.—Washington party: The invitations were on square cards decorated with a pen-and-ink sketch of a Colonial dame. Each guest was asked to dress in Colonial costume and to bring her knitting. The hostess was garbed as Martha Washington, and the decorations were entirely patriotic—a tattered battle flag forming the most prominent portion of the decorative scheme. Patriotic music was furnished by several of the talented guests, while the small son of the hostess recited "Hats Off, the Flag Is Passing By." Slips bearing the name of some common occupation of Colonial times were passed among the guests. Each one was required to perform this task in pantomime, and the others were to guess what it represented. Among the occupations were given: "Making a Cherry Pie," "Spinning," "Planting Corn," "Weaving," "Gathering Cherries," "Sanding and Marking the Floor," "Making Candles," etc. This caused much merriment. A list of famous sayings were then passed about in the same way, each guest being required to give the author of each. "Give me liberty or give me death;" "I would rather be right than be President;" "Don't give up the ship, boys;" "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute," were among them. To the one naming the greatest number of authors was given as a prize a box of candied cherries. The table was covered with a white cloth, banded with flag-decorated tissue "runners." The centerpiece consisted of a potted fir tree 18 inches high, to which cherries had been fastened by means of a thread. At the tree's base lay the historic (toy) hatchet. The favors were tiny silken flags, and the place cards 3-inch cardboard hatchets, bearing name, date and occasion in gilt. The supper, which was served on old blue china, consisted of Boston baked beans, brown bread, coffee, doughnuts, butter and "long sweetening," and finished off with nuts and popcorn.

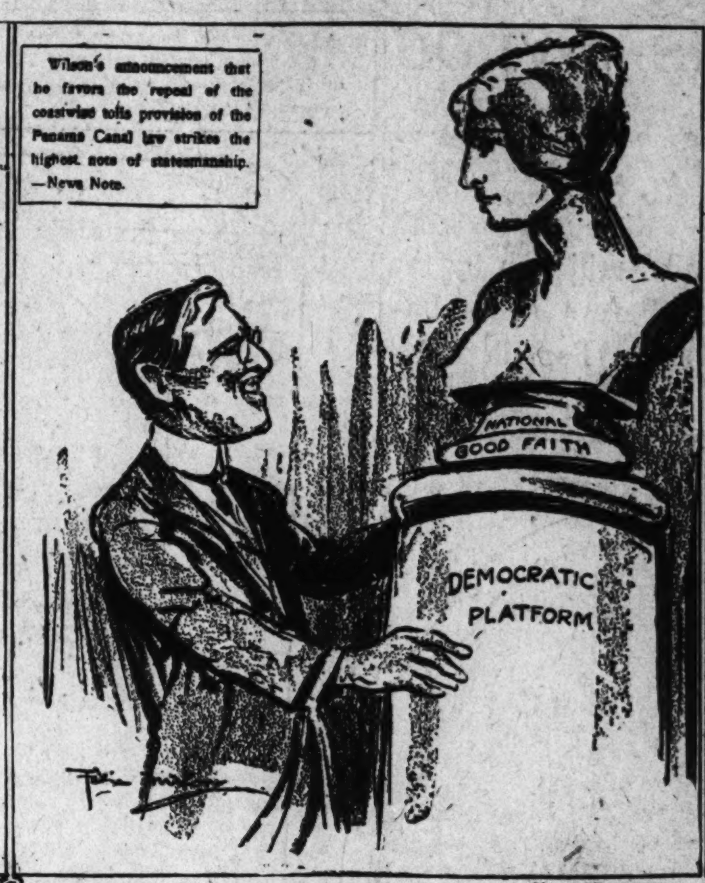
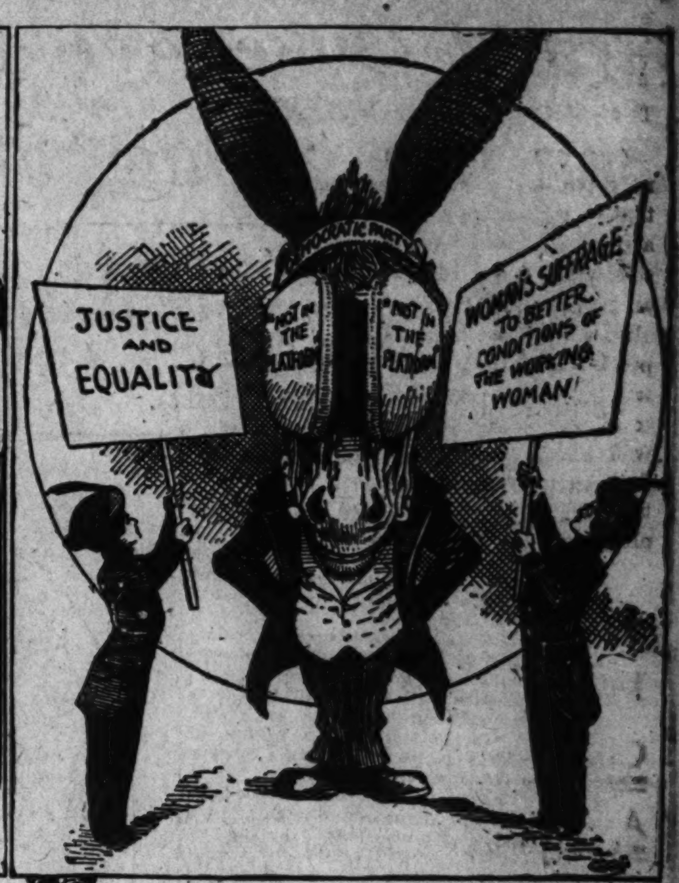
OR WORDS TO THAT EFFECT -FROM THE WASHINGTON HERALD



Wilson's announcement that he favors the repeal of the coastwise tolls provision of the Panama Canal law strikes the highest note of statesmanship.
—News Note.

PRESIDENT: "THAT IS WHERE YOU BELONG" -FROM THE WASHINGTON TIMES



BLINDERS -FROM THE LOS ANGELES EXPRESS

AMERICAN SHIPPING AND PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

AFTER President Wilson's assertion that he desired to carry out the promises of the Baltimore platform, the Democratic Congress now finds itself in the curious position of being asked by the President to rescind its action in carrying one of those promises into effect—that exempting American coastwise shipping from Panama Canal tolls. The bulk of public opinion, however, appears to uphold the President's position.

"Ringer" in Baltimore Platform.

Indianapolis News: We are, it is to be hoped, to learn how it was that the toll exemption plank got into the Democratic platform. No one seems to know anything about it, and so far no one has been willinng to accept responsibility for it. That it is utterly contrary to Democratic principles is clear enough. In another plank of this same platform, the Baltimore convention declared against a ship subsidy. How a party that opposes a ship subsidy can favor this Panama grab is somewhat hard to understand. For the latter is nothing more than a subsidy.

The President is right in his attitude. There has been a good deal of special pleading to prove, in effect, that we may break a treaty without breaking it. There are, too, powerful interests that will oppose repeal of the free toll provision. It may be, as suspected, that these interests had something to do with getting the declaration in favor of it into the Baltimore platform. What the American people are asked to do is to vote large sums of money to a greedy monopoly, for which they would get no return. It is argued that freight rates will be reduced to the shipper. There is no reason to think so. For in the coasting trade there is no competition that would force a reduction.

Convention "Made a Mistake."

Chicago Tribune: President Wilson in his reply to suffrage advocates placed a value on party declarations by saying that it was not his privilege to be spokesman for the party on a principle concerning which it had been silent. This utterance was regarded on one hand as a means of escape from embarrassment and on the other as a declaration of wise policy.

Now the President, advocating the repeal of the act exempting American coastwise trading from the payment of Panama Canal tolls, is asked to reconcile his statement of party obligations to his demand that the Baltimore platform provision regarding the exemption of American shipping be ignored.

Insofar as the criticism comes from the Democratic members of Congress, it lacks force and sincerity. Obligations to party declarations have been recognized by the administration more than by Congress. The "adequate navy" declaration of the platform hardly guided the Democratic House of Representatives.

Mr. Wilson's embarrassment will not be great. He can afford frankly to say that the Democratic party in convention made a mistake in declaring for the exemption of American coastwise trading, a mistake of such seriousness that it is necessary for a Democratic Congress to ignore the declaration. He can afford to take that position and to ask the Democratic Congress to sustain him.

"Welcomed" by Middle West.

Detroit Free Press: The Middle West will welcome President Wilson's opposition to the exemption provisions in the Panama Canal tolls bill. The so-called violation of treaty agreements is not the basis of this feeling, however. That phase of the prolonged discussion has never seriously troubled many minds in this part of the country. Most of us who have read the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and the canal bill of 1912 have observed that there is no discrimination in the latter against British or other vessels in the canal, but that the law reads, "No tolls shall be levied upon vessels engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States." If foreign vessels cannot secure the exemption it is not because of any inequality created by the law, but because long antecedent customs preclude foreign vessels from engaging in the coastwise trade. The protest lies against the antecedent customs, not against the law of 1912.

As an international matter no country but the United States has a word to say on the subject. But as a domestic matter the exemptions made by the energetic work of our Detroit Congressman in the last Congress have always been objected to in this part of the nation and as strongly here in Mr. Doremus's own city as anywhere.

"Country Indorsed Plank."

Cincinnati Enquirer: There is the plank in the platform of the Baltimore convention which reads as follows:

"We favor the exemption from tolls of American ships engaged in coastwise trade passing through the Panama Canal. We also favor legislation forbidding the use of the Panama Canal by ships owned or controlled by railroad carriers engaged in transportation competitive with the canal."

That is direct and distinct instruction to party leaders as to party policy, and not a voice in dissent was raised in the party's campaign in 1912.

The country indorsed that plank at the polls as decisively as it did revision of the tariff, currency reform, antitrust legislation or rural credits.

"Never Discussed."

New York Evening Post: The President is about to make a new and severe test of his influence with Congress. He has let it be known that he is against the clause in the Panama Act exempting American coastwise vessels from canal tolls, and will urge Congress to repeal it. Passing for the moment his motives and reasoning, consider the task he is setting himself. A first obstacle to be got over is the Baltimore platform. It roundly declared: "We favor the exemption from tolls of American ships engaged in coastwise trade passing through the Panama Canal." A large and rational view of this declaration would be that it was inserted into the platform by three or four men, that it was never discussed by the convention, probably not one delegate in fifty having even heard of it, and that it is absurd to suppose any such chance utterance to be binding on the party.

"Lessening National Self-Respect."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: It is unofficially given out in Washington, that President Wilson favors the repeal of that section of the Panama Canal act to which England objects as contravening the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. That section granted exemption from tolls to American vessels engaged in coastwise trade.

A decisive diversity of opinion exsts among the most eminent authorities in this country on this point. Richard Olney, ex-Secretary of State in Cleveland's Cabinet, holds that the exemption does not contravene the treaty. Senator Root, also an ex-Secretary of State, holds that it does, and has offered an amendment to the Adamson resolution (suspending the clause for two years) calling for the absolute repeal of the disputed section.

While there is much to be said for the contention of Mr. Olney and others that America, as builder and owner of the canal, should be supreme in operating it, yet there is a larger question involved. No mere Act of Congress—which is of purely domestic incidence—can override a treaty which has international incidence as well. Foreign treaties are of supreme obligation, and we cannot play fast and loose with them without incurring foreign distrust and hostility and without also lessening our own self-respect.

Congress to "Reverse Itself."

Washington Times: Congress is apparently getting ready to reverse itself on the question of free tolls for American coastwise ships through the Panama Canal.

President Wilson has demanded the repeal of the free tolls provision in the canal act and it needs no gift of prophecy to foresee that a large number of the Democratic members in House and Senate who formerly voted for free tolls will hasten to beat a retreat. The question will not be considered on its merits. For most of the Democratic membership of both houses it will be sufficient to know what the President wants done. Forgotten almost are the days when there were complaints at the Capitol that Roosevelt was guilty of unduly influencing Congress. With executive authority at its height and congressional independence at its depths, the student of government cannot help but feel that the Government of this country is undergoing a momentous change. Nor can he avoid asking what is the use of maintaining an enormously expensive machinery for legislative purposes, if that machinery is to lose its independence of action.

Arbitration.

The Independent. The inclination, not unknown among the American people, to be willing to agree to arbitrate anything and to be unwilling to arbitrate any specific thing, is thoroughly bad. The way to replace war by peace and the rule of might by the rule of justice among nations is by agreeing to submit disputed questions to arbitration and then submitting them. We are perfectly willing to do the former. We must not shrink from doing the latter.

CONGRESS AND THE PRESIDENT'S ANTI-TRUST BILLS

FIVE bills are now before Congress proposing to make effective the President's anti-trust recommendations. These are: An Interstate Commission bill; an Interlocking Directorates bill; a Sherman Law Definitions bill; a Trade Relations bill and a bill empowering the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate stock and bond issues of interstate railroads. These are sometimes spoken of by the correspondents as "the five brothers," in allusion to the "seven sisters," the seven anti-trust bills enacted in New Jersey during Woodrow Wilson's governorship.

"Needless Ruin."

New York Sun: Congress should not bring ruin and needless ruin to the business of our land by placing the proposed anti-trust measures on the statute book.

The "Outstretched Hand."

Los Angeles Express. If President Wilson advances with outstretched hand to meet big business half way; it is to accept a surrender, not to effect a compromise of the public interest.

Being Attacked.

Brooklyn Eagle: Although the Interlocking Directorate bill was classed with the trade commission bill as likely to "escape criticism," it nevertheless comes in for its share of attack.

"Should Be Prohibited."

Baltimore Sun: While there are certain kinds of interlocking directorates which are altogether evil and should be prohibited, we are frank to say that we have not yet seen any specific form of law drawn that will effectively prohibit these directorates and not work hardship to legitimate business.

"More Dummy Directors."

New York Tribune: This much too drastic bill will, if enacted, simply augment by thousands the existing army of dummy directors. "It is well to try to abate the evil of directors in one corporation selling to themselves or buying from themselves in their capacity as directors in another corporation. But the prohibitions of the bill go miles beyond that. They forbid a person to be a director, officer, or employe of a railroad company if he happens to be a director or partner in a concern mining coal or manufacturing railroad supplies, even if the railroad and the concern are physically as far apart as Maine and Hawai and never have done and never are likely to do business with each other. . . . Why not say that the prohibition against double directorates shall extend only to concerns which have business relations with each other?"

"Ought Not to Balk."

Salt Lake Herald-Republican: An administration that contemplates empowering the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise issuance of railroad securities ought not to balk at conferring equal authority upon its proposed Interstate Trade Commission with reference to industrial stocks and bonds.

"Has Not Confessed."

Washington Star: The trust power has not confessed the offences charged against it. It has not thrown itself on the mercy of the court.

Not All.

Pittsburg Dispatch: Do not imagine that the fight has ended because two, three or a dozen trusts have professed a desire to unscramble their eggs.

"Too Optimistic."

London Daily News: The hope that the trust magnates will co-operate in curbing their own power is too optimistic.

"Will Fail."

Philadelphia Ledger: It is an effort to dispense with the courts as interpretive agencies and will of course fail.

Foreign Relations.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Foreign relations are clearly to be subjects of existing debate in the Congress of the United States.

The policies of the Administration in its treatment of subjects arising out of international affairs are very apt to create issues that will be carried into political campaigns in the near future.

There are the never-ending troubles in Haiti, Santo Domingo, Mexico and other Latin-American countries.

AEROPLANE FLIGHT ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

ONE of the most striking events of the near future will be—if it takes place—a flight across the Atlantic in an aeroplane. At least one machine is being built for the purpose. The trip, it is expected, can be accomplished from Newfoundland to Ireland in a single day. The winner would get the £10,000 prize of the London Daily Mail and more or less fame. Another proposal is to make the Transatlantic trip part of the around-the-world flight for the prize offered by the San Francisco exhibition.

"Across in a Day."

Philadelphia Evening Star: Flight across the Atlantic Ocean is now being considered in a serious and practical manner. Glenn H. Curtiss, builder of aeroplanes, is building a flying boat in which to make the attempt and Rodman Wanamaker is supplying the funds which are necessary in large amounts, as the airship which will perform this marvelous thing must be far more than an ordinary one.

For one thing it must be much larger, in order to carry sufficient fuel, and its machinery must be constructed on stable lines which will insure a chance of success. The wings are to have 80 feet spread with a lifting surface of nearly 1200 square feet while the motor will be of 200-horsepower. The body of the aeroplane will be a boat capable of riding ocean waves for several days and the propelling force will be a tractor screw instead of a propeller.

To manage and direct this great airship two skilled and courageous airmen are to be got. One suggested is from the United States Navy and the other from the English Army. Both are famous for skill and nerve.

The idea is to make the trip from Newfoundland to Ireland in one flight and to do so with such rapidity that the flyers will arrive on the other side the same day they leave this.

"Between Sunrise and Sunset."

Boston Globe: Since Herr Victor Stoeffler, a German, has already flown 1340 miles in one day, Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, who is planning a transatlantic flight to be made in a specially constructed hydro-aeroplane equipped with powerful engines, seems to have a reasonable chance of achieving success.

From Newfoundland to the Irish coast the distance is considerably less than 2000 miles.

Somewhat surprising to the lay mind at this stage of the development of the art of aviation, however, is the condfient statement of the possibility of performing the feat between a sunrise and a sunset.

The velocity of the wind at an altitude of two miles, the professionals say, is more than four times the ground speed.

Assuming that the start is made in a 30-mile breeze with a machine capable of a mean speed of 60 miles an hour, the actual flying speed at the 10,000-foot level, they argue, would approximate 200 miles an hour.

If that rate could be maintained for 10 hours the Atlantic could be crossed, of course, between dawn and dark.

But, supposing the wind shifts, what then?

No wise aviator will attempt such an air trip over the sea without at least a gasoline supply for 36 hours in his fuel tanks.

"Too Good to Be True."

New York Sun: If it turns out to be true that Ingold, a German aviator, has flown 1000 miles without a stop in an aeroplane driven by a 100-horsepower engine, it would seem to follow that the passage of the Atlantic could be made with a machine equipped with a motor of double or treble the horse power, such a motor as Mr. Glenn Curtiss plans to install in the Wanamaker aeroplane. But the story of Ingold's achievement seems too good to be true. No one has made such a long continuous flight before with any machine now in the market.

"Chances Nine Out of Ten."

Chicago Record-Herald: Comment on the Wanamaker-Curtiss plan for crossing the Atlantic within a day might, of course, be deferred until the ambitious and daring project was realized, but details of the scheme are now so abundant and seemingly so well thought out that advance mention is all but unavoidable.

The crossing selected is naturally the narrowest—that between Newfoundland and the coast of Ireland, a distance of 1900 miles. The machine will be a hydro-aeroplane of a new model, carrying two men; flying at an elevation of 10,000 feet, with a 200-horsepower engine. It will be capable of making, with favorable westerly winds, a maximum of 200 miles an hour. The actual time of transit is estimated, however, at from 12 to 15 hours—a long summer day. Gasoline will be carried for 30 hours.

The crew of two will consist of an English army officer and an American naval officer, and both governments represented will be asked to station vessels at different points along the course. The general route is that of the ocean steamers, and an installation of wireless will put the flyers in touch with any liner within 100 miles.

Mr. Curtiss, the expert, assures Mr. Wanamaker, the backer, that the chances of success are about nine out of ten. Success, incidentally, would win the Northcliffe prize of $50,000, though the professed object of the endeavor is "in the cause of science and the interests of world peace."

Optimism is naturally "of the essence of the contract." The cause of science can scarcely fail to benefit in one way or another, even if failure ensues.

"America Taking the Lead."

Philadelphia Evening Telegraph: America, the land which produced the first aeroplane, is taking the lead in one of the most daring experiments in aerial navigation in undertaking a transatlantic hydro-aeroplane flight from Newfoundland to Ireland. The distance is 1900 miles and the prize list for the successful adventurer is already $55,000.

This sum is, however, a bagatelle compared to the fame of successful achievement which would cover the winner, his backer and his machine with international glory of an uncommon kind. Fifty-five thousand dollars would not cover the cost of the experiment, nor would it be of itself an adequate reward for so great a risk.

"No Theories in the Way."

Baltimore News: The turn which discussion of the Wanamaker-Curtiss plan to fly from Newfoundland to Ireland has taken is a forceful reminder of the status aviation has reached. There are no theories in the way of the project. It is a matter of mechanics, pure but not simple. The question of success seems to hinge solely upon Glenn H. Curtiss' motor-building abilities.

It is purposed to make the run of 1600 miles at an altitude of about 10,000 feet, the currents of the upper air being favorable to a speed of from 100 to 200 miles an hour. Flying at that height has ceased to be a novelty, even with two men in the plane.

Equals Atlantic Voyage.

Cleveland Leader: Bruno Langer, a German aviator, established a new aeroplane record last week by remaining in the air fourteen hours and seven minutes. That is nearly the daylight limit of all but the longest summer days.

If he had driven a fast machine at full speed for that length of time he would have covered about 1200 miles. With a favorable wind and flying in a straight line, he might have made 1400 miles. The aeroplane racing record is much above that speed.

"Incredulity Expressed."

Indianapolis News: The aeroplane race around the world proposed by the Panama-Pacific Exposition and the Pacific Coast Aero Club, with prizes of $1,000,000, is to be the next great effort in aviation. We can be forever proud that Americans invented the wonderful flying machine, although not proud of the feeble encouragement which we gave to it. France took it up and has so pushed it in theory and practice as to become the leading country in aviation. Vedrines's flight from Paris to Cairo points in the direction of still longer flights. But no one has yet crossed the Atlantic.

It is educative to note that incredulity as to the world flight is not now so freely expressed. There is less of unbelief than greeted the first announcement of the invention of a heavier-than-air machine that could fly at all. Such incredulity was pardonable because, until the Wrights, all that man had accomplished was an aimless flight by lighter-than-air contrivances. Zeppelin has since made such balloons dirigible.

The prize offer is called by the Brooklyn E[illegible] "the most amazing invitation ever given to [illegible] irrational element of the human race." There [illegible] a further suggestion that disastrous ending [illegible] such an attempt might actually retard the development of aviation.

Another question is, what practicable thing would be accomplished beyond the demonstration itself? The world has still to see the practical use of flying by land. There may be an addition to means of warfare in it. But the greatest hope of the world is to lessen warfare. Still [illegible] amazing offer for a world flight stands, and daring of man is stimulated by the thought of it. The result at least may be the further development of machines to make long flights, and it is in the order of human aspiration to remain unsatisfied until the attempt at around-the-world flight is made.

FOREIGN NEWS GATHERED FOR THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

Grand Duke Avoids Synod Ban on "King of Judea"

Constantin's Play Based on the Crucifixion and Forbidden by the Russian Church Censors, Is "Rehearsed" Before an Invitation Audience With State's Best Actresses in Female Roles and Soldiers in the Male Parts.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 14.—A "rehearsal" was given last night in the private Hermitage Theater of the winter palace of the Grand Duke Constantin's drama of the passion of Christ, "The King of Judea." The Czar was present at an earlier rehearsal and the invitation card which was sent to the Post-Dispatch correspondent made it clear that the spectators were the private guests of the commander of the Ismailovsky Guards regiment, whose dramatic club is producing the Grand Duke's play. Its public performance is forbidden by the Holy Synod.

The Grand Duke translated "Hamlet" into Russian several years ago and played the part of the Prince himself. He has published a volume of lyric poems, which were first read at the literary evenings of the Ismailovsky Guards Club. In the production of "The King of Judea" he has been helped, despite the Holy Synod, by all the artistic talent that is employed professionally by the Imperial academies. Glazounoff, chief director of the St. Petersburg Conservatoire, composed for the occasion special music which is an important element in the production. The beautiful scenery and stage settings are by members of the Academy of Arts, Messrs. Doubrovsky, Bondyreff and Okoroff.

The stage management was under Arbatoff of the Imperial theaters, and Kokin of Imperial ballet. At the feast in the Pontius Pilate palace, in the third act, famous artists of the ballet, headed by Miles. Schollar and Monakhoff, appeared. The women of the play were represented by professional actresses from the state theaters, but the male roles were performed by officers of the Ismailovsky regiment and by the Grand Duke Constantin himself and his two young sons, Prince Constantin and Prince Igor.

White Marble Theater.

The Hermitage is an amphitheater built of white marble and upholstered in red plush. On the floor are a score of gilt chairs for the members of the Imperial family. All the other places are arranged in semi-circular ascending tiers.

With the first bars of the opening music the great curtain showing the Imperial double eagle is drawn up, revealing a symbolic screen curtain on which is painted a network of thorns on a blood-red ground. This is shortly drawn down under the stage and reveals a scene showing the outer gates of Jerusalem.

Like all the decorative work in the production, the scene impresses with the sense of historic truth and artistic beauty. It took from 8 o'clock till 12:30 to play out the drama, but the eye never began to weary. Seated and standing among the gray stone walls and in the steep pathway to the arched gate are noisy groups of men and women. From their clamor there emerges short, angry speeches of the Sadducees and Pharisees disputing about Jesus Christ and the influence he is winning over the people. A procession approaches, headed by Roman legionaries guarding the Sedia on which is seated Procula, the wife of Pontius Pilate, borne by six Nubian slaves and with handmaidens at her side carrying great fans of peacock feathers.

Already Joseph of Arimathae (played by the Grand Duke Constantin) and Nicodemus (played by Capt. Tchigayeff) speak of what could be done to save Jesus from those who want to kill him. Joseph asks Procula to aid them and she fervently promises her help. There are loud sounds behind the walls of the crowd around Jesus, and Procula cries: "Quick, slaves, carry me out to see Him once more."

Scene in Pilate's Palace.

The second act is laid in the hall of Pilate's palace. The procurator of Judea (played by Capt. Gerchen) is robed in a white toga bordered with crimson. The women of his household and Joanna, wife of Herod's steward (an important part played by Mlle. Vedrinskaya), are already believers in Christ, and Procula is urging her husband to intervene. But Pilate hesitates. He gives less attention to them because he is agitated at tidings he has just received of the death of his own protector in Rome. A centurian enters and tells him that Christ has been condemned to death and that the Sanhedrin asks for Pilate's legal confirmation of the sentence.

In face of Procula's pleading Pilate is shown in turns moody and indifferent over the fate of Christ and he decides to send the sentence to Herod for confirmation; then, later, he orders that Christ be beaten, thinking that will suffice and might extricate him from his responsibility in the death sentence. All that failing, Pilate in the end washes his hands of all that is going on and yields.

In the third act, the first scene is laid in Joseph's garden, all flooded with sunshine. It is an important feature in the Grand Duke's construction of his play that wherever possible it is only the sympathetic characters that are before the spectators. The angry enemies of Christ are heard "off" from the high walls of his garden. Joseph and Nicodemus, with the gardener (played by Gen. Teploff) and Joanna, tell in outbursts of tragic emotion of the sight that they are witnessing beyond in the city but which is invisible to the audience. Great shouts and tumult are heard from beyond as Christ passes to Golgotha.

This scene is followed by a spectacle of revelry at Pilate's palace. His wife is very sad in spirit and Pilate calls for the Syrian dancers to amuse his guests. At the height of the revels the scene is suddenly blotted in total darkness, the music crashes and forked lightning flashes across the void. It is the moment of the crucifixtion. When the light returns Pilate, his guests and all on the scene are lying on the ground, stricken dumb with terror.

Sentry Reports Grave Empty.

The last act is in another part of Joseph's garden, where Christ's body has been taken to be buried. It is midnight and Christ's followers—Nicodemus, the gardener, Joanna and the young slave, Alexander—who dare not come by day, enter quietly and singly, bringing with them white flowers. They pass up to the hill in the garden. The sentry, who was posted on guard over the grave, comes astonished to Joseph and tells him that a star had fallen from heaven and struck the stone aside and that the grave was empty. Then Joanna enters, saying that she had seen Christ's mother and that Christ had appeared to her and said: "Do not weep, I have arisen." In the garden all break into rejoicing—"Christ is arisen." From the front of the stage a curtain screen arises covered with white lilies, where before the screen was of blood and thorns.

The card of invitation to the play contained a stipulation that there should be no applause. Nor would there have been any inclination to break silence, for the work breathed a wholly reverent spirit. It is in blank verse, penetrated with religious emotion. It would require much higher professional talent than the officers of the Ismailovsky regiment could claim to set in relief the dramatic and literary qualities of "The King of Judea," but some of them acted very well, notably Capt. Tchigayeff, whose whole demeanor had something chivalrous which greatly aided the sympathetic atmosphere of the play. The Grand Duke himself was an imposing and impressive figure but acted very quietly.

There can be no public performance in Russia because of the Synod's prohibition, and there is no intention to seek publicity outside of Russia. The Grand Duke is content with such publicity as his work has obtained in these "rehearsals." As for its place in Russian literature, it is already deposited in the archives. The Grand Duke's home life has been for some time unsatisfactory and he is starting this week for Egypt.

"MYSTERIOUS 20" CLUB THRIVES ON TANGO CASH

Coterie of Parisians Hold "Teas" and "Champagnes" for "Charity," but Never Mention Names of the Beneficiaries.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—The "Mysterious Club of Twenty," as it calls itself, which holds tango teas at Magic City Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons from 5 to 7 to which anybody may go who has $1 to spend for a ticket, and 60 cents for tea and which holds tango champagnes on the evenings of these days from 9 to 1:30 in the morning, to which anybody may go, likewise, who has $2 for a ticket and $5 for a bottle of champagne, held an enormous fete recently to which more than 1000 persons went at $20 apiece.

There are really only 20 members of the club and they are all men. The best known ones are Andre DeFouquiere, the Count Espierre, the Count De Jouvencel, the Duke De Le Pena, the Prince Narischkine and the Count De Heredia.

It is said by enemies of the members of the club that it makes a "scandalous amount" of money, that it is notable that it has failed to announce to what charity it gives receipts and that some of its members are rather without obvious sources of support.

Anyway at Saturday night's show there were two big orchestras, one Hungarian and one French, all the servants were in Persian costumes, the guests were magnificently dressed as Persians, even the men consenting to wear at least headdresses of an Oriental pattern, and the champagne came in floods. It lasted very late. They say that so much money was made out of the thing that there will be several more of them before the winter goes out. They may have them at Deauville next summer.

Andre De Fouquieres is said to be the real genius of the undertaking. A photographer managed to get into this ball with an assistant and got some pictures, in particular one of Andre De Fouquieres, alongside whom he stood so that the photographer's assistant would know which man to snap. There were a great many famous and lively persons present and the tango was of the best.

Fouquieres is the Paris dandy to whom the Duchess de Chambres, formerly Theodora Shonts, is said to be engaged.

AMERICAN EMBASSY OPENED TO THE YANKEES IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—Mrs. Gerard, wife of the American Ambassador, assisted by the Countess Sigray and Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, received the American colony at the new American embassy for the first time officially on Thursday. Nearly 800 guests assembled, partly to greet the Ambassador's wife and partly to inspect the new embassy. All the rooms of the first floor were thrown open, but the crush was almost unpleasant.

ROME GASPS OVER YANKEE WOMAN'S SUPERB BALL

Glories of Ancient City Revived at Record-Breaking Function Given by Former Miss Elsie Moore of New York.

ROME, Feb. 14.—Entertainments on a big scale require either unlimited wealth or consumate fitness in host and hostess to make them a success—and when both these attributes are present the result is doubly assured. This is true of the ball given by Don Mariano and Donna Elsie Torlonia (Miss Elsie Moore of New York), which will be remembered as one of the most sumptuous entertainments ever given in Rome.

It brought together about 700 guests, including representatives of nearly all great Italian families, together with the flower of Roman society in the world of diplomacy and letters.

The scene at the Excelsior Hotel, of which the whole ground floor had been reserved for the function, could scarcely have been matched, certainly not surpassed of its kind, in any other city in the world. It was a record breaking function, even in cosmopolitan Rome. The ball opened with the cotillon, led by the hostess' younger sister and Baron Morpurgo. The leading Rome journal—the Tribuna—had this to say of the fete:

"The wonderful shower of a thousand and one trifles—costly ones—lace sachets, gold cigar cases, emerald, pearl and ivory toilet requisites and a hundred different articles of fancy—were carried in a vast siliklined repository by Don Guido Antici Mattei and transmitted with stately tread to Baron Morpurgo, who, in turn, distributed them among the guests with a gesture recalling divine Jupiter falling in a golden shower in the white arms of modern Danae. * * *

"The last magnificent figure," says the same paper, "was that of Donna Maria Torlonia, who appeared radiant in youth and beauty in the sudden darkness which enveloped the room and who in her turn distributed rare and exotic flowers from an immense corbeille borne by two pages at her side."

Even the prosaic side of the ball, the supper, had its immaterial charm. In a vast conservatory, the walls tapestried with creepers, the floor strewn with flowers, over 500 guests sat down at once to tables laden with decorations and overhung with the blend of a thousand multicolored lights, partly revealed and partly hidden in the surrounding foliage. A rustic kiosk covered with ivy was reserved for the orchestra.

Birds of exquisite plumage fluttered free among the foliage and in an extemporized aviary at one end of the hall. In the adjoining salon devoted to coffee and cigars, two famous dancers gave an artistic representation of a very modern dance about which the Vatican and numerous Archbishops have recently have had their say—but the name of the figure was skilfully concealed.

The hostess wore a gown of pale lilac silk with silver brocade and a superb necklace of emeralds and diamonds.

Princess Teano had a magnificent costume of green liberty satin; Mrs. Courtenay Stewart and her sister, Miss Story, were among the best dressed women in the room; Princess Giovanelli's gown was of an "ultra-modern" but the Princess ranks with the Capitoline Venus for outline of form and allows her friends to realize the fact. Countess Dentice di Frazzo (Georgiana Wild of St. Louis), in her pale blue satin, with magnificent jewels, might also have challenged the mythological beauty. Of the elder women Mrs. Page, wife of the American Ambassador, looked particularly stately.

The invitation list included the names of nearly every historic family in the country; the ball took place on Saturday and the number of Sabbath breakers at 4 a. m. next morning was precisely that of the assembled 600 or 700 guests within the walls of the Excelsior.

Woman Places Her Hat Above People's Safety.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—"If you walk with your hatpin sticking out like that you will be arrested for murder some day," Judge Mackarness told a woman as she was leaving his courtroom. The woman replied, "Well, I must keep my cap on somehow."

All Royal Honors for Tiny Heir of French Pretender

Princess Clementine, the Mother Who Said to All Acquaintances "I Will Have a Son" Is Wildly Happy—All Formalities of the Birth of a Throne Heir in Old France Observed.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 14.—Both the new Napoleon and his mother, Princess Clementine of Belgium, are doing splendidly and the Princess acknowledges to those around her that she is the happiest woman in the world. Not only has she presented the Bonaparte party with a Prince Imperial, but she has won the millions of the Empress Eugenie, who is also singing in her poor, lonely heart a "Nunc dimittis" even though the tears still drop for her own son.

Princess Clementine had set her heart on a son this time—for the birth of the Princess Clothilde was a grievous disappointment to her. She was firmly convinced that she would have a son and not all the suggestions of those around her, fearing the trick that nature often plays on those praying for heirs, could prevail upon her to believe there was any doubt.

And if will power could determine the sex of a coming infant, the Princess Clementine may be said to have literally "ordered" a son from the stork. For she has persistently repeated during the long months "I WILL have a son" and even at the last moment, when it was whispered to her, so as to break the possible disappointment, "perhaps it is another little Princess," she cried, "It is a son; I WILL have a son!" and it was in her wild joy that a telegram announcing the arrival of the new pretender to the throne of France was sent to all the crowned heads just as though he were really the Prince Imperial.

Royal Formalities Observed.

His name has been already settled—Louis Napoleon—and his god-father is to be his uncle, Prince Louis Napoleon, Prince Victor's younger brother, who is a colonel in the Russian army. He is expected in Brussels for the baptism. The god-mother is to be Queen Elena of Italy, who will of course, act by proxy.

Everything was conducted exactly as if the infant was the son of the reigning Emperor of France, two Generals of the French army (retired) and strong Bonapartists being in the adjoining room at the time of the birth, so as to attest to the arrival of him who is to be known in the faction as Napoleon.

There is a suggestion that Princess Clementine may take the baby shortly to Paris. Prince Victor has retained a residence there, though he is outlawed, but the Princess has been in Paris since her marriage and it is not thought that the French Republic Government would be very severe with regard to an infant.

The layette prepared for the little Napoleon is a marvel of beauty in the way of delicacy and daintiness, with crowns and monograms on everything. If the new arrival had been a girl after all, she was to have put up with little Princess Clothilde's baby clothes, like other babies arriving second, but nothing is too good for the wee Napoleon and, as his mother was convinced about the sex, she had gone on steadily adding to and beautifying the things specially prepared for the expected son when Princess Clothilde appeared on the scene.

Prince Victor, the father, is pleased, too, but he has not a demonstrative manner. People wonder whether he is thinking of that other family of sons and their morganatically married mother, now in Italy.

CANNES SEASON IS SLOW; AWAITS "KING AND QUEEN"

CANNES, Feb. 14.—The season here is still hanging fire, and though there is a sprinkling of smart people already on the ground, it will probably be a month yet before the giddy whirl of last season is reached.

The Grand Duke Michael and the Countess Torby, the uncrowned king and queen of Cannes, have not yet arrived with their fascinating and indefatigable daughter.

Maxine Elliott looked in here last week, but found things so slow she left for Monte Carlo and the Swiss winter sports, which are this year more seriously than ever attracting the fashionable Riviera clientele. A. F. Wilding, the champion lawn tennis player, is here and very much in with the smart set as usual. He was playing with the Duchess of Marlborough and her two sons, who are manly, handsome young fellows, greatly interested in games and pastimes, and both quite good tennis players.

Mrs. Tiffany was here with the Duchess, who has also flitted to Switzerland via London, whither she had sent her sons back to school.

The Craig Biddles are very much to the fore and Craig expects to do big things in this year's tennis competitions. He practices tirelessly and Mrs. Craig is also tennis mad as ever.

Clarence Mackay did not find his way here during his very brief visit to his mother at Nice, but Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burns are in residence for the season.

KAISER WILL ENFORCE A STRICT COURT DRESS RULE

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—"Gentlemen entitled to uniform or diplomatic costumes or other official dress are required to attend court balls in knee breeches, silk stockings, shoes with buckles, long coat with lace. In future ordinary black evening dress with long black trousers will not be permitted."

This special order, issued by the court marshal on the Kaiser's specific instructions, was published in the German press before the court ball of Wednesday. The weekly press explains that the Kaiser dislikes to have the gay scene of the court balls spoiled by black chimney legs just as he insists that the women wear dresses cut low in front and V-shaped or round, not square. The court master of ceremonies is instructed to deny admittance to all Germans appearing in ordinary evening dress.

The only exception made is for the American Ambassador, who may wear ordinary evening dress because this is his official costume.

Exercise Now the Fad, Physical Culture Lessons Going With Dancing—One Woman, Lying on Her Back, Is Able to Lift Her Feet Until Toes Touch on Other Side—Walking and Skating Popular.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

EXERCISE is the thing now, and everyone is going in for it like mad. Walking, roller skating and dancing are the chosen forms that keep three generations of women and seven ages of man busy morning, noon and night.

Dancing we have discussed until the very name palls, but dancing keeps up just the same. The debutantes have danced themselves to shadows and many of the young matrons have danced themselves to a delightful slimness. Others, taking note, have joined dancing classes, not because they are possessed of the dance madness, but for the exercise, with a definite object in view, to reduce and to keep their figures, for too much riding in motor cars is fatal to beauty of face and form.

PHYSICAL culture goes with the dancing lessons, as that helps to make one agile, so at the signal, "everybody on the floor" down goes the entire class of women, many of whom are quite plump. Lying on their backs in bathing suits or bloomers, they lift their feet as high as they can. One woman, who is the mother of a boy almost as tall as she, can bring them straight over her head and touch her toes on the other side. Needless to say, she is the envy of all the rest of the class, which is made up of some of the most prominent names in the social register.

Girls Wear Walking Sticks.

WALKING has been a growing fad all winter, perhaps because it has been so free of snow and rain and until the last day or two, groups of two, three or four women could be seen walking toward Washington University and back at any time, any afternoon. Often they have had their children with them because the fad has extended to the little ones, too.

Interspersed are girls and their beaux, also walking in the most business-like manner. The girls wear their walking sticks—they are the fashion, you know—and they walk well. The slump is no longer seen on the avenue or in the park where many of the walkers strike across country. A free swing gait has taken its place.

The Jefferson Memorial is a meeting place, trysting place and resting place. The Missouri historical rooms are quite gay in the afternoons. Many stop just to say hello to Mrs. Eliza Boyd Ware, who is doing some work out there, or to see Mrs. Nettie Harney Beauregard, the custodian.

AND now comes the revival of roller skating. So it's walk to the old rink, skate for an hour or two, then walk somewhere for tea, then home. In the mornings the rink is given over to private parties and lessons, in the afternoon the girls and young matrons go, and at night there are lots of merry crowds of men and girls. "Rinking" is the thing just now.

HERE is a story that Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt of Cornell University told on himself while here last week:

He and George J. Tansey, who is a Cornell man, are great friends. Mrs. Tansey was to give a dinner or something in his honor, and he had occasion to call her up on the telephone.

"Is this Mrs. Tansey's residence?" he said, and the answer came that it was, so he said, "This is Prof. Schmidt," and before he could get any further the voice at the other end of the wire said in capital letters:

"Who?"

The rest went like this:

"Prof. Schmidt."

"Schmidt, is it? Aw, gawn, Schmidt, you know Mrs. Tansey's not here. She's at the schymfuny concert waitin fer yes to come fer her, so you had better stop your foolin' and get the automobile doon there fer her."

It took him quite a time to make his identity known, but he finally did, and the Tanseys got the message.

OUT in Pasadena, the Newport of the West, where nobody works and millionaires and heiresses just play all the time like people one reads about in books, a number of former St. Louisans have permanent homes and every winter other St. Louisans join them for the few months when the winter is on in dead earnest here.

There are Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cravens, who sold their first home, Ivy Wall, with its sunken gardens to the late Adolphus Busch, and who built another farther out on the same street. Mrs. Cravens was Miss Mildred Myers, one of the three daughters of George S. Myers. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Drummond live there, and so do Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pierce and Mrs. Manny Hodgman, and maybe others.

This year the St. Louis colony will be larger than ever, so large in fact that Pasadena will be like a bit of St. Louis transplanted, and Santa Barbara, not far away, will add to the impression, for there, too, are many St. Louisans.

Mrs. William C. Stribling, her daughter, Lady Peek, Sir Wilfrid and his brother, Granville Peek, who are spending part of the winter in America, are in Pasadena and with their party is Miss Frances Filley.

Miss Marion Howard went early in January with her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Flad.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Scott, went out last Wednesday. With them went Robert S. Brookings. Miss Margaret Wright, another of the season's debutantes, departed yesterday for that place.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Tower Jr., Miss Marguerite Tower and Mrs. Alfred A. Shapleight and her daughter, Miss Jane Shapleigh, who are making a tour of California, will stop for awhile in Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. David D. Walker, who have a home at Santa Barbara, went out the first of the year taking their debutante granddaughter, Miss Martha Pittman.

Mrs. Clarence Maloy and her two charming daughters leave St. Louis today for Santa Barbara for at least a month's stay.

Mrs. Daniel G. Taylor and her two daughters, Misses Jane and Grace Taylor, started to Santa Barbara yesterday to close the Whitelaw winter home. They will be gone several weeks. Mrs. Taylor's brother, George G. Whitelaw, Mrs. Whitelaw and her niece, Miss Dorothy Allison, are already there.

Miss May Scullin is in Los Angeles visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Benoist, who live there, and Miss Grace Hayes of Nashville, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Forrest Ferguson, will join her parents there next week.

HERE are pictured some of the girls who will take important parts in "Campus Mouser" Thursday and Friday evening and Saturday matinee for the benefit of Ridge Farm.

THURSDAY and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons everyone—socially speaking—who is not IN Campus Mouser will be looking on, for nothing for many a day has been of as much interest as this promising musical, dancing comedy that will be given the last of the week for the benefit of Ridge Farm, of the St. Louis Children's Hospital.

Campus Mouser continues to absorb almost all the attention of about 200 belles and beaux, young matrons and their husbands—for every afternoon and evening from now until he first performance Thursday evening at the Odeon, there will be dress rehearsals of the different dancing, singing choruses and the various scenes.

It was a big undertaking for a little handful of women—Mrs. John H. Holliday, Mrs. Sol L. Swarts, Mrs. James Wear, Mrs. John Gully Cole, and Mrs. Hugh McKittrick Jones, but everyone who was invited to be in the show simply went to work with such a vim that in a little more than two weeks the production, an enormous one, too, is ready to present Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday matinee.

It has been lots of fun and has entailed much hard work, but the rehearsals have furnished no end of diversion just now, when things in the social world are waning.

There has been a brisk sale of tickets and among the box holders are Messrs. and Mmes. Benjamin Gratz, J. Dwight Filley, Thomas Wright, Thomas H. West Jr., Joseph D. Bascom, Henry Elliot Jr., John Fowler, Oscar Johnson, John T. Davis Jr., Dwight F. Davis, George D. Markham, George W. Niedringhaus, J. Lionberger Davis, Samuel C. McCluney, Clinton L. Whittemore, J. C. Moore, Frank V. Hammar, Ray Carter, R. McK. Jones, Allen T. West, Harold M. Kauffman, Harry H. Langenberg, Hugh McK. Jones, Mrs. Henry C. Scott, Mrs. J. D. Goldman, Messrs. Walter C. Taylor, Anderson Gratz and Louis Werner.

Campus Mouser requires an all-star cast and the amount of material available when Mrs. Holliday marshaled her forces for the inspection of Miss Grace Gerrish, the author of the play, who is supervising its production, made selection easy. Miss Minnie Potter is the Campus Mouser, Prof. Catty, who is busy always with the affairs of others. Her song, "I Want Someone to Call Me Dovey," is one of the hits of the performance. Anna Benoist as Dorothy Davidson, "almost a star, is the chosen fair one of the college Adonis, whom all the girls in turn have tried unsuccessfully to interest. Susie Smart, a freshman, is Dorothy Farish and plays opposite to Charles H. Zeibig (Runty Short). A nice little bit of gossip in connection with this is that Miss Farish and Mr. Zeibig were childhood sweethearts and in the play they need but to live these days over again. Adaline Capen is "Society Star." Not a far cry, for as queen of the V. P. Ball of 1913, she has already been so declared. Virginia Foster is Cynthia Swift, athletic star. She can handle a racquet it is found as dexterously as she handles her own automobile. Mary Colt a nice of Mrs. J. Dwight Filley, the possessor of a beautiful voice, is Capt. GIRLS! GIRLS! YOU MUST TRY THIS! DOUBLES THE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

All you need is a 25 cent bottle of "Danderine"—Hair gets lustrous, fluffy and abundant at once—Destroys dandruff.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits, particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use of Danderine, when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.—ADV.

The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Elizabeth says: "I am troubled with a constant headache which also affects my eyes. My breath is awful, as I have a severe case of catarrh in the head and throat."

Answer: I receive daily hundreds of letters from people who have suffered as you do and who have been relieved with the following prescription: Make a wash by mixing one-half teaspoonful of Vilane powder, which you can purchase from any druggist in 2 oz. packages, and add to this one pint of warm water, use this in the nostrils daily to thoroughly cleanse them. A catarrh balm should be used with this. This is made by mixing one teaspoonful of Vilane powder with one ounce of lard or vaseline and apply well up into the nostrils twice a day. If this is used daily your catarrh should soon vanish. It should, however, be used occasionally to prevent a return of the disease.

"C. G." writes: "If you know of anything that will cure dandruff, itching scalp and premature baldness, please let me know what it is."

Answer: For several years I have prescribed plain yellow minyol as superior to anything known for the treatment of diseased scalp. Get it in four-ounce jars, with full directions. It quickly overcomes all diseases of hair and scalp and gives new vigor and intense natural color to the hair. Try it fairly and you will advocate its use for your friends.

"Mildred" writes: "I am constantly embarrassed because of the fact of my extreme thinness. I have absolutely no color in my face and lips and I am dull and lifeless most of the time. Please advise me what to do."

Answer: If you are so thin and pale and your lips and cheeks are colorless, it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles. This can be easily overcome by the use of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, which can be had from any druggist in sealed cartons with full directions for taking. When the blood is enriched by the use of these tablets your weight will increase, the color will come back into your face and lips, and it will improve your general system so that you will become strong and healthy.

"Edna" writes: "I suffer with rheumatism all the time and I shall be very glad if you can tell me something to relieve me."

Answer: I can give you a prescription which will not only relieve, but should obliterate your rheumatism. This is my favorite remedy and from the number of letters received from people who have used it proves it value in rheumatism. The following is made by mixing well, taking a teaspoonful at meal times and again before retiring: Comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; iodide of potassium, 2 drams; wine of colchicum, one-half ounce; sodium salicylate, 4 drams.

"Morris" asks: "I have suffered with a chronic cough for almost a year, and catch a fresh cold every few weeks. Nothing the doctor gives me helps, so I write to you."

Answer: You need a thorough laxative cough syrup, one that not only relieves [illegible] it from the system. The following regularly used will oust any curable cough or cold promptly: Obtain a 2½ oz. bottle of essence mentho-laxene, mix it with a home-made sugar syrup or honey as per directions on bottle.

"Anxious B." writes: "I have in recent years been threatened with appendicitis, but would never consent to an operation. Indigestion, constipation and sedentary habits cause me much suffering. Kindly prescribe for dyspepsia something which you think will cure me and prevent appendicitis."

Answer: The most scientific and satisfying treatment for your trouble is tablets triopeptine; packed in pink, white and blue in sealed cartons with full directions. Most stomach disorders can be conquered by regular treatment.

"Nervous M." writes: "Loss of sleep, nervousness, loss of appetite and overwork has made almost a complete wreck of me. I have to work, but can scarcely drag one foot after the other. Please advise."

Answer: The condition you describe is prevalent, especially with brain workers. Use the following: Compound syrup hypophosphites, 5 ozs.; tincture cadomene, 1 oz. Mix, shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals.

Farmer's Wife asks: "Will you please tell me how to overcome obesity?"

Answer: Obesity is burdensome. Excessive fat on the human body is unnatural and frequently results seriously. The best and safest method to reduce is to take regularly five-grain arbolone tablets. They are put up in sealed tubes with directions for home use, and any well-stocked druggist can supply them.

"Sara C." writes: "I am constipated and have a greasy skin. Suffer from headache, indigestion and some kidney trouble. I wish you to recommend a remedy.

Answer: The best remedy to relieve and master chronic constipation is called three-grain sulpherb tablets made from sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines. Taken regularly the blood is purified, the bowels and liver stimulated and health established. They are packed in sealed tubes with full directions. These tablets are splendid for children, as they do not gripe or sicken.

"Mamma:" I know of nothing better than 1 dram of tincture cubebs, 2 drams of tincture rhus aromatic and 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort. Mix. The dose is 10 to 15 drops in water one hour before meals.

* * *

"Mrs. G." writes: "I have many symptoms upon which you prescribe 'three-grain cadomene tablets.' May I, a woman, expect to find relief by taking these tablets?"

Answer: Yes, three-grain cadomene tablets are suited to any case of extreme nervousness where the strength seems to be ebbing away. They are tonic in action to a high degree and no ill person can take them without the greatest benefit following

Alice M. writes: "Something seems to be wrong with my system and I don't know what it is. I have huge puffs under my eyes, my eyes are blood shot in morning and my feet and ankles are swollen. Sometimes I have chills and feel weak and tired most of the time."

Answer: Your eliminating organs such as liver and kidneys are in need of treatment. Begin taking balmwort tablets at once. Get them in sealed tubes with full directions of any well stocked druggist.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Nemo CORSETS THE ACTUAL FACTS REGARDING ELASTIC FABRICS

These Facts, Madam, Are of Vital Importance

PLEASE READ THEM CAREFULLY—AND REMEMBER—

1. It is impossible to make a comfortable long corset of the present mode without using some elastic fabric to make it flexible and easy.
2. The life of a corset is just as long—or short—as the life of its elastic part.
3. The ONLY elastic fabrics ever made that can be guaranteed to give satisfactory wear are Lastikops Webbing and Lastikops Cloth, both Nemo inventions and used exclusively by us.
4. The elastic gores and bands used in other corsets (in imitation of the Nemo) are just the same old unreliable elastics—wear out in no time.
5. The dealer or saleswoman who tells you that other elastic fabrics are "the same" or "as good" as the Nemo is either ignorant of the facts or is wilfully trying to deceive you.

TWO FINE EXAMPLES

No. 512—Superb for medium and slender figures. Triple elastic reduction—and expansion. Style and comfort for the slender and medium..................$5.00

No. 327—The great new Duplex Self-Reducing, for full figures. Extremely long, supremely comfortable; low bust; (No. 328, medium bust) $3.00

BE A WISE WOMAN! Look into this elastic business. See that every piece bears the trademark "LASTIKOPS." Refuse all imitations, and thus preserve your figure and guard your purse. (B-17) Nemo Hygienic-Fashion Institute, N. Y.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE.—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Answer to "C. A. C.:" A sallow, leathery skin is inexcusable in this day and age and can be due to only one of two things: Negligence or ignorance. You can restore the skin and complexion to one of softness, smoothness and the color of beauty if you will be persistent and regular in the use of the gloriol scientific massage treatment, consisting of gloriol glowene, gloriol emollient and gloriol balm. These three are packed separately, but you should have them all for regular use. Full directions for using and massaging accompany each. As evidence of the value of this treatment, I could quote hundreds of letters of testimony if space permitted, similar to this of a very famous and beautiful actress: "Dear Miss Ainsworth: Frankly speaking, there is nothing in my estimation which equals your scientific massage with gloriol glowene, gloriol emollient and gloriol balm. I find it smoothes out the wrinkles and lines of the face and keeps the complexion and skin clear and pure if the use is consistent. I am deeply indebted to you, I am sure. Signed: Gertrude McCoy."

Answer to "Miss T. R.:" Having tried various alcoholic hair tonics and shampoos, and still finding your hair "coming out by the handfuls," and your scalp covered with dandruff, I am sure you will find the help you want by purchasing gloriol shampoo, and then make a natural hair tonic by dissolving one-half ounce of hairwand powder in a pint of soft, pure water. Use as directions with each package indicate, and I know you will be delighted.

Answer to "Mildred H.:" If you weigh 205 pounds and your height is only five feet eight inches, you certainly are "too fat" and I would advise a thorough treatment with five-grain phythyrin tablets, which are safe and reliable, being prescribed by physicians and considered the one dependable reduction remedy now on the market. Get them in original sealed tubes with directions inclosed.

Answer to "Anxious Mary:" Yes, a few superfluous hairs on a woman's face greatly mars the beauty if conspicuous. The electric needle in the hands of an expert is often resorted to, but I advise a harmless preperation called fluvol powder, put up in sealed vials with directions for home use. This can be used repeatedly without harm if necessary.

Answer to "Whole Family:" Your entire family being afflicted with dandruff indicates its dangerous, infectious character. There is but one reliable treatment that I know of and widely prescribed and used by physicians and professional hairdressers. It is known as plain yellow minyol and can be obtained in four-ounce jars with complete instructions for home use. It cures the dandruff and beautifies and invigorates the hair.

Answer to "Little Mite:" Those who are too thin, who lack color, strength and vitality, who are nervous and unable to gain weight are affected with mal-nutrition, and the best and quickest way to correct this condition, add weight, improve color and strength, is to begin using with your meals three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets. You can gain from 15 to 40 pounds by their use, and they are perfectly harmless.

Answer to "Belle B.:" Since you find the gloriol creams so entirely satisfactory, why do you not use the gloriol face powder? It is a very fine quality in pink, white and brunette.

Answer to "A Bad Case:" A yellow, greasy skin covered with pimples and blackheads can be cured by improving the condition of the blood. Take one-grain quinoxide tablets for several months, as per directions with each sealed packet, and this treatment will clean the blood and whiten and clear the skin. Bathe the body regularly and use the scientific massage which I often recommend.

Answer to "A Milliner:" Like many others, you wish to improve the appearance of your "straight straggling hair." I advise never using the hot curling iron, for it makes the hair dead and colorless, while if you will use gloriol wavelene, it will keep the hair in wave or curl for days at a time, even in damp weather. It is inexpensive, invisible and really improves the natural tendency to wave and curl.

Answer to "Actress:" Wishing to advance in your chosen profession you will be handicapped unless you improve your figure. Do not depend on pads and such false measures. There is a rare compound of oils, called medicated venseol, sold in sealed tubes with complete instructions, which is inexpensive and very certain to develop the neck, arms, shoulders and bust, if properly massaged into the parts daily. Nourishing foods, deep breathing and exercise are a great aid at any time.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Natural Figure

It is not straight up and down, hipless, boneless, spineless—the corset curves to just the extent that the correctly built woman is curved.

This is what the "Natural Figure" models of Redfern Corsets do.

They are light—do not forget that—but they are shaped and boned with the hand of an artist to delineate the natural—the perfect figure.

The leading shops are showing these handsome models. Ask to be fitted to one.

OUR suit chief with the assistance of our Eastern buyers has scoured the Eastern markets for the choicest qualities in sample suits—many lines were offered, but we selected only those that could measure up to that high standard we always maintain—and we now offer you this select lot of 176 of the newest and prettiest Spring Suits which we secured at an extraordinary concession and will place on sale tomorrow at prices that, under ordinary conditions, would be entirely out of the question.

Remember, these are sample Suits from the very highest class makers—and like all sample Suits, they are designed, tailored and finished with the highest degree of care, as it is from these samples that their orders are taken.

A Big Difference in Your Complexion in a Few Days

The Stage Has Never Produced Such a Sparkling Beauty As That of Valeska Suratt. Here Are Some of the Secrets Which Have Given Her the Beauty Fame She Now Enjoys.

By Valeska Suratt.

IT does not require the exercise of much gray matter to realize that beauty is not even "skin deep." The difference between your complexion and that of the "beautiful," petulant Mrs. Jones across the way, is merely a surface distinction. No class of women has any longer a monopoly of beauty. With even just a few formulas in your hands which I give you here you can acquire at a startlingly small cost, and for very little trouble, beauty even more transcendent than she who has "fooled and fiddled" for years at her dressing table with the ordinary low-powered creams sold in the stores. If you can understand fully this opportunity there is nothing on earth that can prevent you acquiring the superlative charm which has been your heart's strongest wish.

"It Makes the Skin of Face, Arms, Hands and Neck Exquisitely Beautiful."

These formulas you can mix yourself at home in a few minutes, and for only a few cents you can have a quantity far greater than you would get of any of the prepared articles sold at many times the price.

Here is the formula which makes the exquisite, satiny skin beautifier which has never had a rival for quick, splendid results: Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and one ounce of sintone in a pint of hot water. It will form a cream. When cool it is ready to use. The sintone will cost no more than fifty cents at the drug store. This cream should be used very liberally every day. It will remove every spot, freckle and blemish, giving the skin a marvelous purity and freshness.

TWO-SCORE—I know of innumerable instances of women even of middle age having spent months and months using various bought creams, face-steamings, massages, etc., with little result, and then, by the use of the following wrinkle remover, producing a difference of years in their appearance in a short time. The results are very striking, and no woman should be without a quantity of this cream. Mix it yourself at home, as follows: To half a pint of hot water add two ounces of eptol and two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. This forms a cream. When cool, apply regularly, every day, being generous with it. The eptol will cost not more than fifty cents at any drug store. This cream removes light and deep wrinkles, lines of worry, habit and age, and gives a very pronounced youthful plumpness to the skin.

MISS S. W. G.—The only way to have beautiful hair is to force it. You can spend a lifetime with the ordinary hair tonics sold trying to tease it into healthy growth, but the game is not worth the candle. Here is the hair-treatment formula that will produce astonishing results in a short time. It will also stop hair from falling. Mix one-half pint each of water and alcohol (or take one pint of imported bay rum if you wish) and add one ounce of beta-quinol. It is then ready to use. It is fragrant, cleanly and contains no oil. The beta-quinol costs no more than fifty cents at the drug store.

* * *

MRS. SORRY—Yes, it is very difficult to develop the bust, but I have known the following formula to produce very good results. Never use mechanical appliances on the bust. Massage is of very little use. Mix half a cup of sugar, two ounces of ruetone and a half pint of hot water. Of this take two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime. This is absolutely safe, and is the only thing that I would recommend. The ruetone you can obtain at the drug store for one dollar.

* * *

MISS HAIRY—Hair on the upper lip, and for that matter, on any part of the face, arms, shoulders, armpits and even on the tenderest skin may be positively removed by the use of simple sulfo solution. This does not burn off the hair and leave a burn or red spot as other hair removers almost invariably do, but simply dissolves away the hair. Simple sulfo solution can be obtained at drug stores for one dollar.

* * *

MRS. B. G. R.—You have probably never heard of anything that would remove blackheads in a few minutes, but here it is. It is always effective, produces no injury whatever. Get neroxin at any drug store for not more than fifty cents, and sprinkle some of it on a sponge, made wet with hot water, then rub it on the blackheads, large and small. They will promptly disappear.

MISS VANITAS—The removal of scurfy film from the scalp and from around the hairs at the scalp is absolutely necessary to hair health. The use of soaps is not desirable, as the latter usually leave a soapy film on the hair difficult to remove even by repeated rinsings. A teaspoonful of eggol dissolved in half a cup of hot water makes the most perfectly cleansing and delightful shampoo you ever experienced. You can get enough eggol for about twenty-five cents to last you many weeks.

* * *

MISS W. T. M.—What you need to remove pimples is a powerful, safe blood cleanser. I would use nothing but the following mixture: Twelve ounces of sugar and one ounce of sarsene dissolved in half a pint of water. One or two teaspoonfuls of this taken after meals will quickly put an end to all pimples and face eruptions. I have never known this to fail.

The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

Dolly: I made my faded "stringy" hair take on its natural color again and become soft, fluffy and brilliant by shampooing with canthrox, a teaspoonful of which I dissolve in a cup hot water. It gently, yet thoroughly, dissolved dust, dirt and excess oil, and when I rinsed it out, left the scalp healthy and pliant. Since my first trial I have used nothing but this.

Iphigenia: Yes, you can be sure of hair beauty if you give it proper care. Rid your head of itching dandruff by use of this economical, homemade tonic, which will make your scalp so healthy that the hair naturally grows long and heavy. Get an ounce of quinzoin at your druggist's, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol, add one-half pint cold water and rub into hair roots daily.

Antoinette: Instead of making over your gowns because you have outgrown them, why not try this harmless flesh-reducer? Get four ounces of parnotis from your druggist. Dissolve it in one and one-half pints hot water. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and you will see a gradual decrease in weight without loss of strength or sagging skin. It is simple, harmless and effective. Requires no dieting or exercise.

Miss O.: The "face cream without grease" which you ask about is easily prepared at home by this recipe: Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin; dissolve it in one-half pint cold water. Add two teaspoonfuls glycerine, stir well and let stand over night.

ANDERSON, Ind., Feb. 14.—William and Arnold Seipel, brothers, were passing along a street near their home after a sleet storm, when they heard a flutter overhead. They discovered a bluejay with one of its wings frozen to the limb of a tree.

The sleet was gently removed from the bird's wings and the bluejay soared away, screaming its thanks.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Optona. Fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Optona tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes on time.—ADVERTISEMENT.

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well-Known Politician, Nearly Bald, Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A Western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADV.

PYTHIANS WILL CELEBRATE ORDER'S 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Meeting Will Be Held at Third Baptist Church on Thursday Evening.

The fiftieth anniversary of the institution of the fraternal order of Knights of Pythias will be the occasion of a national celebration on Thursday. The chief event in St. Louis will be a meeting at the Third Baptist Church, Grand and Washington avenues, which 3000 members are expected to attend and which will be addressed by the Rev. Dr. William J. Williamson, Rabbi Leon Harrison and C. R. Lupton.

Sixteen of the 28 St. Louis lodges will participate. The members will meet at Pythian Hall, 2507 Pine street, and march to the church at 7:30 p. m., wearing buttons bearing the picture of the founder of the order, Justice H. Rathbone. The other lodges in the city will hold meetings at their halls. Open house will be kept at Pythian Hall during the day and evening for the entertainment of the members and their friends.

A golden jubilee will be held in Washington, the birthplace of the order, from Tuesday until Friday, and a number of the grand lodge officers of St. Louis will attend. There are said to be 12,000 members in St. Louis, and the Grand Domain of Missouri has 391 lodges and a membership of 30,000.

A $100,000 home for widows, orphans and dependent members has just been completed at Springfield, Mo., and will be put into operation March 15. The formal dedication will occur June 1, during the session of the Grand Lodge of Missouri.

The order was founded in Washington, Feb. 19, 1864. This was during the Civil War, and the purpose of the organization was to gather together the citizens in brotherly bonds and heal the wounds of civil strife. It took its model from the celebrated friendship of Damon and Pythias.

In half a century, according to statistics of the order, it has acquired 1,000,000 members in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Panama, the Philippines, China, Cuba, Australia and New Zealand. During that period, it is declared, the order has paid out $70,000,000 in benefits.

AGENTS SUE FILM FIRM FOR $11,000 ON CONTRACT

Local Dealers Ask Damages of New York Corporation Charging Broken Agreement.

Walter A. Wolf and George R. Dalton, composing the firm of Dalton & Wolf, general film agents, filed suit in the Circuit Court Saturday against the All-Star Feature corporation of New York for $11,000 damages for alleged breach of contract.

The All-Star corporation, according to the petition, contracted with the plaintiffs, Nov. 19, 1913, to furnish them with 12 films at $1600 a film during the ensuing 12 months, with an actor of repute starring in each film. The plaintiffs paid $400 on acount. They allege the defendant, after supplying "Arizona," refused to supply the plaintiffs with "Soldiers of Fortune." They say they already have lost $1000 and would have made $10,000 under the contract.

An attachment was issued in which garnishment notice is served on five express companies that are believed to have money belonging to the New York company. Attorney R. Taylor Young, representing the plaintiffs, says an injunction will be asked against anyone who attempts to produce the films contracted for by Dalton & Wolf.

MUSICIANS CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Only Four Members Survive in Society of 160 Formed in 1864.

The St. Louis Musicians Aid Association, founded Feb. 4, 1864, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at the Aschenbroedel Club, 3535 Pine street, last week with a banquet.

There were 28 of the organization, as now constituted, present. When founded 50 years ago, the organization comprised a membership of 160. Four of the survivors were present at the banquet,—John Boehmen, Ferdinand Gaertner, Valentine Schopp and George Zaenglin.

Gaertner, who is 82 years old, made an interesting talk. The toastmaster was Prof. Frank Gecks, president of the organization. Owen Miller, President of the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association was the guest of honor.

ASKS THAT QUAIL BE FED

Illinois Commission Wants Birds Protected.

The Game and Fish Conservation Commission of Illinois had in mind such storms as are now sweeping over the country when they announced their policy of establishing game preserves.

In keeping with this policy, they today called upon all sportsmen, farmers and other people interested in the conservation of game to take whatever steps they possibly can to prevent the perishing of game.

An hour a day, by persons who know the places frequented by game, devoted to the sprinkling of a little feed will save more quail and other game than is killed by all the sportsmen in the State, says the commission.

LUMBER CONCERNS ASK TERMS TO STAY IN STATE

Eight Kansas City Firms Fined in Trust Ouster Suit File New Motion

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14.—Eight Kansas City lumber firms that were named in the fine and ouster decision by the Supreme Court, have asked the court to permit them to remain in the State and to reduce the fines as much as possible. The court Wednesday denied a rehearing in these cases and gave the firms 10 days in which to settle.

The eight companies, all of Kansas City, are the Central Coal and Coke Co., the Bowman-Hicks Lumber Co., the Lufkin Land and Lumber Co., the Missouri Lumber and Exchange Co., the Missouri Lumber and Mining Co., the Long-Bell Lumber Co., the Dierks Lumber Co. and the Foster Lumber Co.

The Supreme Court found that the 25 lumber companies were operating in violation of the State antitrust laws and assessed fines against them totaling nearly $500,000. The fines levied against the eight companies making application today range from $5000 against the Foster concern to $50,000 against the Long-Bell and the Central Coal and Coke companies.

Milwaukee Shoe Strike Unsettled.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 14.—Charles Crownhart and F. M. Wilcox, members of the State Industrial Commission who arrived several days ago to act as mediators in the shoe workers' strike against the Albert H. Weinbrenner company, issued a statement today acknowledging inability to effect a settlement.

To Renew Complexion Without Cosmetics

(From the Dermatologist.)

If the excessive user of cosmetics only knew the impression her artificiality really makes upon others, she would quickly seek means of gaining a natural complexion. Let her acquire the mercolized wax habit, discarding make-ups entirely, and she will soon have the kind of complexion that women envy and men admire. It's so easy to get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, use nightly like cold cream and wash it off mornings. And the results are so remarkable. Gradually the lifeless cuticle peels off, in almost invisible flaky particles. In a week or so there's a brand-new complexion, clear, velvety-soft, of girlish color and texture. The treatment is so simple, harmless and marvelously effective, the wonder is that every woman whose skin is withered, discolored, rough, chapped, freckled or pimpled, has not already adopted it.

Let wrinkled women quit pastes and massage creams which mar the skin still more and try this more sensible treatment: Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel; use as a face bath. Every line will quickly disappear.—ADV.

DYNAMITE WRECKS NEGRO HOUSES; PLOT SUSPECTED

Several Persons Living in Italian Quarter of Kansas City Are Injured by Explosions.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 14.—Three explosions of dynamite that wrecked two houses and did other damage in the Italian quarter here early today are believed by the police to have been caused by persons who are plotting to force negroes out of that district.

Two negro women were taken to a hospital after a charge of the explosive had torn down the house they were living in. Their injuries were slight, it was said. In another house wrecked by dynamite a 4-year-old negro child was thrown from a bed and across the room, but was not dangerously hurt.

Considerable damage was done to property in the vicinity of the houses.

A negro woman keeping a rooming house near the scene of the explosions said threats had been made to put all negroes out of the neighborhood.

He was assistant surgeon on the gunboat Vandalia of Perry's fleet. After that cruise he retired from the navy.

EATING MEAT REGULARLY CLOGS THE KIDNEYS, CAUSING PAINS IN THE BACK

Don't fail to flush your Kidneys occasionally with a tablespoonful of harmless fruit Salts to avoid danger.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless, inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—ADV.

Rheumatism—SUCCESSfully Overcome in the Tissues by a Searching Remedy

If you are down with rheumatism; if you sneeze, feel chilled, are choked with catarrh, have a cough, or your skin is pimpled and irritated with rash, eczema, or any other blood disorder, just remember that all the ills of life come from impure blood. And you can easily give your blood a good, thorough cleansing, a bath by using S. S. S. There is no need for anyone to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities. No matter how badly they attack the system, or how unsightly becomes the skin, just remember there is one ingredient in S. S. S. that so stimulates the cellular tissues throughout the body that each part selects its own essential nutriment from the blood.

This means that all decay, all breaking down of the tissues, is checked and repair work begins. S. S. S. has such a specific influence on all local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and afford a proper relative assistance to each other. More attention is being given to scientific medicine than ever before and S. S. S. is the highest achievement in this line. For many years people relied upon Mercury, Iodide of Potash, Arsenic, "Physics," Cathartics and "Dope" as remedies for blood sickness, but now the pure vegetable S. S. S. is their safeguard.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. And you should take no chances by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Co., 301 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

IRRITATING AND DISFIGURING PIMPLES

On Face, Also Blackheads. Pimples Red and Inflamed. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 2, Advance, Mo.—"I had a very bad case of pimples on my face which were very troublesome, as they would get sore and would leave red spots where they healed. I also had blackheads in my skin. The pimples were red and inflamed and would come to a head. They would run yellowish pus and each one had a hard core-like lump in it. They were very irritating and disfiguring.

"I was troubled with them six months and had tried several remedies which did no good. Cuticura Soap and Ointment did the work. I would wash my face with the Soap and hot water then apply the Ointment. In about half an hour I would wash again with the Soap. In two months I was cured and the red spots have gone." (Signed) Miss Ollie Richmond, Oct. 17, 1913.

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to these qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Grand Opera Season ☙ Tango in Drama ☙ St. Louis Playbills

SEASON SALE FOR OPERA OPENS TO PUBLIC ON MONDAY

Persons Desiring Good Seats Should Act Promptly in Making Their Reservations.

BIG SUBSCRIPTION SALE

Indications Now Point to One of the Most Successful St. Louis Engagements.

The public sale of season tickets for the engagement of the Philadelphia-Chicago Grand Opera Company at the Odeon, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 16, 17 and 18, will begin at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's, Stix, Baer & Fuller's, Famous-Barr and Nugents' tomorrow morning.

Cleofonte Campanini will conduct the four performances, three evening and one matinee.

A large majority of season subscribers in former years have renewed their subscriptions and, with the limited capacity of the Odeon, which has about half the seating capacity of opera houses in other large cities visited by the Philadelphia-Chicago company, all persons who are particular about the location of their seats will do well to make their selections immediately.

The operas to be presented have been chosen by the subscribers themselves and represent the preferences of a large number of St. Louis music lovers, who are well qualified to express a wise choice of the works included in the Philadelphia-Chicago company's repertoire.

Great Singers to Be Heard.

Three of the greatest artists in their respective lines will appear at these performances.

Titta Ruffo, the world's greatest baritone, who possesses a voice of unusual compass, power and quality, together with impressive dramatic power, will be heard in the title role of Verdi's "Rigoletto," which gives him splendid opportunity both as a singer and an actor.

Florence Macbeth, who will sing the role of Gilda in this opera, is a young American prima donna who rapidly is establishing for herself an enviable place among coloratura sopranos.

Mary Garden, who will sing Floria Tosca in Puccini's "La Tosca," is world-famous in that role. It has given her one of her greatest triumphs in Paris and it is looked upon as one of the most perfect impersonations in the large repertoire of this remarkable artist.

Richard Wagner's great consecrational music-drama "Parsifal," will be given. It is now creating a furore all over Europe, where, for the first time outside of Bayreuth, it is being performed. The cast as already announced by the Philadelphia-Chicago company insures one of the finest performances of this work ever given, not even excepting its Bayreuth productions.

The St. Louis Grand Opera Committee takes great pleasure in announcing these three operas. The fourth has not yet been selected, it being decided to obtain more extensive information regarding the wishes of the St. Louis public, which at present seem to be about equally divided between "Aida" and "Madama Butterfly."

A Great Success Indicated.

The opera committee is justly proud of its four years of unqualified success in bringing to St. Louis a grand opera company in repertoires of the highest artistic value. At a time when the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York was losing money in every other city on its tours, its Coliseum performances in St. Louis were financially as well as artistically successful, and to an exceptional degree. This is a record of which St. Louis may well be proud, and there is reason to believe that it will be duplicated this year.

The Philadelphia-Chicago Grand Opera Company is closely affiliated with the Metropolitan company of New York and is at present producing one opera of its repertoire in the Metropolitan Opera House, on Tuesday evening of each week. During the remainder of the week it is playing its regular spring engagement in Philadelphia. Last Tuesday night, in New York, Charpentier's "Louise" was the offering, with Mary Garden as Louise, Charles Dalmores as Julien and Hector Dufranne as the Father, and with Cleofonte Campanini conducting.

Oliver Morosco will add to New York's oversupply of new theaters by building another Broadway playhouse for his productions. "Auction Pinochle," an Americanized version of a musical comedy by Paul Herve, Jean Briquet and Adolf Philipp, will be the first offering.

Richepin's "Le Tango" Tells of Love Born to Married Pair During New Dance

Latest Drama by Famous French Playwright Depicts Curious Emotional Effect of Present-Day Ballroom Divertisement—Awakens "Intellectual" Twain to Ardent, Though Long-Deferred, Affection—Play's Last Curtain Falls on Darby and Joan Happily Tangoing — Other Footlight News.

"The Dawn of Love," Another Tango Dance - Feature in Paris, Showed Adam and Eve Tripping the Light Fantastic, in the Garden of Eden and Was Suppressed by the Authorities—Francois de Curel's Morbid Drama, "La Danse Devant le Miroir," Tells an Ibsenesque Story of Futile Character.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

NO less distinguished a playwright than Jean Richepin, one of the Forty Immortals of the French Academy, now has utilized in drama the worlds craze for extravagant dances and made this psychologically curious development the dominating feature of a serious stage story.

Richepin thus proves himself a pronounced modern of the moderns in "Le Tango," a three-act play recently produced at the Athenee in Paris and received with its proper due of relishful interest by the Parisian play-going public. According to the plot of his latest work, the most famous dance of the present generation must be reckoned with as a potent factor in shaping human destinies by means of its appeal to the emotions through its irresistible effect upon the senses.

"Le Tango" tells the story of Zizi de Lucignan, aged 19, and Marie-Therese, his wife, aged 17, a youthful couple, who seem at first amazingly unresponsive to the ardent magnetism of Love's young dream. They belong to the "Intellectual" cult of today, philosophic, a bit cynical in their attitude toward life, overly fond of reading "advanced' books and of indulging in long-winded conversations airing their respective views on the problems of twentieth century existence. So engrossed are they in these "high-brow" diversions, indeed, that they live together as brother and sister might, almost supernatural in their devotion to the things of the mind and in their scornful indifference to so earthly and merely material a thing as the body.

That is, according to the somewhat incredible showing of the Richepin drama, in which they live thus until one eventful evening, when it so chances that they cannot escape a seeing of the tango as it happens to be danced at a function of their attending. They are much attracted toward the new and strange measure. It fascinates them. They decide to essay it themselves. So, young husband and young wife, they do essay it. And, suddenly, during the course of the essayal, mutual love is born in their hearts and they become human beings instead of mere thinking-machines. This is the denouement of M. Richepin's extremely contemporaneous play—and the curtain falls upon Zizi de Lucignan and his Marie-Therese happily dancing the tango in one another's arms.

Mlle. Lavaillere is cast in the masculine role of Zizi and Mlle. Spinelli is the Marie-Therese of the production. A Paris review of the play's first-night performance tells us that their tangoing achievement was a charming sight to see.

Not so discreetly proper in its effect upon its beholders or participants, however, do the Paris authorities seem to have considered a certain dancing act entitled in kindred vein, "The Dawn of Love," which was produced in the French capital not long ago and shortly afterwards withdrawn under official compulsion.

In this now forbidden act, presented by Mlle. Simone de Beryl and M. Emile Agoust, the daring assumption was maintained, not only that Adam and Eve felt the dancing impulse in the Garden of Eden, but that the world's first Tango then and there was born. No information is given as to whether or not old Satan had a hand—or foot—in this Edenic premiere. But, judging from the fact that its reproduction has now so shocked even the Parisian sense of decency as to cause the placing of the Great Taboo upon its further continuance, it must be that his Infernal Majesty at least "thought-waved" the idea into naughty Mother Eve's head. Indeed, one may easily believe that the soul-stealing old rascal himself blithely shook his own cloven hoof and waved his forked tail in the original Tango with Eve, bidding her then teach it to Adam, thus making doubly sure his fiendish assurance of the human race's downfall. At any rate, as danced by Eve in her fig-leaf and Adam in whatever was the Paradise equivalent for man's evening clothes of the present day, this Tango of the Garden proved too much for Paris—and it must have been truly devilish, you know, to have done that.

JOHN DREW'S leading woman and musical revue star now appearing in St. Louis.

LAURA H. CREWS

ADA LEWIS

Whereupon Mlle. Simone de Beryl and M. Emile Agoust promptly substituted another act called "La Danse Ivette," in which, it is stated, "the sensational moment is reached when the jealous lover rushes madly up to Ivette and tears off her clothes." And the disturbing announcement now is made that William Hammerstein has bought the American rights of this Ivette-stripping "thriller" and that his Victoria Theater will be the New York scene of its first staging in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

'Strikingly — and grewsomely — unlike these recent offerings on the Parisian stage is M. Francois de Curel's new play, "La Danse Devant le Miroir," a the Ambigu, once the home of French melodrama, but now devoted to the presentation of life's problems, after the fashion of Ibsen, in the form of drama more or less morbid.

It is this play's preachment that "one does not admire whom one loves; one merely looks at one's own ideal, which the loved one, to please you, tries as well as possible to copy. When two lovers are perfectly in love, each one sees himself or herself in a mirror, thinks that the image is that of the other, and gazes raptly at himself or herself, and thus, always, love is only 'dancing before a looking-glass.'"

Well, here's the story told in illustration of the text. Regine, a kind of Hedda Gabler, yearns for the greatly moving experiences of life. Paul, her sweetheart, plays into her hands. Both are unwholesomely introspective. Paul so contrives that he is represented to Regine as a ruined adventurer who has once attempted suicide and who now, nobly, is unwilling that she, a rich woman, shall support him. Regine causes Paul to believe that she once loved not wisely but too well and that now she seeks a husband who will give his name to the child born of that love. Thus masquerading, both pose to their heart's content, each theatrically "feeding" the other's pose. And they marry—Regine to discover that Paul is an honest gentleman, comfortably placed in life, and Paul to discover that Regine is a pure woman with the first of her offspring still to be born. Upon which, quite a la Ibsen, Paul suddenly is obsessed with the fear that he can never live up to the high ideal which now Regine has formed of him, and so, while her arms are about him, he takes a pistol out of his pocket and shoots himself dead.

The play is characterized by one reviewer as being an exposition of extraordinary deftness in subtle sentimentality. A more brief and truthful characterization is found in the one little word, "rot." Even the reviewer just quoted complains at the last that it all seems rather useless, thinly drawn and tiresomely tangled. And this itself, I take it, means "rot" in the final analysis.

The most important theatrical event of the past week in New York was the William Faversham production of "Othello" at the Lyric Theater last Tuesday evening, Faversham appearing as Iago, with R. D. MacLean in the title role.

Not being entirely confident in my own thought as to Faversham's artistic equipment for a successful portrayal of the most subtly drawn and profoundly malevolent figure in all Shakspearean drama, I had looked forward to this new venture of his with something of apprehension. The demonstrated truth, however, seems to indicate that his Iago is a distinctly valuable creation, not likely to suffer by comparison with the interpretations of earlier and more famous stars of the classic stage. "Here was an Iago," writes Louis de Foe in the New York World, "whose beguiling of Othello was at all times plausible. Here was a villain, implacable and black, grim and treacherous, a lover of evil for its own sake, who appealed to the beholder as human and true. Mr. Faversham clothed the lithe, ingratiating monster. He gave the character distinction. He embodied it with grace. He made it relentless. It was the ascendancy of a master mind over a weaker, trustful nature, which could be warped to the purposes of the stronger will. From the facile realization of Iago by Mr. Faversham this new performance of the tragedy draws its most powerful interest."

The Othello of MacLean's picturing seems not to have been so worthy, and it is especially charged that his delivery of the lines in the Venetian Council chamber, justifying his elopement with Desdemona, and also in the "farewell" speech of immortal pathos, destroyed much of their high poetic beauty. Cecilia Loftus is declared to have "brought the requisite gentleness and tenderness to a Desdemona who was as blond as tradition demands,' and Constance Collier is pronounced effective as the Emilia of coarser fiber. The Cassio of Pedro de Cordoba's picturing is said to have been a fine denotement of Iago's unconscious dupe.

BIRDS OF A RARE FEATHER.

Georgie Caine who plays Myrianne in "Adele" has a hat on which are several beautiful feathers. She also has a maid, and the latter recently became very much interested in the feathers.

"What kind are they, Miss Caine?" she asked.

"Paradise bird feathers," replied the actress.

The next day the maid spent the afternoon downtown. When she returned she sought out Miss Caine.

"Where did you get those feathers, if you don't mind saying:" she asked.

"Why?" the actress queried, "I've been trying to buy some of the same kind," explained the maid. "I went to about a dozen stores today and not a one of them had paralyzed bird feathers."

Marie Chambers, heralded as a new stage beauty, and who won fame as such in "The Honey Bee," will be a member of Mrs. Fiske's company when the latter begins her annual New York engagement in a new play soon to be announced.

William H. Crane and Douglas Fairbanks, now jointly featured in an up-to-date version of "The Henrietta," are to be co-stars for five years in revivals of old English comedies.

JOHN DREW COMES IN DOUBLE BILL TO OLYMPIC NOW

"Tyranny of Tears" and "The Will" His Offerings—"Honeymoon Express," Shubert.

JOHN DREW, in "The Tyranny of Tears" and "The Will." Olympic. The former, a clever comedy by Haddon Chambers, its central figure a husband who, in desperation, assists in curing his wife of the weeping habit, first was presented here, with Mr. Drew as its star, some 13 years ago.

The second named piece is a new playlet by Sir James M. Barrie, described as a poignant tragedy in three scenes, in which Mr. Drew depicts one and the same character in three vital crises of his life—first as a young buoyant, optimistic soul, then in sober middle age, and finally as an old, greatly prosperous, yet cynical man, disappointed in his children and in the savor of his success, tired and embittered. Mr. Drew is said to give a powerfully dramatic interpretation of this wide-ranging part.

Laura Hope Crews is his leading woman, and the Charles Frohman Company also includes Mary Boland, Sidney Herbert, Hubert Druce and Ernest Lawford.

"THE HONEYMOON EXPRESS," Shubert. A big New York Winter Garden success of mirth and melody, with Al Jolson leading its fun-makers.

Its plot concerns one Henri Dubonet and his wife, Yvonne, from whom he is divorced just before learning that he has fallen heir to a fortune on the condition that he must have a wife. Yvonne learns of this, too, and the story's diverting action then arises from her pursuit of Henri, who is speeding to "Gay Paree" on the Honeymoon Express, Yvonne herself breaking all anti-speed laws in an automobile. This race is shown with many novel stage effects. The book and lyrics of the play are by Joseph W. Herbert, the score by Jean Schwartz.

The original company appearing with Mr. Jolson includes Melville Ellis, Juliette Dika, Ada Lewis, Anna Wheaton, Marie Fenton, Doyle and Dickson, Donald Macdonald, Ethel Rose and others, also a chorus of nearly 70 singers and dancers.

"OFFICER 666," American. Return engagement, and for the first time at popular prices, of Augustin MacHugh's successful farce-comedy along "detective drama" lines. Its central figure is a gentleman-burglar whose activities run to the theft of old paintings, and it is rich in swift movement, humorous incident and sudden surprises.

VAUDEVILLE, Columbia. Bill headed by Gertrude Hoffmann and a big company in a dance-revue presented with 10 elaborate scenes. Miss Hoffmann also will give impersonations of famous stage people.

VAUDEVILLE, Hippodrome. Bill headed by Evelyn's Wild Animals, presenting lions, tigers, leopards, wolves and other fierce beasts in a thrilling act.

VAUDEVILLE, Grand. Bill headed by Grace Thurston, Harry Shannon and company in a tabloid version of "The Tenderfoot," a musical comedy in which Richard Carle scored a big success.

ROSELAND GIRLS, Standard. Will present "Society a la Carte," with Sollie Ward and Eddie Swartz as leading comedians and Lillian Fitzgerald as prima donna; also clever vaudeville, with Sultana in a dancing act.

BROADWAY BELLES, Gayety. Will present two bright burlettas, with capable company of comedians, singers and dancers and a big chorus. Many novel mechanical and electrical effects. Entertaining vaudeville.

PHOTOPLAYS, New Grand Central. John Barrymore in "An American Citizen." Staged for the Famous Players' Film Company, under direction of Daniel Frohman. Excellent musical program.

VAUDEVILLE. Princess. Bill headed by original Knickerbocker Four in song numbers.

VAUDEVILLE. Shenandoah. Bill headed Sunday night by the Boris Fridkin Troupe of Russian dancers and singers. Complete change of bill Monday night.

PHOTOPLAYS. Juniata. New picture dramas, also Pathe Weekly on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

VAUDEVILLE. Park. Monday night's bill headed by Johnny Fogerty and others in tango, Argentine maxixe, hesitation and other dances. Sunday night's bill headed by Louise Mayo, soprano.

SEGURA-TALLIEN, FAMOUS BARITONE, HEARD HERE SOON

Spanish Singer Comes as One of the Canadian Opera Company's Leading Stars.

St. Louis will discover a very notable baritone in Jose Segura-Tallien when the National Opera Company of Canada appears at the Odeon for four performances beginning Monday evening, March 2.

Segura-Tallien made his American debut this season on the occasion of the first performance of the National Opera Company at His Majesty's Theater, in Montreal, Nov. 17. He is a Spaniard who began his career with the Wagnerian Society in Spain, studying Wagnerian opera, and afterward made his Italian debut at La Scala, in Milan, singing in "Louise," under Toscanini, on his first appearance.

Later he sang at the Moscow opera, at the opera in Buenos Ayres and again at La Scala in Milan.

He now has a repertoire which embraces more than forty operas, including all of Verdi's and nearly all of the other great Italian and French operas. "Thais," "Louise," "Carmen," "Othello," "Rigoletto," "I Pagliacci," "La Tosca" are perfectly familiar to Senor Segura-Tallien. The Spanish baritone has not yet been heard in New York. He will make his first Chicago appearance immediately following the St. Louis engagement.

POP the question. See Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor, 308 N. 6th st., about the diamond engagement ring on easy credit terms.

New York soon is to have three new motion picture theaters, one owned by George Kleine and Cohan & Harris, just west of the New Amsterdam Theater on Forty-second street; the Strand, at Forty-seventh and Broadway, and one owned by Felix Isman at Forty-eighth and Broadway.

THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay-there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat-producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson Co., Weipert Drug Co., Raboteau, Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and other leading druggists in St. Louis and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.—ADV.

LOOK YEARS YOUNGER! GRAY HAIR DARKENED BEAUTIFULLY WITH SAGE TEA

Just Comb or Brush it in—Says Sage and Sulphur Will Stop Falling Hair and Remove Dandruff.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, then left to age and carefully filtered will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggy and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally; so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and it surely helps folks appear years younger.—ADV.

How President Plundered Bank

sion, taking a farewell glance at the comfortable surroundings. The last room he visited was that of his wife, which had remained undisturbed, just as she left it at the time she died. He looked at the pictures on the walls, the furniture, the view of the spacious grounds from a front window and then went to a bureau drawer and took out a photograph of his wife. Long and earnestly he looked at the portrait that was reflected on the cardboard and then he carefully restored it to the drawer.

Going downstairs he met his mother-in-law.

"Mother," he said, with a trace of emotion, "I am going to say good-by."

"But you'll be coming back soon, Charles?" she asked, an anxious look on her face.

"I'm afraid not, mother. I don't know that I'll ever be back."

He motioned the officers outside and informed them that he was ready.

"Guilty Judge," He Says.

Raine was taken to the Second Division of the Criminal Court and arraigned before Judge Palmer. The Court read the warrant to the banker and then asked him if he had anything to say.

"I'm guilty, Judge," was his only reply.

"What amount do you recommend his bond shall be?" asked the Court of the Attorney-General. Before the Prosecuting Attorney could answer he was interrupted by the banker.

"I don't want any bond," declared Raine. "I want to go to jail."

He was taken to the county jail and placed in a cell.

Judge Palmer fixed the banker's bond at $250,000. It is understood, however, that Raine will make no effort to furnish bail. Indictments charging him with embezzlement and fraudulent breach of trust have been drawn.

The imprisoned head of the now defunct Mercantile Bank refuses to make a statement. His only comment on conditions that involved the bank is that he alone is guilty; that the shortage was brought about through his manipulation with the bank's finances in an effort to beat the cotton futures market.

There were pathetic scenes in front of the bank when the failure became generally known. Women dressed in mourning, with babes in their arms, begged policemen guarding the entrance to be allowed to get in and "save" their deposits.

J. W. Jones, a young railroad man, who had $1500, the savings of months, swept away in the bank's crash, fainted when he read the notice of suspension. He had deposited $300 in the bank two days before the failure.

An aged washerwoman wept when she found she could not recover the $600 she had placed in the bank's savings department. She had been assured by Raine, she said, that the bank was as safe as though it had been "buried in the ground and a huge rock placed on its top."

Shopgirls, clerks, widows, children—these were the contributors to the amount of $350,000 in savings accounts, that was lost through the speculations of the bank's president.

Among the heavy losers in the failure of the bank is Mrs. Eldridge Wright, whose husband was killed three years ago at Kinmundy, Ill., when an engine crashed into a private car and killed J. T. Harahan, former president of the Illinois Central Railroad, and the party of men who were his guests. Mrs. Wright is said to have had $58,000 in the bank.

The directors of the Mercantile Bank are C. Hunter Raine, R. A. Speed, J. W. Schorr, E. B. LeMaster, A. S. Caldwell, T. J. Turley, Gen. Luke E. Wright, F. G. Jones, E. W. Porter, S. T. Carnes, W. G. Reed, W. T. Overton, J. M. Fowlkes, S. Landree and C. D. Smith.

F. G. Barton resigned as a director in December and H. H. Reese resigned as a director early in January. No stated reasons for their resignations were given. Barton is a cotton plantation owner and Reese is a cotton broker.

Many frightened depositors are selling their accounts to speculators. Some have accepted as little as 20 cents on the dollar. A clerk in a cotton broker's office had $4000 on deposit with the savings department of the bank. He sold his claim to a bartender for $800. When asked why he accepted so low a figure he said: "If that money was lost in a cotton deal there's no chance to get much of it back. Trading in cotton futures just naturally eats up money if you get on the wrong side. I'm in the business and I know how it is."

Many citizens of Memphis who condemn Raine for speculating in cotton are eager to take the speculative chance of buying depositors' claims at a discount. The usual quotations run from 20 to 33 1-3 per cent.

The last published statement of the Mercantile Bank, Jan. 1, showed capital stock, $200,000; surplus, $100,000; individual deposits, $932,355.83; time certificates of deposits, $158,170.16; savings deposits, $344,233.58; total deposits, $1,831,108.87.

This showed the bank's total assets to be $1,531,108.87. The $1,187,000 stolen by Raine reduced these assets to $344,108.87. This is the amount left for the depositors and creditors of the bank. This would pay them about 22 cents on the dollar.

Though the question of the liability of directors, under the new State banking law, is still being debated by lawyers, purchasers of accounts believe the courts will decide that directors of the bank can be held liable for losses to depositors through the criminal act of any officer or director of the bank.

That at least one Memphis citizen took an optimistic view of the situation was shown when the official notice of the closing of the bank was posted on the front door.

By the addition of a printed sticker the sign was made to read:

> THIS BANK IS CLOSED BY ORDER OF THE STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS. ISCH CA BIBBLE.

Needless to say the last three words were not originally a part of the official notice.

One rumor which followed the bank crush was that several large public service corporations, including the largest of all, the Memphis Gas and Electric Co. had been "tipped off" in time to withdraw their deposits.

Directors and State Bank Examiners who went over the books found that the Gas and Electric Co. deposited $80,000 on Friday and made an additional deposit of $10,000 about half an hour before the day's business was closed on Saturday. Other public service corporations also made their usual deposits on Saturday.

When the cash in the bank was counted Monday it was found that only $52,000 was in the vaults. This led to the belief that the person responsible for the defalcations made one last "quick touch" just before the bank's doors were closed.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" MAKES A CROSS, SICK CHILD WELL AND HAPPY IN FEW HOURS.

Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has sour stomach, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills. Give a teaspoonful and in just a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food, clogged in the bowels, passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless fruit laxative and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on each bottle.

Mother, keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Don't be fooled.—ADV.

WIDOW BRINGING HUSBAND'S ASHES TO U. S. ENDS LIFE

Wife of American Banker Who Died in India Leaps From Pacific Steamer.

RELATIVES MEET SHIP

Expect to Console Widow, but Instead Receive Last Notes From Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14.—Relatives who yesterday met the steamer Tenyo Maru, looking for Mrs. Charles H. Wood, widow of the banker who died in Agra, India, Dec. 5, were informed that Mrs. Wood had jumped into the sea and was drowned, Jan. 8, the first night out of Singapore.

Prior to sailing from Singapore on the Iyo Maru, with the ashes of her husband, Mrs. Wood had arranged with Mrs. Esther Richardson, a friend at Hongkong, to obtain passage for her on the Tenyo Maru from Hongkong to San Francisco.

When the Iyo Maru put into Hongkong, Mrs. Richardson learned of Mrs. Wood's death and received from the captain a letter addressed to her which was found in Mrs. Wood's stateroom. The letter said:

"After all, I shall not reach Hongkong and see you, for I am going to look for my beloved. I cannot live without him.

"May I trouble you to forward my things to Mr. Wood's sister, Mrs. Charles Musaus of San Francisco?"

Mrs. Musaus and her husband were at the pier yesterday when the Tenyo Maru arrived, expecting to meet Mrs. Wood. Some hours later Mrs. Musaus received a letter that had been written by Mrs. Richardson enclosing Mrs. Wood's letter to her and relating the circumstances of Mrs. Wood's fate.

CITY LABOR AGENCY EMPLOYS ALL COMERS

New Department in New York Opens With Work for 8000 Snow Shovelers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The Municipal Employment Exchange, an experiment here in public welfare work, opened today with jobs to spare. The storm caused an immediate demand for 8000 snow shovelers, and all applicants who would accept such employment were set at work as fast as they registered. The Street Cleaning Department estimated that it would cost the city $400,000 to remove the snow blockade, and half this sum will go to relieve the suffering of the unemployed, which was acute after the zero weather of the last two days.

The Employment Exchange will act as a clearing house for the 800 private employment agencies in the city. It will provide a place where they may list their wants so that the seeker for work will be spared the trouble of making the round of the private agencies.

MUSICIANS SUE RIVALS

Allege Union Officials Injured Business, Ask $40,000.

A suit for $40,000 damages was filed yesterday by three members of the American International Musical and Theatrical Union, Local No. 2, against four officials of the Musician's Mutual Benefit Association, Local No. 2, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The plaintiffs, Fred W. Wiehtuechter, E. W. Knecht and William Phillips, allege that they were libeled and defamed by a handbill which was circulated by the defendants Nov. 8 last.

The handbill stated that Military Hall or Kissel's Hall, at Twelfth and North Market streets, harbored an outfit of unfair musicians, knowns as Local No. 2, A. I. M. and T. U., which organization is on the "We don't patronize" list of the Central Trades and Labor Union.

The defendants named are Owen Miller, Albert Stoeffel, Henry Grapengetter and Henry Falkenhainer. The plaintiffs ask $20,000 actual and $20,000 punitive damages.

Dark Days for Duckshooters

Ducks Are Eating the Corn Out of Cribs and the Wheat Out of Elevators Under the New Federal Law, and No One Can Touch Them—The Duckshooters' Rebellion, Which Is About to Break Out—Amusing Predicament of Western Sportsmen Who Worked for the Federal Law and Are Now Reduced to Playing Dominoes and Kelly Pool—Wanted: A Kind of Duck Which Carries Its Own Water With It.

BY CLARK M'ADAMS.

Lo, the poor duckshooter!
  Once he could shoot,
Lift up his caller
  And give it a toot,
Look with his telescope
  Into the skies,
Hope and expectancy
  Lighting his eyes.

Now is he desolate,
  Held in restraint;
Shelling the Government
  With his complaint;
Sighing for Paradise
  Bitterly lost;
Grieving his trustfulness,
  Counting the cost.

Long has he heard about
  Federal laws;
Always he thought of them
  Helping the cause;
Always encouraging
  Congress to act;
Now is he desolate—
  They are a fact.

Lo, the poor duckshooter!
  It has been done;
Says the great Government,
  "Give us your gun!
Learn to play dominoes—
  That will suffice!"
Lo! the poor duckshooter!
  Isn't it nice?

IF you see a man going about with a long face and making an imaginary speech, he is a duckshooter. There is a great deal of feeling among duckshooters these days. The first closed season under the new Federal law began last month. After waiting all Fall for the ducks to come down from the North, the hunters had the satisfaction of seeing them come in after the Federal law had made it illegal to shoot them. How the ducks knew when it would be safe to come is not much of a puzzle to people who know anything about wild ducks. They are very smart. They are familiar with all game legislation.

Since the closed season began ducks have been thick. In some parts of Missouri and the surrounding states they have torn down corn shocks and pulled up the wheat. Hunters who spent whole days around their shooting grounds last Fall without seeing a duck cannot look up at the sky now without seeing big flocks of them scurrying across the heavens in the course of raiding corn cribs and tearing down grain elevators. Knowing persons predicted that wild ducks would eat us up under the new laws, and they probably will. They are voracious eaters.

There is a feature of the situation which is amusing. When the enabling act under which the Federal regulations are made was before Congress, sportsmen all over the country urged their representatives to support it. Their representatives did so, and President Taft signed it. Under this act the Department of Agriculture can make any regulations for the protection of migratory birds that the President will approve. It was generally understood that spring shooting would be prohibited, but when the regulations came out they swept the hunters off their feet. In Missouri, for instance, one can shoot ducks only from September 15 to January 1, a season in which there is no duckshooting here one year in three unless the ducks bring their own water with them. All the prairie lakes are dry. There are no feeding grounds to stop the ducks on their way South. If the Government had introduced a kind of duck which does carry its own water with it, and stops anywhere it pleases to swim and sport in it, the sportsmen would not have felt so badly; but there is no such duck. There are only old-fashioned ducks, which must have water provided for them.

THE discovery that January and February are Spring months was a great surprise out here in the West. It had been generally taught that these are Winter months, and it was supposed that in stopping Spring shooting the Government would terminate the shooting season at or soon after the beginning of Spring. Another cruel surprise was that whereas ducks may be shot in season on the Mississippi River below Memphis and above Minneapolis, and on the Missouri below Nebraska City, they may not be shot at any season upon any other parts of those rivers. Thus, a duck starting from New Orleans would have to keep away from the river until he reached Memphis. At Memphis he could return to the stream and fly safely over it as far north as the mouth of the Missouri. At that point, if he wanted to go up the Missouri, he would have to leave the river again and return to it at Nebraska City, from which point he could proceed in safety to the source of the stream; or, if he wanted to go up the Mississippi, he could safely continue over the river until he reached Minneapolis, beyond which point he would have to steer clear of the river. Of course, a duck, which is very much impressed with the safety-first idea, would do this; but it would make him dizzy, and he would probably have addlepated children who would get killed the first time they tried to go anywhere. So that in addition to being amusing, this cannot be considered very good conservation.

Western sportsmen had not counted upon regulations such as these. They had expected that motorboat shooting on the big rivers would be prohibited, because that is a form of the sport which deprives the ducks of their one great sanctuary and resting place in migration and hurries them off to the North or South when they would otherwise linger to afford sport to thousands of men in lakes, upon sandbars and at the points of islands. That the rivers should be closed to every kind of shooting no one out here had ever dreamed.

MR. E. A. QUARLES of New York is at the Planters Hotel. Mr. Quarles is one of the vice-presidents of the American Game Protective Association. He does not know what the Government is going to do about the game regulations. He probably is not a Democrat, and does not enjoy the confidence of the administration as fully as most Democrats do. He is, however, interested in the attitude of Western sportsmen toward the law, and gives the comforting assurance that it will be possible to change the regulations whenever the Department of Agriculture sees fit to do so. To change them would require nothing more than a recommendation to the President. It would not be necessary to take the matter before Congress. Whether the general uprising in the West will induce the Government to extend the season out here and enable us to shoot ducks when there is water upon which to shoot them, he cannot say. The President, of course, knows nothing about it. There are no doubt many nice things to be said of a President who does not neglect his work to run off after ducks, as Cleveland and Ben Harrison did, or to go bear hunting, as Roosevelt did; but it would be a great comfort to thousands of duckshooters if one of those men were President now. He would understand. He would know that duckshooters cannot readily turn to dominoes, or to Kelly pool. They are forever ruined for anything of that kind. They have breathed too much of the sweet air, and had too much excitement.

Something will be done about it, however. We cannot have ducks eating the corn out of corn cribs and wheat out of elevators. We shall have to defend ourselves, and the Government will have to make the defense legal. A few misguided persons are saying that the Federal regulations are unconstitutional, but that is a matter to be determined by the United States Supreme Court. There was quite a ruction in this country from 1860 to 1865 over the right of the Federal Government to make laws for the states. A good many people were killed, and it was finally decided that the Federal Government has this right. Combining their forces, even, the duckshooters and the different state militia could not whip the army. The army would knock the stuffing out of us.

Fish Prices Are Donovan's Test of the Suffragist Sincerity

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14

CONGRESSMAN DONOVAN of Connecticut looks like a Southern Colonel and is known as "Uncle Jeremiah."

One morning a party of young women from his home State who were attending a big suffrage conclave in Washington dropped into his office to see how he stood on suffrage. He received them courteously and then asked:

"What is the attitude of you young ladies in regard to fish?"

"Fish?"

"Yes. I see by the morning papers that fish have gone up $2 a barrel. What are you going to do about it?"

"It's the first we've heard of it," one of the women replied.

"Why, my dear young women," said Donovan, in a pained tone, "do you mean to tell me that so important an article of diet as fish goes up in price and you don't even know about it? And you are not going to bring the matter up at your meeting? Is that the way you're going to look after things when you have the ballot?"

With a sad shake of his head he walked out of his office.

DANDRUFF SOON RUINS THE HAIR

Makes It Lifeless, Dull, Dry, Brittle and Thin.

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do, by all means, get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous, soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—ADV.

TAYLOR CONDUCTS INQUIRY AT BANK ON USURY CHARGE

Commonwealth Trust President Summons Officials to Explain $83,250 Bond Deal.

MADE PROFIT OF $10,000

Judge Assails Bank in Deciding Foreclosure Suit in Favor of Woman.

Daniel G. Taylor, former Circuit Judge, recently elected president of the Commonwealth Trust Co., learned yesterday for the first time of the trust company's dealings in the bonds of the Alton, Jacksonville & Peoria electric line, through reading of the decision of Circuit Judge Shirley of Jerseyville, Ill., to the effect that the company had charged usurious interest in the transaction.

Taylor called in officials of the company who were familiar with the bond transaction and questioned them about the matter.

The inquiry, together with the facts presented in court at Jerseyville, showed that the trust company, in May, 1911, made a deal to buy $83,250 of the bonds of the Alton, Jacksonville & Peoria line at 90 cents on the dollar, or $74,925. This sale was made with the understanding that the officers of the road would find purchasers for the bonds, and in accordance with this understanding the bonds, less $10,000 of them, face value, were sold to Edgar M. Davis, president of the road; his brother, Arthur J. Davis, treasurer; his mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie D. Cross of Jerseyville, and a number of others.

These purchasers gave a note to the trust company, and had to put up additional collateral equal to about twice the amount of the note. The trust company foreclosed on the note six months later, and a receivership followed.

When the trust company tried to foreclose its claim on Mrs. Cross, she made the defense that the company had acted usuriously, in that it had held out $10,000 of the bonds, and had charged the legal rate of interest on the note. Judge Shirley Friday upheld Mrs. Cross' contention, holding that the company had resorted to a makeshift to avoid the usury law. He ordered that $1400 interest paid on the bonds, and the value of the $10,000 of bonds, which the trust company held out, should be credited to Mrs. Cross on the principal of the loan.

GOES TO CALIFORNIA ON CHARGE OF SWINDLING

East St. Louis Man Is Extradited After Legal Fight and Departs With Sheriff.

Extradition papers were received by the Circuit Attorney's office Saturday from Gov. Major, authorizing the return of Charles P. Culpepper, who was arrested at his home in East St. Louis, Jan. 7, by St. Louis detectives, to California for trial on a swindling charge. Sheriff J. D. Scanlan of Alameda, Cal., left with the prisoner at once.

Gov. Major first refused to issue extradition papers because Culpepper insisted he had been arrested in another State on a false charge and virtually kidnaped. The California authorities then applied to Gov. Dunne of Illinois, who refused on the ground Culpepper was a prisoner in Missouri.

Culpepper was arrested on complaint of a St. Louisan, who alleged Culpepper had sold him a horse that was unsound. When the prosecuting witness refused to appear at the trial the case was dismissed and Culpepper was released, but was immediately rearrested and held until extradition could be arranged.

BREATHE FREELY! OPEN NOSTRILS AND STUFFED HEAD—END CATARRH

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear. —ADV.

JAMES WILL NOT QUIT

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Chicago alumni of the University of Illinois rejoiced today when they received word that Edmund J. James, president of the university, had no intention of resigning.

A dispatch from Urbana quoted President James as saying:

"I have no intention of resigning my position and I do not see why I should. The Board of Trustees may discharge me at any time as I am its employe. I want to say, however, this is not a political institution and Gov. Dunne has never made the slightest effort to inject politics into its administration.

"I would welcome an investigation. It would show the people of the State how wisely their money is being spent."

Gray Hair Easily Restored to Youthful Color

Growing gray and growing old seem to be synonymous terms nowadays and serve as a sort of reproach; for neither the business nor social world has any longer use for what they call "back numbers."

If your hair is growing gray, streaked or faded you can quickly restore it to its own natural, youthful color and thereby make yourself look years younger by one or two applications of a preparation known as Queen Gray Hair Restorer, which is made by the Queen Chemical Co. of Buffalo, N. Y., and sold by all the leading drug and department stores everywhere. It brings out all the gloss and luster of your hair and makes it soft and fluffy. The restored color is lasting, too. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. —ADV.

WRITER DIES AS HER DEATH VISION STORY IS PRINTED

She Describes in Magazine How Mother Appeared to Warn Her of Coming End.

PLANS HER OWN FUNERAL

Zoe Anderson Norris Went to Club Dinner and From There to Hospital.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Although her death came suddenly—within 24 hours after she had presided at the Valentine day dinner of the Ragged Edge Club at the Cafe Boheme, Thursday night—Mrs. Zoe Anderson Norris, in her publication dated today, the East Side Magazine, announced that she expected to die soon and told how the word came to her.

"I am going," she wrote, "to take the journey to the undiscovered country very, very soon, if there is anything in dreams, and if you knew dreams of my life you would say that there is. * * *

"I was sitting alone one night not long ago, after I had published the audacious statement that the dead never come back. I sat very lonely in the big chair under the lamp, pondering over the problem of life and wondering, as I often do, what was the use of it all, anyhow, and then I went to bed and slept.

"Along toward dawn I had a dream.

"Again I was alone wondering. And then I thought there came swiftly down the dusky hall a little woman, a tiny little woman in black.

"As she came down the hall the doors swung open and shut for her in a mysterious way, as if blown by the winds.

"Finally she reached my bed and stood there. It was my mother—such a tiny little thing to have borne 13 children. She was scarcely higher than the posts of my low bed as she stood there beside me. I felt the soft, glazy silk of her black dress.

"'Am I the next?' I asked her, and she said, 'Yes.'

"I screamed and she put up her small hand and said, "Shhh! Shhh!" My scream wakened me. * * *

"How Tame Life Gets."

"The first thought that came to me as I lay there in that dawn was that I didn't care. How tame life gets after you have lived a length of time!

"The same days, the nights, the same seasons, the same heat, the same cold, the same grass, the same flowers, the same untruthfulness, the same insults of men, the same poisonous tongues of women, the same rich, the same poor, the same sunshine, the same rain! * * *

"I wish I had the unfaltering, unquestioning faith in God that the Jews have. I must cultivate it. * * *

"Just as I have made my life worth living, have cut out a work for myself, have found myself, as it were, after long and most unhappy wandering, have made a little home for myself, have gathered friends about me, many friends and warm whom I love and who love me, I must move on.

"I must try and forget that and think, instead, how good it is to know that I am not to live to be old and helpless and feeble, to die in some sanitarium, helpless and ill-treated, as many women do; or sit on a curb and sell oranges all day long as the old women do here on the East Side.

Her Wishes for Funeral.

"And I should like a lovely East Side funeral, with the little Dutch band that plays every morning in my court leading it—and the Ragged Edgers following on foot, and black horses with fine long tails and manes and a covering like the waving fins of the Japanese goldfish—only black. Of course—and all the other trimmings that go with a real and beautiful funeral here on the East Side where everything is so much more simple and near to nature than on the West.

"And there are so many things I want to know about, my children, so many things I have wondered about all my life long.

"And when I have found out the truth about all these things in the land of the lilies, my children, I will come back and tell you; because, you see, after all, I was wrong and they can come back."

Mrs. Norris died in the People's Hospital. She had not complained of illness at the Ragged Edge Club dinner, but immediately afterward went to the hospital for treatment for heart and kidney trouble, and she died at 5 o'clock last evening.

She was widely known as a writer, was president of the Ragged Edge Club, and a sincere worker for the welfare of the poor. Her acquaintance with literary celebrities was of the widest. She published several novels, among the best known being "The Color of His Soul," the "Quest of Polly Locke," and a series of "Kentucky Colonel" stories.

A native of Kentucky, she was educated at the Daughters' College, Harrodsburg, Ky. Her daughter, Mrs. Fletcher Chels, who resides there, is on her way to this city.

Death in Keeping With Family Tradition, Says Her Son.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 14.—It was a family tradition that Mrs. Zoe Anderson Norris would die in fulfillment of a dream, according to her son, Robert G. Norris, of this city. Norris is a traveling passenger agent for the Missouri Pacific Railroad. A card party was in progress at his home when he received a telegram telling of his mother's death.

"And she died as she had dreamed," Norris said just before taking a train for New York. "It was the family tradition."

The finest fancy Vests we have ever had to offer are involved in this first Vest sale of the year 1914, and this is sure to take rank as the greatest sale of its kind we have ever held. The noted maker of whom we made this purchase was struck hard by the inactivity that has been the common experience of thousands of dealers this season—he had far more than his regular surplus to sell us.

ℭ He had lines designed for the foremost haberdashers that were scarcely selected from.

ℭ He had far more than the usual quantities in those materials that always go the fastest.

ℭ He had far more than the usual number of the finer Vests—the $5.00 and $6.00 kinds.

GOVERNOR TO ASK RETURN OF MARTHA WASHINGTON WILL

D. A. R. Gets Virginia Executive to Make Diplomatic Appeal to J. P. Morgan.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FAIRFAX, Va., Feb. 14.—Members of the Daughters of the American Revolution who have been demanding from J. P. Morgan the return of the Martha Washington will, stolen from the Fairfax County Courthouse during the Civil War and found in the private collection of the late J. P. Morgan, have decided to resort to diplomacy to regain the treasure, instead of appealing to the law through State Senator Thornton's bill, now a law, but held up temporarily.

Gov. Stuart now will shoulder the burden of reclaiming the will, endeavoring to do so by gentle persuasion upon Morgan and the plea that his holding stolen property cannot reflect credit on him or his family, even though the property was taken during times of war and therefore privileged "loot."

Gov. Stuart has agreed to write Morgan a letter couched in the most diplomatic language possible asking for the return of the will.

It is believed here that Morgan will accede to the Governor's request and return the will, thereby avoiding unpleasantness and a long and hard fought law suit. Should such a suit be brought efforts will be made by the Fairfax Daughters to learn just how Morgan's father got the valuable document in his possession, and the identity of the actual thief may be learned.

The fight for the recovery of the will not only has the support of the national organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution, but of Virginia patriotic societies.

There will be no lack of money to push the case against Morgan should the matter finally be sent to the courts.

The Martha Washington will controversy has been attracting wide attention since December, when it was learned that the will had been found in the Morgan collection. Demands were made on Morgan for the return of the will, but without avail. To one request Morgan's secretary replied with the offer of a photographic reproduction, but ignored the demand for the original.

THORNTON PLANS TO PROMOTE ENGLISHMEN

American Who Will Run British Railroad Says Surprise at Appointment Is Unjustified.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Henry W. Thornton, the American railroad man, who has just been selected for general manager of the Great Eastern Railway of England, departed for New York today to wind up his affairs there.

"The annoyance and surprise expressed by the British press at my appointment are perhaps natural," he said, "but I think are unjustified. Personally I feel that the English railway managers are capable men.

"My appointment means the introduction of American methods only when they are consonant with the practice of English railways. I intend, however, to get into close personal touch with all the members of the staff of the Great Eastern Railway in the hope that I will not miss anyone capable of advancement. If that is an American innovation, I expect to carry it out."

Where are you going? To Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d fl., 308 N. 6th st., to buy a diamond on credit, and then wedding bells for me.

KING DOUBLES ON PENNY

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The new English pennies, which recently have been coined have caused much comment because the King's head seems to be stamped clear through the coin. This is explained by the head clerk at the mint, who says the strange appearance is due to the fact that the King's head is in high relief and the metal for relief must come from some place, so it shows on the reverse side.

The clerk said that $350,000 worth of pennies were coined last month. The use of the slot meter for gas is one of the causes for the increased demand for pennies.

of work or workers, sales, business chances, vacancies and realty investments are printed in the big want directory today. More than twice as many as the Globe-Democrat and four times as many as the Republic.

PERU CALLS LEGUIA HOME

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 14.—Among the passengers on board the Carmania, when she left here today for New York, was Robert E. Leguia, first vice-president of Peru, who said he had been called back to Lima to fill the office of President of the republic during the unexpired term of President Guillermo Billinghurst.

Senator Leguia before his departure, expressed his friendship for the United States and said he expected to sign a number of American concessions which had been held up by Senor Billinghurst.

Vast Field of Ice Is Sighted.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Feb. 14.—A vast island of field ice more than 200 miles in length was sighted to the eastward of Newfoundland by the British steamer Lord Antrim, which put into Halifax early today for bunker coal in order to complete their voyage from Narvik, Norway, to Philadelphia.

South Bend Physician Giving Away Medicine to Rheumatic Sufferers

Without Charge of any kind Dr. Whitehall Megrimine Co. will send Medicine to all who write.

Dr. Whitehall, after 25 years of practice, has succeeded in compounding a remedy that he believes to be wonderfully efficient for rheumatic pains, and through the Dr. Whitehall Megrimine Co. has already given away thousands of boxes of this great remedy. The success of his open-handed method warrants him in further continuance of the distribution of thousands more of free full packages to other sufferers. The doctor's remedy is a common-sense combination of well known remedies that tends to diminish the accumulation and increase the elimination of the poisons that produce muscular soreness, tender, inflamed and swollen joints, and other manifestations of rheumatism.

Below are quoted unsolicited letters from the doctor's mail. Similar letters are received constantly. Here is one from Mrs. C. M. Boughman, Edinburg, Ill.: "Dear Dr. Whitehall: Received your medicine. It was for my mother. She did not have the use of her hands for a month. The third morning after using your medicine she dressed herself."

Mrs. A. F. Plummer, Franklin, N. H., writes: "Will say your medicine has helped me more than the four doctors I had this summer."

F. P. Sickles, Smithfield, Neb., says: "I have been afflicted with rheumatism, especially sciatica, for a number of years. Was having a severe attack when I sent for your sample. I had taken only two of your tablets when I noticed a change for the better. I have not taken all the sample yet, but feel cured." Mrs. M. S. Hoadley, Sedalia, Mo., says: "It is wonderful what your medicine has done for me. I was on crutches Friday night when I received it. I began taking it at once and on Monday put away the crutches and used a cane. Since Thursday I have not used either and am doing my own work. I had rheumatism on and off for 40 years."

If you are subject to rheumatic pains of any nature, write for a free box of Dr. Whitehall's Rheumatic Remedy today. It will be sent postage prepaid to you. Do not send one penny. Let us prove to you, as we have to thousands of others, what this remedy will do for you. Dr. Whitehall is particularly anxious to have druggists know more about his preparation and, therefore, asks all who write him for the free medicine to mention their druggists' names. In writing address Branch 364, Whitehall Laboratory, Dr. Whitehall Megrimine Co., South Bend, Ind.

HUNGARIAN VIOLIN ARTIST TO PLAY WITH SYMPHONY

Carl Flesch Once Played Music of Every Known School in Five Recitals.

Carl Flesch, the new violinist whose successes have been the musical sensation of New York and Boston since the beginning of the new year, will be heard in St. Louis with the Symphony Orchestra Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

Flesch is a Hungarian, 40 years old. His position in the artistic world of Europe was established 10 years ago when he performed the feat never before attempted of playing in a series of recitals pieces representing the violin literature of every school and every period. This was accomplished in five concerts given in Amsterdam. In St. Louis he will play the Brahms concerto for violin in D major.

The complete program follows:

Overture to Oberon.....Weber
Concerto for violin in D major, Op. 77.....Brahms
 1—Allegro non troppo.

 (Procession of the Women.)
Good Friday music from Parsifal.
Ride of the Valkyries.

This afternoon at the "pop" concert the soloist will be John W. Nichols, a New York tenor, who is making a recital tour of the West. The afternoon's program does not close with a Strauss waltz, breaking a custom followed for the last three seasons by Conductor Zach. The program follows:

1. March, "Pomp and Circumstance"..Elgar
2. Overture, "Fingal's Cave"...Mendelssohn
3. Aria, "Adieux a la Foret, from "l'Attique du Moulin".....Bruneau

HELEN KELLER AND TEACHER TO APPEAR AT ODEON TUESDAY

Deaf and Blind Girl to Tell St. Louisans How She Learned to Talk.

One of the most remarkable lectures ever given will be that of Helen Keller and her life-long teacher, Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy, at the Odeon, Tuesday evening. Helen Keller has been known to the world ever since she was 7 years old, when the first reports were published, telling how a deaf, blind child had learned to write and talk.

Her life has been an unbroken series of triumphs over obstacles Stricken with fever when 19 months old, she was left in intellectual darkness until nearly 7, when Miss Sullivan went to teach her. She worked with her for six months before she could make her understand that she was trying to communicate with her, and this was done through the child's natural craving for a doll.

Then other words and ideas came one by one, until finally the whole system of finger spelling dawned on the child. From that Helen Keller has gone on until she has passed the most difficult examinations in the big colleges, knows four languages and has written a number of books. Learning to speak was the hardest task of all, for she had to put her fingers on the teacher's throat for every vocal movement and learn to imitate them.

She has spent the past year with singing teachers, perfecting her speaking voice and can now be distinctly understood.

On Tuesday night Mrs. Macy will speak first, giving a most interesting account of Helen Keller's life and accomplishments, and then Miss Keller will give her address. After that she will answer any questions that the audience transmitted to her by Mrs. Macy. She has a happy disposition and is noted for her quick retorts and amusing conversations. Her answers to the questions of the audience always show the acuteness of her mind.

LET ME CURE YOU OF RHEUMATISM. FREE

This photograph truthfully shows the terrible effect of RHEUMATISM in Mr. Delano's case. You who have suffered the tortures can easily imagine the racking pains he endured. When only a youth rheumatism became chronic with him and his joints were so distorted and swollen that he was nearly helpless. He tried medicine of every description, even 125 bottles of one remedy, but nothing did more than to give him a little temporary relief. He tried doctors and specialists by the score, with no better results.

At last, after spending thousands of dollars and suffering untold agony for thirty-six years, he discovered a remedy which cured him, but I will give you the benefit of his experience for nothing.

Free Package

If you are afflicted with rheumatism let me send you a package of this remedy absolutely free. Don't send any money. I want to give it to you. I want you to see for yourself what it will do. The picture shows how rheumatism twists and distorts the bones. Maybe you are suffering the same way. Don't! You don't need to. I've got the remedy that I believe will cure you and it's yours for the asking. Write me today. F. H. DELANO, 339-H Delano Bldg., Syracuse, New York, and I'll send you a free package the very day I get your letter.

How to Overcome Chronic Constipation

There is a Mild Laxative That Will Bring Safe and Pleasant Relief.

It is only natural that the simplest of ailments should be the most general, and so we have a whole nation suffering from constipation and indigestion, for they are closely allied. But common as constipation is many people do not seem to know they have it. They will complain of headache, drowsiness or biliousness, all unconscious of the cause of the trouble.

If you are constipated, the result will be that you will catch a cold easily or have a more serious ailment. To cure the constipation and forestall still graver trouble, take a dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night before retiring.

Legions of people use it regularly in such emergencies, some of them formerly chronic invalids who had suffered from constipation all their lives. Mrs. N. Frantz, 67 Eighth street, Salem, O., took physics for years, and, worst of all, without much avail. Finally, she began to take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and today she is no longer troubled and eats what she likes. Many others will tell you that they have tried most things recommended for this purpose, but have found Syrup Pepsin the only one always reliable. A bottle can be obtained at any drug store for 50 cents or $1, the latter size being bought by families already familiar with its merits.

Syrup Pepsin is mild, pleasant-tasting and non-griping. Mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet it is effective in grownups. It is for everyone who suffers from any form of stomach, liver or bowel trouble, constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, etc. Its action will so delight you that you will forever avoid harsh cathartics, purgatives, pills and salts.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington street, Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

BREWERS OPPOSE PLANS TO CHANGE EXPRESS RATES

Proposed Schedule Will Raise Charges on Shipments of Over 50 Pounds.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 14.—Brewery interests of St. Louis and Kansas City were here today protesting against the proposed new express rates in this State before the Public Service Commission. They objected strenuously to their classification and declared that the proposed rates on beer are much too high. The express companies have proposed to put into effect in Missouri the interstate express rates recently adopted. These are lower on packages which come into competition with parcel post, but from 50 to 60 per cent higher on packages weighing over 50 pounds.

Ice cream manufacturers, the business organizations of St. Louis and Kansas City, and the Southeast Missouri League of Commercial Clubs, were also here to oppose the new rates. N. W. Stockton of New York, general counsel of the Wells Fargo Express Co., said the express companies are willing to accept nothing except the new interstate rates. He said these upon the whole are lower, but he admitted that there is an increase when the weight goes beyond 50 pounds.

R. Muelberg, representing the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association; Fred Gable, the St. Louis Independent Breweries; L. Feickert, the W. J. Lemp Brewery Co.; C. Van Brunt, the Business Men's League, and William C. Marshall, the Missouri Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, were here.

PARDON IS SOUGHT FOR ALLEN CLANSMAN, 17

Friel Now Said Not to Have Fired Shot That Killed Prosecutor in Courthouse.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 14.—A petition signed by many prominent persons of Carroll County will be presented soon to Gov. Stuart, asking him to pardon 17-year-old Friel Allen, the youngest member of the Hillsville clan, which in March of 1912 shot and killed every officer of the Carroll County Circuit Court, at the courthouse.

The boy is serving an 18-year term in the penitentiary for the murder of W. M. Foster, Commonwealth Attorney. At the trial of Friel extenuating circumstances were shown and always there was doubt that he actually caused the death of Foster. At his trial Friel testified he fired at only two persons—County Clerk Goad and Attorney Foster. The evidence offered tended to show that the Commonwealth Attorney already had received a mortal wound when he came within range of Friel's revolver.

Friel no longer is the ruddy, hearty boy he was before his arrest. He is becoming stoop-shouldered and sunken chested. Sidna Edwards, 22, also a member of the clan, who is serving a 15-year sentence for his part in the shooting, was thought to have affected lungs a few months ago. The penitentiary superintendent took him from the shops and gave him as much fredom as practicable, and at once his health began to improve. Both Friel and Edwards are model prisoners. They never knew what discipline was before they were sent to the penitentiary.

Sure Indications of Lung Trouble

Among the indications of threatened Lung Trouble are a continued cough, fever and night sweats. A change of climate often helps, but it seems that something more is needed to stop the cough and sweats and arrest the progress of disease. Eckman's Alterative, after many years of use, is known to be most beneficial in bringing about relief, in many cases complete recoveries. Investigate this case: Shell City, Mo.

"Gentlemen: I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pleurisy in my lungs. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Alterative. I paid no attention to him then. I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did, and when I got there I steadily grew worse. Then I remembered what had been told me about your medicine. I began taking it, with no faith whatever, but before I had taken three bottles, I could eat anything. Fever and night sweats stopped, and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Rabeteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Son of Late St. Louis Banker Divides Property Into Six Parts in Will.

The will of Morrison Lackland, son of the late Rufus J. Lackland, president of the Boatmen's Bank, who died at Mexico, Mo., Feb. 11, will be filed Monday at that place. He left an estate of $200,000, which will be divided in six equal parts to Mrs. Halsey C. Ives, the heirs of E. C. Lackland, the heirs of Mrs. Thomas J. Scott, the heirs of Mrs. T. T. Taylor, Mrs. Henry Schaefer of London and to Edgar L. Taylor of the Boatmen's Bank and the St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustees.

He had lived at Mexico 40 years. He was named after William L. Morrison, who was the business partner of Rufus J. Lackland 50 years ago.

Facts in Nature

FOR centuries it has been known that Nature's most valuable health giving agents for the cure of disease are found in our American forests. Over forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y., used the powdered extracts as well as the liquid extracts of native medicinal plants, such as Bloodroot and Queen's root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Cherry bark and Mandrake, for the cure of blood diseases. This prescription as put up in liquid form was called and has enjoyed a large sale for all these years in every drug store in the land. You can now obtain the powdered extract in sugar-coated tablet form of your medicine dealer, or send 50c in one-cent postage stamps for trial box to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., and tablets will be mailed, postage prepaid.

DR. PIERCE'S

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, red blood, invigorates the stomach, liver and bowels and through them the whole system. Skin affections, blotches, boils, pimples and eruptions—result of bad blood—are eradicated by this alterative extract—as thousands have testified.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, cloth-bound.

'DEVIL' BEATS MAN SENSELESS IN HOLY ROLLERS' MEETING

Jailed Pastor Says Evil One Quit Epileptic, Entered Others, Caused Attack.

'EGYPT' ALL WROUGHT UP

Laying On of Hands, Gift of Tongues in Southern Illinois Hills Community.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Feb. 14.—The authorities of Union and Jackson counties are beginning to be alarmed over the violence of the feeling here against a religious sect whose members call themselves Holiests and whose foes call them "Holy Rollers."

Walter Ellis, a preacher of the sect, and Adam Cripps, one of his followers, are in jail in Jonesboro awaiting trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill. The alleged victim is Noah Hickman, an epileptic, living at Alto Pass, at the edge of the Ozarks of Southern Illinois. He was at a meeting of the "Holliests" when he called for help. His calls were answered by a relative.

When Ellis was arrested he told the officers the "devil" had come out of the epileptic at the meeting and entered the other worshipers, who proceeded, under the devil's guidance, to beat the epileptic insensible. Hickman will be lame for life and will lose the sight of one eye, his physician says.

Kills His Father's Hogs.

Ellis says the devil is still in him. After he "got religion," he killed all his father's hogs. He said the Bible told him they were unclean and ought to be killed. He threw his father's lard out of doors.

In his cell he cries out and prays and announces the Lord is coming in 10 days to burst open the walls of Jonesboro jail and let him out. The authorities fear that Ellis' followers will break down the jail.

A couple of farmers' wives got the "gift of tongues." They sing, pray and talk in a strange "language," while the farmers get their own food.

Nellie Jones, daughter of John Jones of Macedonia, got the "gift of tongues." She left home and said she was going to Africa to talk to the natives in their own language, but got only as far as "Egypt," the name given to this section.

The religion was brought to the Ozark foothills by A. W. Housman. He left immediately after the arrest of Ellis and Cripps. The soprano soloist departed at the same time. Houseman's wife remained at the residence of a convert.

Several schools have been closed, Minnie Hicks, teacher at the Macedonia School, having closed that little building when the sect became active.

When the County Superintendent ordered her to resume teaching, she responded that she considered her soul a lot more important than her school duties. Then the authorities visited her, told her it was a cold winter and asked whether she would resume teaching or quit drawing a salary. She resumed teaching, but other schools are open only occasionally.

Sees the "New Jerusalem."

The difficulty in maintaining school order is increased by the conversion of some of the school authorities, among them Joseph Tyler, a director of the Hickory Ridge school. He went into a trance and "saw the New Jerusalem," and immediately afterward a lot of ginseng pickers announced they had seen a lot of the "New Jerusalem."

The Holiests rally in the meeting places at sunset and stay far into the night, some of them "rolling," others lying inert, and nearly all shouting at the top of their voices.

The rolling usually starts with the "laying on of hands." When the hands appear the shouting begins. The hands are laid on both whites and negroes. The list of converts includes a Murphysboro grocer, who took a sack of flour to the meeting the other night and sprinkled all the devout with it.

The preliminary hearing of Cripps and Ellis will be held on Tuesday. It is possible the authorities will ask for protection.

Rushes Back Into Burning Building From Which He Had Just Been Rescued.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 14.—One man lost his life and several others were seriously injured in a fire that today destroyed the six-story building occupied by the Northern Manufacturing Co.

To save the life of a girl employed in his department, William P. Howe, 70 years old, a shipping clerk, after having himself been assisted to get outside the burning building, plunged back in before he could be restrained and was burned to death.

Rose Schultz, for whom Howe lost his own life, was carried down the stairs from the third floor, only slightly injured.

The origin of the fire had not been determined tonight.

BRYAN ALMOST TAKES A DRINK BY MISTAKE

Reaches for Champagne Glass Thinking It Contains Grape Juice.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Four hundred authors dined together tonight and Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan nearly took a drink—a real drink. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan were guests of honor at the first annual dinner of the Author's League of America, held at the Biltmore.

Shortly after the dinner began Edward W. Bok of magazine fame approached the guest table bearing a bottle of grape juice. It was smilingly received and the contents poured into a pitcher. Mr. Bryan drank a little.

Shortly after that Mr. Bryan absent-mindedly reached out for a glass which, presumably, he thought contained water. It held champagne. His hand had just touched the stem when Mrs. Bryan touched his arm. He looked at her, noticed his mistake, smiled and reached for the grape juice glass.

Mr. Bryan addressed himself to the topic, "The Writer With a Message." Kate Douglas Wiggin, Rex Beach, George Haven Putnam, the Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers and Herbert Putnam also spoke.

ENGINEER, FIRST TO SAIL AROUND SOUTH AMERICA

Trip Through Panama Canal Completes Circumnavigation of Continent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—William J. Stone, an American engineer on the Panama Canal tug Cocoli, enjoys the distinction of being the first person to circumnavigate the continent of South America.

About two years ago, Stone sailed from Colon, on the canal tug Reliance for Panama where he arrived June 17, 1912. Later on he was transferred to the Cocoli, which on Jan. 29, passed through the canal to the Atlantic, thus completing Stone's cruise by water around South America.

Two days later the tug Reliance followed the Cocoli, and will thus go down in history as the first vessel to circumnavigate the continent. It took the Reliance 126 days to travel the 10,500 miles from Colon to Panama, where she passed through the canal from the Pacific to the Atlantic in one day.

CAT ENDS LIFE, STARTS SENATE BAD LUCK DAY

Flag Is Flung Bottom Side Up, Senator Lea Has Mumps, Executive Session Is Open.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—This was the Senate's "bad luck" day. Everything went backward. Tabby, the old white cat that has made the Senate office building her home for two years, jumped down an elevator shaft, from the fourth to the first floor, killing herself instantly.

By mistake the flag in the Senate wing of the Capitol was flung to the breeze bottom side up.

Next in order came the news that Senator Lea had the mumps and could not leave his bed.

Eight minutes after the Senate convened Senator Overman moved that it go into executive session.

An hour later it was discovered that one of the Senate doors, which is always barred in executive sessions, was open, and had been so all day.

SMILES BROKE UP HOME

Husband Thought Wife Was Too Pleasant to Customers.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—A smile with every cigar broke up the home of Mrs. Adeline Saunders.

"We had a cigar and confectionery store and most of our customers were men," she told the Court. "When I waited on the customers I always had a smile and pleasant word for them. As a result they bought liberally and we prospered. But my husband was sure my smile wasn't entirely a professional one and he nagged and insulted me." Mrs. Saunders got her divorce.

TELLS OF OFFER TO DROP THE GORE CASE FOR $25,000

Banker Testifies Jacobs Made Such Proposition, but Senator Spurned It.

MRS. BOND IS ASSAILED

Witnesses Say Woman Who Alleges Attack Had a Bad Reputation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 14.—William M. Bonner, an Oklahoma City banker, testifying late today in the $50,000 damage suit of Mrs. Minnie E. Bond against United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, told of an alleged offer made to him by James R. Jacobs. Jacobs is the witness whom Mrs. Bond's counsel is holding for rebuttal testimony. Bonner, put on the stand by Senator Gore's counsel, said that Jacobs told him "that for $25.000 he would see that the case against Senator Gore was dropped."

Bonner said that when he asked Jacobs what he would do with the money, Jacobs told him he "would go somewhere else and start a newspaper."

Bonner also testified that Kirby Fitzpatrick told him the Gore charges would be dropped if Robertson was appointed Assistant District Attorney. Bonner said he telegraphed Fitzpatrick's proposition to Gore, and that the Senator replied, "I will neither treat nor retreat.' Bonner admitted on cross-examination that he had suggested to Fitzpatrick that the Gore charges should be suppressed for the good of the Democratic party.

Judge Bars Telegrams.

Judge Clark refused to allow the introduction of telegrams in relation to the suit, alleged by the defense to have passed between Bonner and Senator Gore.

State Senator Thomas F. McMechan testified that he introduced Mrs. Bond to Senator Gore in Oklahoma City in 1913; that Mrs. Bond on that occasion said her husband was an applicant for the position of Internal Revenue Collector. Senator Gore, however, according to the witness, told her the place already had been promised to another man.

Efforts of the defense to obtain the admission of depositions taken in Oklahoma and Texas, where Mrs. Bond formerly resided, occupied a large part of the afternoon session. After extended argument, Judge Clark refused to admit them.

Senator Gore probably will take the stand in his own defense Monday. He had expected today to give his version of the meeting in a Washington hotel, when Mrs. Bond alleges that he attacked her, but his counsel decided to call other witnesses.

Tells of Loan to Robertson.

The first witness was W. F. Fisher, an Oklahoma City lawyer. Fisher testified that he lent to T. E. Robertson, the lawyer, who was present and witnessed the alleged attack on Mrs. Bond, $245, and when Robertson came back from Washington after the alleged Gore incident, he demanded that it be repaid. Objections by counsel for Mrs. Bond caused Fisher to be excused until Robertson could be recalled.

Deputy Sheriff Ezell testified about a conversation he had with Robertson the day before the suit was filed against Gore. He said Robertson told him: "I have a paper I want you to serve tomorrow."

Ezell asked about it, and he said Robertson replied:

"Never mind now. You'll know what it is about when you see the headlines in the newspapers tomorrow. I want you to serve the papers on a man who has done me dirt. It will be sweet revenge for me."

The next day suit against Senator Gore was filed.

Pastor Is a Witness.

The Rev. R. D. Licklider, pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church, testified that Mrs. Bond and her husband and James R. Jacobs tried to induce the Ministerial Alliance of this city to make an effort to get the case of Senator Gore before the United States Senate.

The witness said Mrs. Bond, accompanied by her husband and Jacobs, attended a meeting of the ministers shortly after the episode in Washington and that Mrs. Bond told the details of the alleged attack. The alliance, he said, after hearing the statements, voted to have nothing to do with the case.

The Rev. Mr. Licklider said Mrs. Bond was a member of his church, but that she had not attended it in the last two years.

Attorney Robertson, recalled, denied having had a conversation with Fisher, but admitted he had gone with Mrs. Bond and James D. Jacobs before the Ministerial Alliance.

Fisher was recalled and testified to hearing Robertson say:

"We have a frameup against Gore, and unless he comes across with $25,000 he will have to get out of the race."

C. W. Gould of Oklahoma City testified Dr. Earp had told him two months ago "that Gore was an old blind fool and would have to get out of the Senate."

John M. Young of Lawton, one of the attorneys for Senator Gore, testified that he was the Senator's financial

SNOW REMOVAL, WITH NO THAW, TO COST CITY $15,000

Shoveling Crews Clearing Streets to Spread Out to Residence Districts Today.

Snow shoveling crews, organized into a disciplined force under the pressure of a big job, will spread out today from the business district to residence streets in their work of hauling away the snow in the streets. The snowfall was 15 inches, the lower one-sixth of which was there before the big snow of Thursday night and Friday.

Such progress was made yesterday that streets were cleaned in some places where the business men and householders had not yet caught up with the work of clearing the sidewalks. Fifteen hundred men on the job, and every man for whom a shovel could be found was put to work. The sun gave some help, with a slight thaw which lasted a few hours.

Cost of Removing Snow.

The weather man did not promise a rise in temperature for today, and Assistant Street Commissioner Laxton said that, if the city had to do the work of clearing the streets without the help of a thaw, it would take until the middle of the week and cost $15,000 to $20,000.

The prospect of another heavy snow is not having much consideration, as such heavy snowfalls do not come near together in St. Louis, as a rule. There were several exceptions to this rule two years ago, when the snow piled layer on layer, with the different layers marked by coats of soot, so that a cross-section of the undisturbed snow in back yards looked like a geological formation.

Snow Hauled by City.

The United Railways does not do anything toward removing the snow from the streets occupied by its tracks. The chief service it performs to the public, with its snow plows, is to get the space represented by its tracks open to vehicle traffic at once. But the snow which it plows from its tracks, it leaves heaped in the street on either side, and the city has to haul it away.

Laxton pointed out the fact that in other cities the street railway companies were required not only to plow their tracks, but to remove the snow.

The snow is being hauled for the most part to large sewer traps, some of which are at Fourth street and Chouteau avenue, Eleventh and Locust streets and Sixth and Biddle streets. There it is dumped, to be washed into the river. From some neighborhoods nearer to the river than to these traps, the snow is hauled direct to the river.

DAUGHTERS GIVE HOME TO COVER FATHER'S LOSSES

This Is Done With Understanding S. L. Craig Will Not Be Sued.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 14.—The sacrifice of their home and business property valued at more than $10,000 will be made by Misses Virginia and Ellen Craig, daughters of S. L. Craig, a Springfield abstractor, whose losses have involved his creditors to the extent of approximately $20,000, it was stated by attorneys for a number of Craig's clients tonight. This agreement has been made with the understanding that no legal proceedings will be instituted against the abstractor. The family is prominent here.

Craig is past 60 years of age and is ill at his home as the result of disclosures in connection with an investigation started by former Judge R. L Goode of St. Louis. Local clients of Craig had demanded that unsecured loans be placed in good condition.

Craig has been confidential advisor to wealthy persons in Springfield for many years and had an established abstract and loan business near the County Courthouse. It is said many loans were made through his office to avoid paying taxes.

His method is some instances was explained by a woman who had authorized him to make a loan for her of $1000. She did not need the money, she explained, and refused to accept the interest each year, advising Craig to invest that in small notes. She has been unable to recover anything, but has been advised that her claim will be settled. Other capitalists with large sums followed the same procedure, trusting the abstractor with sums ranging from $500 to $17,000. It was stated today that the loans which were not secured probably would not aggregate more than $16,000.

ROBBER SHOOTS MAN WHO RESISTS HIM IN HIS STORE

William Krueger Probably Fatally Wounded in South Third Street Butcher Shop.

William Krueger, 59 years old, who lives in Clayton, was shot and probably fatally wounded in his butcher shop at 1306 South Third street, St. Louis, Saturday night, in resisting two highwaymen trying to rob the place.

Krueger told the police that two men entered his place and ordered him to throw up his hands. He refused and while grappling with one of the men, was shot twice by the other man.

The shots attracted Mrs. Charles Gann, who lives upstairs over the butcher shop. She found Krueger sitting on a box. He told her he had been held up. She called a policeman and Krueger was taken to the city hospital.

According to Dr. Haglar, Krueger probably will die. One bullet entered the abdomen and penetrated the liver. It lodged under the skin in the back and was easily removed. The other bullet struck a glancing blow on the cheek.

According to Krueger's two sons, who visited him at the hospital, Krueger's place has been entered three times in the last three months. On one occasion, the robbers stole about $10 worth of provisions.

PRESIDENT FORBIDDEN TO LEAVE HIS BEDROOM

All Engagements for the Day Are Canceled, Though He Leaves His Bed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—President Wilson's cold was better today, but Dr. Cary Grayson forbade his leaving his bedroom, and all engagements for the day were canceled, including a scheduled conference with Democratic National Chairman McCombs on the New York situation and the Gridiron banquet tonight.

The President got out of bed this afternoon and handled the most pressing of routine matters in his bedroom, but Dr. Grayson refused to permit his going to the executive offices.

Snow Makes Roof Collapse.

The weight of snow lying on the roof of a livery stable conducted at 2121 North Tenth street by A. Krone, caused a section of one of the walls to fall at 8:30 o'clock last night. The damage was estimated at $1000. The structure is a one and a half story brick building.

PETITION FOR REBER APPROACH HEARD OVER GALLAGHER'S PROTEST

Reasons for Using Route Already Selected and Rejecting A. & M. Scheme Given to Bridge Committee.

SIGNED BY ORGANIZATIONS WITH 30,000 MEMBERS

Advantages in Matter of Cost and Practicability Clearly Set Forth—Weaknesses of Alternate Plan Shown—Committee to Take Further Testimony.

The Facts in Brief

(From Petition Presented to Joint Conference Committee.)

THE Reber approach is the most direct, the cheapest and the most practicable.

It is the most easily accessible to the railroads.

It is especially convenient to the coal-carrying roads, and this will bring about a reduction in the coal rate.

The city owns all of the necessary land, for which it has spent $208,718.27.

The contracts for the crossings over the railroads have been made and the crossings have been approved by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois.

The vacation of streets and street crossings for the approach have been secured from East St. Louis.

The land has already been cleared of all obstructions.

The detailed plans and specifications for the structural work on this right of way have been prepared.

There will be no opposition from the citizens of East St. Louis nor any litigation to cause delay; and

The contracts for the structural work could be let at once.

The cost of the A. & M. approach would be greater than the cost for building an approach upon the adopted right-of-way, and there would be no corresponding increase in benefit to the city. The approach would not be as accessible to railroads as the adopted approach.

The Alton & Mississippi Belt Railway Co. does not own the land which it proposes to convey to the city. Some of that land can only be acquired by condemnation. If the land is acquired by the railroad company through its powers of eminent domain, it will be acquired for railroad purposes, and the question will arise whether that easement can be conveyed to the city for a bridge approach. Irrespective of the final determination of the question, it would undoubtedly occasion uncertainty and delay.

Another ground which can be made the basis of prolonged litigation is the contention, concurred in by the City Counselor, that the city has not the power to select another approach in lieu of the one already adopted.

The approach would be merely part of the company's belt line, and the company would thus have a complete monopoly of the entrance to the approach.

At a public hearing before the Joint Free Bridge Committee of the Council and House of Delegates yesterday, a petition signed by the Business Men's League and 64 allied organizations, urging the Municipal Assembly to submit to the people a bond issue to complete the free bridge by building the eastern approach on the route already selected by the city, was read by Chairman A. L. Shapleigh of the Citizens' Free Bridge Committee over the frequently repeated objections of Delegate Gallagher, a member of the committee.

The membership of the 64 business and neighborhood improvement associations signing the petition is 30,384, exclusive of various political ward organizations which have indorsed the Reber approach.

This petition, which gives concisely a history of the bridge tangle and the reasons why the Reber approach should be built and the A. & M. scheme rejected, is printed in full on page 2 of today's Post-Dispatch.

The witnesses heard by the committee, which is comprised of Dr. Paul R. Fletcher, Dr. G. J. Herrmann and Dr. E. J. Randall, representing the Council, and Delegates Gallagher, Scully and Hall, were Maxime Reber, former President of the Board of Public Improvements; Chairman Shapleigh of the Citizens' Committee, and E. J. Spencer for the Reber route; Charles W. Bates, attorney for the Alton & Mississippi Co., for the A. & M. approach; George S. Johns of the Post-Dispatch, as a seeker for information; Frank H. Gerhart, for no approach, but against the Reber route, and William B. Kenney and William Butler Flynn of the New St. Louis Star.

The committee, after being in continuous session from 10:30 a. m. until 3:30 p. m., adjourned to meet tomorrow afternoon. Chairman Fletcher said the public hearings would be continued until persons interested in the completion of the free bridge had been given an opportunity to be heard.

Delegates Gallagher and Scully assumed an attitude of belligerent opposition toward representatives of the Citizens' Committee and the Business Men's League. Gallagher objected to the petition being read by Chairman Shapleigh, then demanded that the petition be not received, and finally after tl was read, that it be stricken from the records. He was overruled by other members of the committee, and Shapleigh was permitted to read his paper.

Former President Reber of the Board of Public Improvements was the first witness called. Delegate Gallagher told him the committee desired to ask him some questions relative to an interview in the Post-Dispatch in which he was quoted as saying that he had never advocated the construction of any other than the Reber approach, and had never declared that a belt line railroad was a necessary adjunct to the bridge.

Reber said there was nothing inconsistent between his statement printed in the Post-Dispatch and his attitude on the bridge question when he was President of the Board of Public Improvements. He said that at some public hearings of the bridge approach matter he had been questioned by the committees of the Municipal Assembly with reference to belt line propositions.

The committee, he said, at that time was considering every phase of the bridge approach question—theoretical as well as practical. The practical question, he said, was what the city should do, legally and financially, in making the bridge accessible. In answer to a statement as to what would give the bridge complete accessibility, he said he had made the statement that such would be possible only by the construction of a belt line.

"That, I said," Reber stated to the committee, "was merely a theoretical consideration. For practical consideration of all railroads then in existence, or of any future or contemplated lines, I stated that the located approach gave absolute accessibility."

Gallagher asked Reber how independent railroads—meaning railroads not members of the Terminal Railroad Association—could get on to the approach. Reber replied that when that proposition came up, those in authority made no conjectures, but called on every East Side road—members and nonmembers of the Terminal—and asked them if they would use the approach and how they preferred to get on to it.

"Every railroad stated that the located approach would give complete accessibility," Reber declared. "The approach was carried beyond the Terminal belt line into what seemed to be the most promising valley on the East Side."

Gallagher declared that he had never heard of the facts stated by Reber.

Reber said that the late Councilman Drew was a member of the committee that represented the Council in the conference with the railroads, and former Delegate Hildenbrandt represented the House of Delegates.

In response to questions as to whether the city had acquired all the land needed for the city approach, Reber asserted that the city owned every foot of it in fee simple. He said that the exact character of the proposed approach structure had never been determined—that is, as to whether it was to be carried across the Terminal belt as an elevated structure, or at grade. There could be no objection to either plan, he declared.

"The complete answer to the charge that the city approach was bottled," said Reber, "is found in the fact that the Alton & Southern has bought and condemned a right of way to the land bought by the city. That should settle the question as to whether an independent railroad could get onto the approach."

Chairman Shapleigh of the Citizens' Committee was next called. He said that after the committee had appeared before the joint committee of the House and Council last Monday, it was decided to prepare a written statement (the petition), so that a permanent record might be kept. Shapleigh, referring to the petition as a "brief," said he would like to have permission to read it.

"This committee ain't here to receive no briefs," shouted Delegate Gallagher. "That's what's the matter here. This committee's being shot to pieces by the newspapers.

"You newspaper agitators are poisoning the public mind with that stuff. We want somebody here to answer questions. Business men can give up time to this work as well as we can. I move that this brief be not received. We can get it out of the newspaper for a penny."

Despite Gallagher's vigorous objection in his picturesque language, the committee voted to grant Shapleigh permission to read the petition.

Shapleigh was permitted to read without interruption until he reached the statement that some of the present members of the Municipal Assembly, who are now opposing the Reber approach, voted for ordinances to carry into effect the city's policy in the construction of the approach.

Dr. Fletcher challenged the accuracy of the statement, with respect to his own vote saying that he had voted against every Reber approach bill, and every bill for the extension of the approach. Shapleigh started to explain that the committee was pressed for time in the preparation of the statement, and that if any inaccuracies appeared he would cheerfully correct them.

Gallagher exploded again. Particularly after someone had moved that Shapleigh be given a chance to correct any inaccuracy.

"I'm tired of being panned," he exclaimed. "We'll go through with this. Th[illegible] won't stand for it. Let him correct [illegible] n-a-a-w! Do you conduct your own business that way, Mr. Shapleigh. Ah-h-h! I ain't going to stand for this any longer!"

Shapleigh said an attorney investigated the record, and furnished a report to Walther, Hildenbrandt and Hawes, and that they believed the record was correct. The record submitted indicated that several members of the House and Council, now opposing the Reber approach, either had voted for the retailers' extension, or for various ordinances to purchase land for the Reber route.

Dr. Fletcher had Secretary Voyles of the Council examine the record of the vote on the retailers' extension. The

Here Are the Reasons For Reber Approach Against A. & M. Grab

THE Free Bridge Campaign Committee of the Business Men's League filed with the Joint Conference Committee of the Municipal Assembly yesterday the following petition, urging that the free bridge be speedily completed by building the East Side approach already selected by the city (the Reber), the ground for which has been acquired.

Municipal Bridge Petition

To the Honorable Conference Committee of the Municipal Assembly of the City of St. Louis:

Gentlemen: The undersigned business and civic organizations respectfully beg to submit for your consideration the following points in connection with Council Bill No. 196 (known as the Hines bill), which has been referred to you, the Council having failed to concur in the amendments to the bill which were adopted by the House:

Council Bill No. 196 provides for the submission to popular vote of a proposition to increase the city's bonded indebtedness of $2,750,000 for the purpose of erecting the eastern wagon and railroad approaches to the municipal bridge across the Mississippi River upon the land heretofore acquired and owned by the city. The amendments to the bill, adopted by the House of Delegates, consists in the main of an increase in the amount of the proposed bond issue to $4,250,000, and in changing the location of the railroad approach from the right of way heretofore selected and acquired by the city, to a different route, the right of way for which has been offered to the city by the Alton & Mississippi River Belt Railway and Transportation Co.

The purpose of this paper is to point out to you why we are in favor of the passage of Council Bill No. 196 in its original form in which it passed the Council, and why we are opposed to the amendments adopted by the House of Delegates and to any amendments which would require the building of the eastern railroad approach upon any other right of way than that owned by the city.

A thorough understanding of the present situation cannot be had without a brief review of the various proceedings relating to the bridge matter.

The selection of the site of the bridge, involving, as it did, the incidental questions of approaches and terminals, was considered by the Assembly of great importance, and the location was decided upon only after the most careful investigation by a joint committee of both branches of the Assembly. The printed report of that committee and of the engineers employed to assist the committee ably states the advantages of the Chouteau avenue site over the other sites which had been suggested, and chief among those advantages, the report states, were the proximity of the bridge on the west side to the Mill Creek Valley, where the railroads are located, and on the east side easy connections with the existing railroads and a short approach.

The location of the bridge was established by ordinance No. 23,315, approved Nov. 22, 1907. The policy of the city in the bridge matter was thus fixed.

Upon the final approval of the location by the War Department, the Board of Public Improvements recommended and submitted to the Municipal Assembly in June, 1909, a draft of an ordinance to authorize the letting of the contract for the construction of the piers, constituting the first section of the work. The passage of that ordinance was an approval by the Municipal Assembly of the general plan for the bridge structure, which had been prepared by the Board of Public Improvements, and which general plan showed the lines for the wagon and railroad approaches on the east side substantially as they have since been acquired, excluding, of course, the extension of the railroad approach beyond Twenty-first street, to which more particular reference will hereafter be made.

Surveys of the rights-of-way for the approaches, as shown in the general plan approved in June, 1909, were made by the city surveyors, and an ordinance directing the institution of condemnation proceedings for the land for the wagon approach to its terminus and for the railroad approach through the land of the Southern Railway Co., a point a short distance east of the point of divergence of the railroad and wagon approaches, was introduced into the Municipal Assembly on January, 1909, and was, after much discussion and thorough consideration, passed and approved on March 31, 1910.

Several ordinances were passed during the spring and summer of 1910 directing the Mayor and Comptroller to purchase land for both the eastern wagon and railroad approaches, and in September, 1910, an ordinance was passed directing the condemnation of all of the land, which had not already been acquired by purchase for the wagon approach and the railroad approach to a point 600 feet east of the outer belt line in Twenty-first street in East St. Louis.

Numerous other ordinances were passed between that time and June 1, 1911, authorizing other purchases of land in these rights-of-way and appropriating money for the payment of damages awarded in condemnation proceedings.

During that period there were also adopted ordinances directing the making of crossing and easement contracts with the various railroads over whose tracks the approaches along these rights-of-way would cross.

Substantially all of the land for the wagon approach and for the railroad approach in these rights-of-way had been acquired by June, 1911, and the City of East St. Louis, upon a petition by the Mayor of St. Louis, enacted an ordinance vacating certain streets and portions of streets which will have to be closed or in which supports of the approaches will have to be erected and granting crossing rights over other streets. The bill authorizing the acceptance of the East St. Louis grant passed the Council by unanimous vote on July 25, 1911, but failed of passage in the House, and the grant was allowed to lapse by reason of the failure to file within six months a written acceptance thereof, as required by the terms of the ordinance.

In June, 1912, Ordinance No. 26,486 was passed, directing the purchase or condemnation of a strip of land to prolong the railroad approach right-of-way a distance of nearly three thousand feet eastwardly and terminating beyond the limits of the city of East St. Louis in the County of St. Clair. This is known as the Associated Retailers' Extension. This ordinance also authorized and directed the Mayor to again apply to the City of East St. Louis for the necessary street rights and authorized him to accept a grant thereof if it should be again made by the City of East St. Louis.

Pursuant to that ordinance the land for the prolongation of the railroad approach was purchased, the grant of the street rights in East St. Louis again secured and an acceptance thereof executed. Application was also made by the city to the Township Road Commissioners for the vacation of two roads, the closing of which will be made necessary by the descending approaches, and the vacation of these roads was ordered after the proper legal proceedings. The fee of the owners of the streets and roads vacated was also secured by purchase or condemnation. Petitions were then filed by the city with the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois for approval of the crossings of the approaches over railroad tracks and streets and the approval secured.

Summing up the matter, these proceedings have resulted in the following situation:

"The city now owns and possesses all of the land required for the eastern wagon and railroad approaches and has expended in the acquisition of this land $208,718.27, in addition to the heavy cost incurred in the condemnation proceedings and other litigation in connection with the acquiring of the land. The city has acquired the fee to most of this land, but some of it was secured by condemnation and the city has only an easement in that. All of the buildings and other improvements which were upon the land have been cleared away. The detailed drawings and specifications for the construction of the approaches upon the land owned by the city have been completed by the city's special bridge engineers, Messrs. Boller and Hodge of New York. So there is nothing to prevent the immediate letting of the contracts for constructing the approaches when the funds for the work have been provided. The approaches, if erected upon the rights-of-way owned by the city, and as planned in the prolongation ordinance, will not cross any railroads or highways at grade, and the railroad approach will come to the surface outside of the territorial limits of East St. Louis.

"Many ordinances were passed by the Assembly in the establishment and approval of the eastern approach rights-of-way during the sessions of 1909-10, 1910-11 and 1912-13, and some of the members of the present Assembly who were members during those sessions voted in favor of most of them. An examination of the list heretofore appended will show that Messrs. Ebrecht, Hall, McCarthy, Gallagher, Gazzolo and Scully of the present House and Messrs. Paule, Protzmann, Randall, Rower and Fletcher of the Council voted in the affirmative on many of these ordinances.

"Supported as it is by this legislation covering a period of over three years, each act being in a sense a ratification of all that preceded, and in which legislation, as we have just pointed out, some members of the present Assembly participated, it should hardly be necessary for us to have to justify the selection of the adopted approach. It would seem, too, a waste of time for you to attempt at this day to reconsider this matter, for, according to an opinion of City Counselor Baird, the chief law officer of the city, rendered June, 1913, the right-of-way for the eastern approach has been fully established and the city is without power to abandon it and select another in its place.

"But we are not content to rest our advocacy of the adopted approach solely upon these grounds. We are in favor of it for the following reasons:

"It is the most direct.

"It is the cheapest.

"It is the most practicable.

"It is the most easily accessible to the railroads.

"It is especially convenient to the coal carrying roads, and this will bring a reduction in the coal rate.

"The city owns all of the necessary land, for which it has spent $208,718.27.

"The contracts for the crossings over railroads have been made and the crossings have been approved by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois.

"The vacation of streets and street crossings for the approach have been secured from East St. Louis.

"The land has already been cleared of all obstructions.

"The detailed plans and specifications for the structural work on this right-of-way have been prepared.

"There will be no opposition from the citizens of East St. Louis nor any litigation to cause delay; and

"The contracts for the structural work could be let at once.

Engineers Favor Reber Approach

"The question as to which of the several suggested locations for the eastern railroad approach is the most desirable was submitted to a committee of the Engineers' Club of St. Louis in 1911. The committee consisted of Messrs. Calvin M. Woodward, Minard L. Holman, Eugene J. Spencer, Baxter L. Brown and Oliver W. Childs. These gentlemen, well known in the community and of high standing in their profession, after a thorough investigation of the matter, reported in favor of the approach which had been adopted and acquired by the city. A copy of their able report is herewith submitted, and we beg to refer you to the same for a more detailed statement of the merits of the adopted right of way.

"We shall endeavor, however, to answer briefly some of the objections which have from time to time been made against the adopted right of way, and all of which we believe are based upon a misconception of the facts.

"In the first place it has been stated that the approach would cross numerous steam and electric railroad tracks at grade. That is not correct. If brought to the surface as originally planned, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, it will cross only one track at grade, that of the Terminal belt line in Twenty-first street; and if prolonged as provided by ordinance No. 26,486, it will be carried over all tracks at an elevation of at least twenty-two feet in the clear, and these crossings for the prolonged approach have been approved by the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois.

"Secondly, it has been stated that the railroad approach will reach the surface within the limits of East St. Louis, and it is contended that thereby the City of East St. Louis will be vested with police powers over the structure, which it would not have if carried through the city at an elevation. It is not our understanding that the police powers of the municipality do not extend to property within its territorial limits which may be elevated above the ground; and it is idle to discuss that matter, for if the approach is built in accordance with the terms of ordinance No. 26,486 it will come to the surface quite a distance outside of East St. Louis.

"Bottled" Objection Not Valid.

"Thirdly, it is contended that railroads not members of the Terminal Association of St. Louis would not be able to reach the approach; that, as it is popularly expressed, the approach is "bottled." This same argument was advanced before the prolongation was made, but it was completely refuted when two railroads, not connected with the Terminal Association, acquired by condemnation and purchase rights of way up to the city's land. But if the only access to the approach were over the tracks of the Terminal Association, which a glance at the map will show is not the case, yet no railroad desiring to use the bridge could be denied the use of the tracks of the Terminal Association, for under the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the action instituted against that association by the National Government, the association is required to allow any independent line to use its tracks upon payment of fair compensation. An appeal was taken by the Government from the decree as entered, but this particular point is not involved in the appeal. The appeal grows out of the controversy as to whether the court has determined that the charges of the association are unreasonable and arbitrary. Another safeguard against any "blocking" of the approach is the provision in the general ordinance passed by the city, making it a condition to the use of the bridge by a railroad that it shall permit the use of its tracks by any other railroad.

Objections to A. & M. Approach

"Having stated the advantage of the adopted route, it is but fair that we should advise you of the objections to the building of an approach upon the right of way offered by the Alton & Mississippi River Belt Railway & Transportation Co. and described in the amendments to Council bill No. 196 adopted by the House. The objections to building an approach along that route, briefly, are these:

1. The cost would be greater than the cost for building an approach upon the adopted right of way, and there would be no corresponding increase in benefit to the city.

2. The approach would not be as accessible to railroads as the adopted approach.

3. The Alton & Mississippi Belt Railway Co. does not own the land which it proposes to convey to the city. Some of that land can only be acquired by condemnation, and condemnation proceedings, no matter how expeditiously conducted, take time.

4. If the land is acquired by the railroad company through its power of eminent domain, it will be acquired for railroad purposes, and the question will arise whether that easement can be conveyed to the city for a bridge approach; that is, whether the use to be made of the land by the city is the same as that for which the land would be condemned. A defendant land owner in a condemnation suit brought by the railroad might also raise the question whether the company was exercising its powers of eminent domain in good faith for its charter purposes. Irrespective of the final determination of the question, it would undoubtedly occasion uncertainty and delay.

5. Another ground which can be made the basis for prolonged litigation is the contention, concurred in by the City Counselor, that the city has not the power to select another approach in lieu of the one already adopted.

6. The approach would be merely part of the company's belt line, and the company would thus have a complete monopoly of the entrance to the approach.

7. The amendments to Council bill No. 196 impose upon the company no obligation to deed the right of way, but, on the other hand, the bonds, if voted, could only be used for the purposes set forth in the proposition, i. e., the construction of an approach along the line defined in the ordinance. The city would be dependent, therefore, entirely upon the company's moral obligation to convey the right of way. In view of the experiences which the city has had with the company and its promoters in the past, and reference to which experiences is hereinafter made, the enactment of legislation and the holding of a special election without any further guarantee from the company would scarcely be warranted.

"It has been stated in the public press that your committee has under consideration a modification of the Alton & Mississippi R. B. R. & T. Co.'s proposition, by shortening the approach, bringing it to the surface at the land known as the "Orthwein tract," and reducing the amount of the proposed bond issue to about $1,750,000. Such a change, even if it can be constructed at that cost, would, in our opinion, remove only one of the objections which we have above urged against the longer Alton & Mississippi approach, namely, that of cost of construction. All of the other objections would apply to the shorter route, and some of them with added force.

"In connection with this proposition of an approach terminating in the Orthwein Tract, we take the liberty of reminding you that Leo J. Scherer, the promoter, and, so far as has been made public, the only "backer" of the A. & M. Belt Railway Co., submitted to a Joint Conference Committee of the Municipal Assembly, in the spring of 1910, a proposition to convey to the city, free of cost, the right-of-way for a railroad approach over the same route and coming to the surface in the Orthwein Tract, and, in addition, offered to pay a bonus of $400,000 in cash. The written propositions, as well as the minutes of the meetings of the committee at which Mr. Scherer was present, were filed in the Mayor's office. The Assembly Committee carefully considered the proposition at that time, which was before any land had been acquired for the adopted approach, and rejected the offer, because they did not consider such an approach feasible, and also because Mr. Scherer refused to disclose to the committee who his associates or "backers" were.

A. & M. Course Criticised.

"Another, and what seems to us an unanswerable objection, to entering into any contract with the A. & M. R. B. R. & T. Co. is the fact that the company and its promoter have in every way possible endeavored to delay the early completion of the bridge. After the Assembly Committee had rejected Mr. Scherer's proposition to convey the right-of-way to the city for an eastern railroad approach, he incorporated the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co. under the laws of Illinois, and on the next day after the company had been granted a charter, it instituted condemnation proceedings in the Circuit Court of St. Clair County, Illinois, wherein it sought to condemn the land extending eastwardly from the easternmost pier of the bridge, including not only the land which had been staked out by the city for its approach, and which had been described in an ordinance approved on March 28, 1910, but including also the land surrounding the pier on the north, east and south sides.

"The suit was instituted about a week before the city filed its condemnation proceedings in the Federal Court, and if the A. & M. Co. had succeeded in its contention that, by reason of the prior filing of its condemnation suit, it had secured priority of appropriation, it would not only have been impossible for the city to have secured the land, for what we have designated as the adopted approach, but it would have been impossible for the city to have constructed any approach without crossing over the land of the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co. The city was not made a defendant in the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co.'s proceeding, and no notice of the filing of the suit was given to the city officials by the railroad company or Mr. Scherer. The city was compelled, for the protection of its interests, to institute a suit to enjoin the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co. from prosecuting its condemnation proceedings, and to file before the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois a protest against the granting to the company of permission to cross over the railroads in the line of the land it was seeking to condemn. In the injunction suit, the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co. questioned the power of the city of St. Louis to acquire and hold any land whatever in the State of Illinois.

"The company sought also to intervene in the city's condemnation suit against the Southern Railway Co., and endeavored to prevent the entry of the judgment in that case, on the ground that it had acquired priority of location and that any rights which the city could acquire through its condemnation proceedings were subject to the rights of the A. & M. Belt Railway Co. The only person other than the A. & M. Belt Railway Co. who questioned the power of the City of St. Louis to acquire lands in Illinois for the purposes of the bridge, was one Eugene Latinette, who was represented in the suit by the counsel of the A. & M. Belt Railway Co. This suit was carried by the defendant to the United States Court of Appeals at Chicago, and after his defeat in that court, Latinette exhibited a contract which had been made with him by Mr. Scherer and another East St. Louis real estate agent, by the terms of which the latter had agreed to provide him with counsel and to reimburse him for any expense he might be put to in contesting the city's suit, and to pay him the difference between the amount which had been offered him by the city and what he had been awarded by a jury. The main question raised in the Latinette case was the power of the City of St. Louis to condemn land in Illinois, and if the defendant had been successful in his contention, it would have been impossible for the City of St. Louis to have acquired any land for the eastern approaches, unless the assent of the State of Illinois through its General Assembly could have been procured.

Stockholders Not Investors.

"It was charged by the city in its injunction suit against the A. & M. Belt Ry. Co., that its capital stock of $25,000 had not been paid and that it was not a bona fide railroad, but merely organized for the purpose of forcing the city to accept the proposition of its promoter, Leo J. Scherer. In support of the allegations of its petition, the city took the deposition of one of the incorporators of the company, and he testified that all of the incorporators of the company except Thomas B. Lewis of St. Louis had acted at the request of Mr. Scherer and his attorney, and that they had no financial interest whatever in the enterprise. He further testified that the authorized capital of the company, $25,000, had been paid by the transfer of the equity in a piece of land in St. Clair County, but that neither he nor any of his associates had made any investigation as to the value of the land, but had accepted it upon the statements of Mr. Scherer and his counsel. The record encumbrance upon this land was nearly $6000 per acre, which, according to the estimates obtained by the city's special counsel, Mr. Maurice V. Joyce of East St. Louis, was more than the actual value of the land. That deposition was filed in the Circuit Court of St. Clair County, and we respectfully refer you to the files in that case for a full account of the proceedings.

Reber Approach Cheapest.

"When the application of the A. & M. Co. for crossing rights for the railroads, which proceeding was incidental to their condemnation suit, came up for hearing at Chicago before the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Illinois, and the facts had been fully laid before that body, the chairman of the commission announced that the granting of the application and the successful prosecution of the company's condemnation suit would "put the City of St. Louis out of business" in the bridge enterprise, and the commission refused to grant the permit. Thereupon Mr. Scherer and his counsel announced that all that they desired was permission to make a connection with the approach to be built by the city, at a point approximately 2300 feet east of the river, and permission was granted to the company to file an amended petition praying for a permit for such a connection. It was announced by the company's representatives at the hearing that the company intended to build an elevated belt line connecting with the municipal bridge at that point, and that if the permit were granted the company would dismiss out of its condemnation suit the land within the lines of the approach adopted by the city. This permit was granted in August, 1911, and the plans for the structural work were so made as to permit of the connection.

Pledged to Build Own Approach.

"We call your attention particularly to the granting of this permit and to the representations which induced the Railroad and Warehouse Commission to grant it, because if the company was acting in good faith in obtaining that permit, then it will construct its own elevated tracks connecting with the bridge approach at the same point where the proposed right of way described in the House Amendments to Council bill No. 196 diverges from the city's adopted approach. If the company stood ready at that time to obligate itself to construct its own approach, then it is hardly reasonable to now ask the city to construct it for the company. The representatives of the company also promised, as a condition to securing the permit for this connection, that the company would permit any other road to run over its tracks upon the payment of equitable compensation, an obligation which, as we have hereinabove pointed out, will be assumed by every railroad obtaining a permit to use the municipal bridge, under the rules and regulations which have been adopted by the Assembly.

"If the company was not acting in good faith when it obtained the permit to connect, then the city's representatives would certainly not be justified in entering into any new arrangement with it.

"In conclusion, permit us to emphasise, what every citizen imbued with any civic pride must keenly feel, that the failure to complete the bridge is working a great injury to the reputation of the city, and we feel sure that you will agree with us that this blot upon the fair name of St. Louis should be erased as speedily as possible. The early completion of the structure, it seems to us, can only be accomplished by at once submitting to the voters a proposition to issue bonds for an amount sufficient to build the eastern approaches upon the right of way owned by the city. A majority of those voting at the three previous bridge bond elections voted in favor of the proposition, and now that the clouds of misunderstanding of the subject are rapidly clearing away and the decision of the United States Supreme Court has removed all danger of obstruction of the approach by any one railroad or association of railroads, you may rest assured that the necessary two-thirds majority will be forthcoming. Supported, as the proposition will be, by the entire press of the city, and actively advocated by the members of our organizations, the adoption of the proposition is certain."

Attached to the petition as exhibits are the engineers' report upon the proposed locations for the east approach, a paper read by Comptroller Player at a meeting of the Conference Committee of the Business Men's League, and a record of the vote of some of the present members of the Municipal Assembly on the adopted approach bills.

DEAFNESS

Successfully Treated

By the Simplest Method Yet Discovered.

Ninety-five per cent of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits, stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Unless these deposits are removed relief is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always give relief. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. That there is a successful treatment of deafness and catarrh is demonstrated every day by the use of "Actina." The vapor generated in the "Actina" passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibrations of sound. "Actina" is also very successful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be relieved by a few weeks' use. "Actina" has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs, colds, headache, and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh.

"Actina" can be used with perfect safety by every member of the family for any affliction of the ear, throat or head. A FREE TRIAL of the "Actina" is given in every case.

SENATOR BACON DIES SUDDENLY IN WASHINGTON

Chairman of Foreign Relations Committee Ill Only 10 Days; Recovery Was Expected.

FUNERAL ON TUESDAY

Public Services in Senate Chamber Announced; Had Charge of Important Treaties.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Augustus Octavius Bacon, United States Senator from Georgia for nearly 19 years, and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee since the ascendancy of the Democratic party, March 4, 1913, died in a hospital here today after an illness of 10 days. He was the first United States Senator elected by direct vote of the people under the seventeenth constitutional amendment.

Though Senator Bacon had been seriously ill with kidney trouble and complications developing from a broken rib, his death was unexpected. It came suddenly at 2 p. m., and news became known in the Senate while it was in executive session.

The immediate cause of the Senator's death was diagnosed as a blood clot in the heart. Throughout the morning he had been in good spirits and it was announced to his colleagues that he was feeling better than for several days. Physicians had determined that an operation which had been contemplated was unnecessary. Despite his 75 years it appeared that the affliction from which he suffered was of recent origin and specialists believed it would yield to treatment.

Stricken After Talk With Daughter.

Half an hour before his death the Senator talked with his daughter, Mrs. W. B. Sparkes of Georgia. She had just left the room when he raised himself in bed. As Mrs. Sparkes re-entered the room her father fell back in collapse and never regained consciousness.

In the absence of Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, Senator Overman was notified, and proceedings in the Senate were abruptly halted when the North Carolina Senator announced the death. A brief resolution of respect was adopted and the Senate adjourned.

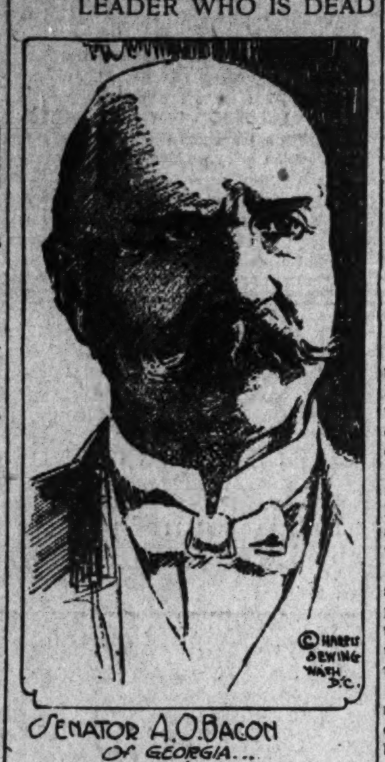
For several minutes the Senators, shocked at the sudden tidings, remained in the chamber discussing what should be done, but later arrangements were made for a public funeral to be held in the Senate Chamber next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, to be attended by the Senate and House of Representatives, the President of the United States and his Cabinet, Justices of the Supreme Court, members of the diplomatic corps, the Admiral of the Navy and Chief of Staff of the Army.

Announcement of Senator Bacon's death was made in the House later in the afternoon and resolutions of respect, presented by Representative Bartlett of Georgia, were adopted. Speaker Clark appointed as a special committee of the House, to co-operate with a Senate committee on arrangements for the funeral, the members of the Georgia delegation and Representatives Ferris, Willis, Mann, Payne, Gardner, Anthony, Dyer and Prouty. The House then adjourned.

Important Treaties Pending.

Senator Bacon's death comes at a time when general arbitration treaties with foreign nations are to be taken up for disposition, the treaties with Great Britain and Japan being of principal concern of the administration.

DEMOCRATIC SENATE LEADER WHO IS DEAD



©HARRIS &EWING WASH D.C.
SENATOR A.O.BACON OF GEORGIA...

The successor to Senator Bacon as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee probably will be Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, ranking Democrat on the committee, who, however, is confined to his home by illness. In his absence Senator Shively of Indiana, next in rank, is serving as acting chairman of the committee.

As to the succession in the Senate no contest can arise because of the seventeenth constitutional amendment. After this amendment had been proclaimed the Georgia Legislature was called in special session, and after Senator Bacon had been re-elected for his fourth term at a special election, a law was passed providing that the Governor of the State should make temporary appointment to fill a vacancy until the next special election.

Governor to Name Successor.

The regular election in Georgia will occur next October, at which time the senatorial election will occur. Meantime Gov. John Seaton of Georgia will name a temporary successor.

Former Gov. Joseph E. Brown and Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, were mentioned here today among possibilities for the temporary appointment. Gov. Slaton, it is said, will be a candidate at the primaries in August for the senatorial nomination.

President Deplores Death.

When President Wilson heard of Senator Bacon's death he was sitting at his typewriter. He wrote the following statement on his machine and issued it to the press:

All who knew Senator Bacon will sincerely deplore his death. It deprives the Senate of one of its oldest and most experienced members, a man who held with something like reverence to the traditions of the great body of which he was so long a part, and who sought in all that he did to maintain its standards of statesmanship and service. The great State of Georgia will greatly miss her distinguished son and servant. My own association with him had been of the most cordial, and, to me, helpful, sort. I particularly profited by his experience in foreign affairs.

Was Native of Georgia.

Senator Bacon was born in Bryan County, Georgia, Oct. 20, 1839, and for many years made his home in Macon. On being graduated from the University of Georgia Law Department in 1860, he entered the Confederate army and served during the campaigns of 1861 and 1862 as Adjutant of the Ninth Georgia Regiment in the army of Northern Virginia. Subsequently he was commissioned as Captain in the provisional army of the Confederate States and was assigned to general staff duty.

After the war Senator Bacon resumed the practice of law and took an active part in politics. He was president of the State Democratic convention in 1880 and was a delegate from Georgia to the Democratic national convention in Chicago in 1884. In 1871 he was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives, serving in the Legislature for 14 years and for eight years was Speaker of the House.

He was first elected to the United States Senate in 1894, re-elected in 1900, and again in 1907 by the Legislature. In 1913 he was unanimously re-elected in a general popular election, being the first Senator chosen by popular vote.

Bacon's Death Great Loss to Party, Senator Hoke Smith Says.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 14.—Senator Hoke Smith was greatly shocked when informed here today of the death in Washington of his colleague, Senator A. O. Bacon. "The death of no other Senator could have caused the Democratic party so great a loss," he said. "The place he occupied in the Senate cannot be filled."

STIFEL SUED FOR $2487, EXPENSES OF TAFT CAMPAIGN

Brewer Says Planters Hotel Suit Is Effort to Make Him Sole "Angel."

Otto F. Stifel, brewer and leader of the St. Louis Taft forces in the Republican pre-convention campaign of 1912, was sued by the Planters Hotel yesterday for a balance of $2470.40 due on the campaign headquarters bill.

Stifel said the suit was an effort to make him the sole "angel" of the St. Louis Taft campaign, in which he was associated with a number of other wealthy Republican business men.

But it was learned yesterday that some of the other Republicans are prepared to assert that they were "angels," too, and that if the Planters suit comes to trial, they will produce check stubs to show their angelic activities.

Stifel said he might have received money from the Taft Club to pay some of its bills—perhaps as much as $11,000—but not a cent of the money he got, he was sure, was for the hotel bill. He said he did not even receive a statement from the Planters until late in the fall of 1912.

He said he spent more than any other individual on the Taft campaign, and that he was an "easy angel," but that he would not undertake the role of "angel" again in a hurry.

$2000 Paid on Oct. 24, 1912.

Manager Hay of the Planters, in the suit, credits Stifel with having paid $2000 Oct. 24, 1912, on the ibll of $4470.40. Hay sent a bill last November to A. S. Werremeyer, one of the Taft Club executive committee, with the declaration that Stifel had paid $2000, and that the other members were equally responsible with Stifel for the balance.

As to this matter, Hay seems to have changed his opinion, for it was Stifel, and not the other Republicans, whom he named in his suit as being responsible for the balance.

The list of Taft Club officials, named by Hay in his letter to Werremeyer, included Charles Stix, former Mayors Walbridge and Kreismann, A. L. Shapleigh, Hanford Crawford, William H. Lee, Edwards Whitaker, Max Kotany, Theo F. Meyer, Charles F. Wenneker, Dr. M. C. Starkloff, O. L. Teichmann, Louis Kaltwasser, Fred Widman, Ben Schnurmacher, Fred W. Clemens, Henry Studniczka, Robert C. Day, Dr. Carl Barck, Joseph M. Ebeling and the late E. L. Adreon.

The Planters was Taft headquarters from Jan. 18 to April 20, 1912. E. L. (Liv.) Morse of Excelsior Springs was in charge of the headquarters.

Attached to the petition is the account rendered Stifel. It covers 15 pages. He is asked to pay for drinks, dinners, theater tickets, taxi rides, room rent and various items of expenditure which were incurred by visitors who were guests at the Taft headquarters. The cafe bill item alone was about $900, local and long-distance telephone calls $500, telegrams $360, cigars $40, a bar bill of $4 and about $300 for railroad tickets.

Service of waiters, messengers and "cash advanced" by the hotel also are among the items. The taxicab bill is about $35. There also are two items of "draft returned," one for $100 and the other for $50.25, which Stifel is asked to make good. It does not appear who issued the drafts, but the one for $50.25 appears as an expense incurred by Morse. Some of the guests not only got their room rent gratis, but they also charged up to their host such items as tailoring, laundry, cigars and local telephone calls.

The suit shows that among those who enjoyed the hospitality of the Taft headquarters and had lodging at the hotel were E. L. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Morse, E. L. Morse (friend), H. H. Morse, Mrs. Hendricks and friend, Mr. Brockmeyer, Politte Elvins, H. L. Eads, E. F. Haley and R. R. Quinn, J. W. Everman, J. E. Black, O. G. Boisseau, also O. G. Boisseau and L. O. Halliday.

Brockmeyer Bill $158.80.

In the four months Morse, the petition shows, occupied rooms 607, 435, 504, 515, 437 and 403. His headquarters were in room 420. His room and other expenses, including cafe, telephone service, telegrams and railroad tickets, were $576.75.

Mr. Brockmeyer, room 516, ran up a bill of $17.50, laundry 55 cents, cafe $22, telephone $11.70 and tailor $1 in seven days.

Capital of Province of Esmeraldas, to Be Scene of Decisive Battle.

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Feb. 14.—Notwithstanding the bombardment by Federal gunboats and heavy artillery of Esmeraldas, the capital of the province of the same name, the city still remains in the hands of the rebels.

Government forces have been landed to the north and to the south of the city with the intention of again surrounding the insurgents. It is believed that a decisive battle will occur next week.

Communication with the fighting zone is difficult. The news is sent by steamer from Esmeraldas down the coast to Bahia Caraquez, and from there telegraphed to Guayaquil.

AN effective catarrh remedy must have a double action upon the human system.

First, it must have a tonic effect upon the whole system; and, second, it must have a direct action on the catarrhal condition.

Catarrh begins with some form of capillary irritation, most commonly that condition known as catching cold. Catching cold causes a congestion of the mucous membrane, which may attack the head, throat, lungs or the mucous membrane of other internal organs.

The treatment of catarrh is, therefore, no longer guess work; the nature of catarrh is so thoroughly understood, and the action of the drugs so completely comprehended, that the remedy can be adjusted to the disease with an accuracy that almost approaches scientific completeness.

Peruna brings to the home the combined knowledge of several schools of medicine in the treatment of catarrhal diseases. Every ingredient of Peruna has a reputation of its own in the relief of some phases of catarrh.

Now Perfectly Healthy.

Mrs. Magdalena Winkler, 197 E. Main St., Westminster, Md., writes: "I thank you very much for your advice. I can safely say that Peruna and Manalin have saved my life.

"When I wrote to you the first time, asking your advice, my condition was so poor that I did not expect to live through the winter, but now I am perfectly healthy. I cannot praise your medicine enough, and I recommend it to others."

Peruna Restored Health.

Mrs. C. A. Reustrom, 3 Wash Ave., Salt Lake City, Utah, writes: "Your medicine, Peruna, has completely cured me of a long-standing case of catarrh.

"I suffered untold agony, but today I feel as spry as anyone, with more ambition and confidence in myself than I have enjoyed for years. All my friends say I look better than ever before.

"Your Peruna is the greatest tonic and builder for a broken-down constitution arising from that dreadful disease, catarrh."

Chronic Stomach Trouble.

Mrs. C. C. Ingram, R. R. 3, Trenton, Tenn., writes: "I think no medicine like Peruna. Being afflicted with stomach trouble about thirty years and have taken so much medicine for it and found nothing like Peruna. My weights before taking Peruna was about one hundred and twenty-five pounds, and I was so weak I could do scarcely anything. Now I am much better and weigh one hundred and forty-five pounds."

Catarrh of Stomach.

Mrs. Mary Depper, R. R. 3, La Crosse, Wis., writes: "I cannot too highly recommend your preparation for the relief of catarrhal troubles in various forms.

"I can truly recommend Peruna as the best remedy for catarrh of the stomach. You advised a treatment which I took until I felt well again. I was glad to know of something which would relieve me, and in a little over three months Peruna had successfully rid my system of all traces of catarrh.

"I therefore take great pleasure in wishing you every success."

Catarrh of Throat.

Mrs. Charles Atkinson, Pine City, Minn., writes that she had catarrh of the throat for nearly three months, and used different medicine to no purpose. A friend advised Peruna, and after taking two bottles she was cured.

Colds, Sore Throat, Swollen Tonsils.

Mr. Phil Hasterok, 3741 Ohio av., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "For two years I have been troubled with colds, sore throat and swollen tonsils. For the past eighteen weeks I could not drink any cold water or warm without a sticking pain in my throat. I have doctored with four as good doctors as I could find in St. Louis. The two last have told me I had an ulcerated tonsil and it must be cut out, but I did not like that cut out and I quit the doctor Christmas eve. My wife had told me a friend had the same trouble and was cured with Peruna. I have spent about $50, so I thought I would invest a few more cents and try Peruna. With one-half bottle I was relieved of all pains. I now have taken two bottles and I feel like a new man. I will recommend it to all my friends. Peruna does the work."

Catarrh of Long Standing.

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, member Rebecca Lodge, Iola Lodge; also member of Woman's Relief Corps, writes the following from 1838 Jackson St., Minneapolis, Minn.:

"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna.

"I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for over six years. I had tried several remedies without relief.

"A lodge friend advised me to try Peruna, and I began to use it faithfully before each meal. Since then I have always kept it in the house.

"I am now in better health than I have been in over twenty years, and I feel sure my catarrh is permanently cured."

Head, Throat and Stomach.

Mrs. Emma Kammerman, Palatka, Clay Co., Ark., writes: "I am glad to let you know that I am cured of catarrh.

"My condition was such that I could eat scarcely anything, and every little exertion fatigued me so that I was nearly always sick.

"Of all the medicines I have taken none helped me like Peruna and Manalin. Suffering with catarrh of the head, throat and stomach, I was only a care to my family. Now, however, I am well again, and I am glad that I obtained your advice.

"Hereafter I shall always have Peruna in mind, and I have found out also that it is an excellent remedy for little children."

Catarrh for Two Years.

Mr. Glenn Bogardus, 610 Jefferson street, Jamestown, New York, writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach for two years, and have doctored with a good many doctors and took all kinds of stomach medicine, and could not get any relief until I got a bottle of your wonderful Peruna and took three bottles, and will say that today I am entirely cured. I will say Peruna is the best thing to break up a cold I ever took. I only took three tablespoonfuls of Peruna and my cold was all gone."

Head and Lungs.

Mr. William E. Guilette, R. F. D. 2, Xenia, Ohio, writes: "After being sick for six or seven years I am more than glad to say that Peruna is better than any medicine I have ever taken.

"In the past twelve months it has cured me sound and well of catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst stage.

"I can recommend it to all of the world as being one of the best medicines on earth."

Peruna a Household Friend.

Chronic catarrh is a disease which is very prevalent. Peruna is a remedy for chronic catarrh, and is an immense saving to the people. Peruna is a household friend in more than a million homes. This number is increasing every day.—ADV.

PETITION FOR REBER APPROACH HEARD OVER GALLAGHER'S PROTEST

report from Voyles stated that Fletcher voted against it.

Delegate Scully inquired if Hildenbrandt was a former member of the House of Delegates. Upon being told that he was, Scully, excitedly threw his hands above his head, and shouted in a loud tone of voice:

"He's one of the men that voted to give Jep Howe a 50-year franchise. I want everybody to hear that. He's on record."

A. & M. Attorney Heard.

Former City Counselor Bates, employed as attorney for the A. & M. company, was given a most respectful hearing. The attitude of Gallagher, Scully and Hall was entirely different toward him than to Shapleigh.

Bates gave the committee a history of the Government's suit against the Terminal Railroad Association, and sought to convince the committee that the decision of the United States Supreme Court decreeing that the Terminal must throw open its facilities to all railroads, whether members or not, had not changed the railroad situation with respect to getting into St. Louis.

He declared that while the decision did provide that the terminal facilities must be opened to all railroads on equal terms, it was not applicable to the railroads constituting the Terminal Association with respect to their own lines.

He asserted that if the approach should be located where it would not be reached by any but Terminal proprietary lines, it would fall short of the purpose for which it was to be built. He asserted that the Reber approach would terminate between the railroad yards of the Southern on one side and the Illinois Central on the other, and would be inaccessible.

He declared that trains could not be operated at greater speed than six to eight miles an hour over roads on which grade crossings existed. The Reber approach, he insisted, would be an incomplete approach, and if built, would have to be, at some later time, extended to meet the requirements of traffic. It might also have to be elevated, he said, as the conditions on the East Side were such that railroad tracks could not be depressed.

Taking up the A. & M. project, Bates asserted that the 21-mile belt line would not be a railroad, but a part of the bridge approach. The city had the power under the Congressional grant, he insisted, to build any approach "necessary" to make the bridge accessible. He admitted that the cost of the A. & M. project would be greater than the Reber approach.

He was asked whether the Alton & Mississippi would have the power to acquire the right of way for the approach, and transfer it to the city. He said the company had the right to condemn land, and could condemn it as a railroad, and grant it to the city. He also expressed the opinion that the city had not exhausted either its power to condemn or acquire land for approach purposes, taking issue on that point with City Counselor Baird and former City Counselor Walther.

Col. E. J. Spencer, speaking for the Citizen's Committee, with the permission of the Joint Committee, stated that the matter of grade crossings and connections had become confused. There was a difference between the two, he said. Railroad trains were now operated over the network of tracks in East St. Louis without delay or trouble, he said.

Gerhart asked Spencer if the Alton & Southern, where it crossed the strip of East St. Louis which extends out to the bluffs, would not have to bring its trains to a full stop at each grade crossing. Spencer declared that the crossings referred to by Gerhart were six miles from the Reber approach, and that it was most likely that railroads desiring to use the bridge would build an elevated structure over those streets to eliminate grade crossings. This strip is about four blocks wide, extending like a tail of an aeroplane from city proper to the bluffs, and there meeting a similar tail like an extension of the city limits of Belleville.

Bates, taking up again the question of the city's power to condemn or acquire more land for the bridge approach, declared that the city had exercised this power a second time in purchasing land for the Associated Retailers extension.

He took cognizance of City Counselor Baird's recent interview in the Post-Dispatch, and attempted to convince the committee that Baird was wrong when he stated that no more land could be acquired unless it had been demonstrated by actual test that the Reber approach was inadequate.

Post-Dispatch Man Questions Bates.

After Col. Spencer had discussed the point he had raised with Bates and Gerhart, George S. Johns of the Post-Dispatch, who was invited to the hearing, sought permission of Chairman Fletcher to ask Bates several questions.

Johns said that he was seeking information, as he believed the members of the committee and others present were, and he wanted Mr. Bates to clear up particularly one statement he had made with regard to the United States Supreme Court decision in the Terminal suit. He said: "I am particularly interested in this because, for a generation, the Post-Dispatch has fought the Terminal monopoly as one of the great handicaps to St. Louis. Its course has frequently been governed by considerations arising out of the Terminal monopoly which had compelled St. Louis to pay the cost and maintenance of its bridges and terminals—the only city in the Union on which a burden of this kind rested. It was a vital question, therefore, as to what was the meaning and intent of the Supreme Court's decision."

Johns said he did not understand clearly the interpretation of that decision offered by Bates. Did Bates mean to say that under that decision any railroad could not use the Terminal properties and facilities—meaning the tracks and other facilities—of the Terminal Railroad Association? He said that he would like to submit to Bates the form of the final decree accepted by the Terminal railroad's attorneys as embodying the decision of the Supreme Court. He said he would like to read the first four points in that decree.

Chairman Fletcher asked him to read them.

He produced a copy of the memorandum brief for the Terminal Railway, submitted to the District Court of the United States as the plan of reorganization and final decree agreed upon as carrying out the provisions of the Supreme Court decision, submitted by H. S. Priest and T. M. Pierce, solicitors for the Terminal Railway, and read the following paragraphs:

> 1. By providing for the admission of any existing or future railroad to joint ownership and control of the combined terminal properties, upon such just and reasonable terms as shall place such applying company upon a plane of equality in respect of benefits and burdens with the present proprietary companies.
> 2. Such plan of reorganization must also provide definitely for the use of the terminal facilities by any other railroad not electing to become a joint owner, upon such just and reasonable terms and regulations as will, in respect of use, character and cost of service, place every such company as nearly on an equal plane as may be with respect to expenses and charges as that occupied by the proprietary companies.
> 3. By eliminating from the present agreement, between the Terminal company and the proprietary companies any provision which restricts such company to the use of the facilities of the Terminal company.
> 4. By providing for the complete abolition of the existing practice of billing to East St. Louis, or other junction points, and then rebilling traffic to St. Louis, or to points beyond.

Bates, answering him, said that he did not think that decision applied to the Terminal association as a railroad, in distinction from the Terminal association as a terminal system.

"What do you mean by that?" asked Johns.

"I mean," he said, "that as a railroad transporting freight or passengers from one point to another, for instance, transporting freight or passengers through St. Louis and not delivering them as a terminal system."

"Then you mean," said Mr. Johns, "that in so far as it applies to freight and passengers destined for St. Louis or originating in St. Louis, that is, on the entire system of the Terminal Railway as a terminal system within East St. Louis and St. Louis, this decision applies. But not on freight passing through and using the Terminal system as a railroad?"

"That is the way I understand it," said Bates.

"Then, so far as St. Louis traffic is concerned, this opens the Terminal system to any railroad entering St. Louis, on equal terms with any other railroad?"

In response to a question whether the arbitrary had been abolished, Mr. Johns replied that it had not been formally abolished, but that this point of the Supreme Court decision was still in controversy; and if it were not abolished in the final decree of the judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals, it would be taken to the Supreme Court for further interpretation. "But," he said, "the monopoly features of the Terminal Railway combined have been abolished. It can no longer compel railroads to enter into contracts with it to maintain monopoly practices charges. It was compelled to open its tracks and facilities to all other railroads on equal terms with the proprietary roads, without restriction. The railroads were free to use the Terminal facilities without agreeing to use only the Terminal facilities and without agreeing to make any special charges. It could no longer impose upon a railroad desiring to use it the monopolistic restrictions and charges which were imposed under its previous contracts, without agreeing to which no railroad could enter the city over its tracks."

He said he believed on account of this complete abolition of all monopoly features and restrictions, that the arbitrary would vanish, because the Terminal could no longer compel any road to charge it. There would be free competition between the roads using the Terminal tracks. The city could fix the terms upon which railroads could use the bridge and he believed the prime condition of using the bridge would be the abolition of all arbitrary charges against the city, and that in ordinary competition between the roads to serve St. Louis, the arbitrary would vanish.

Asked whether railroads in the Terminal Association, which of course are now free to use any bridge, would not refuse to use the Municipal Bridge, he said that he believed that railroads use the cheapest, best and most convenient facilities at hand if they are free to do so.

He said he made this full explanation of the changed conditions under the Supreme Court decision, because the Post-Dispatch had at one time viewed the Reber approach with suspicion and had opposed it as originally designed, because, under the old monopolistic con-

Aeolian Hall—musical center of Saint Louis

Every instrument offered at Aeolian Hall is of standard quality and each is recognized the world over as a leader in its class.

As the musical center of Saint Louis, Aeolian Hall is prepared to serve you with everything musical from a $50,000 Pipe Organ to a single Victor Record.

TheSteinwayPiano
(The Aeolian Company are exclusive Steinway representatives)

There can be no future regrets if the Steinway piano is selected for it leaves nothing to be desired, either artistically, musically or intrinsically.

In the Steinway Salons at Aeolian Hall will be found an entirely new group of Steinway pianos, just recently shipped from the Steinway factories.

Here for the first time in many years one may have an opportunity of selecting from a collection of Steinway pianos, every one of which embodies the latest development in construction and in case design.

Musicians are particularly invited to visit Aeolian Hall and examine the instruments in the Steinway Salon at their leisure.

Prices—Uprights, $550 and up—Grands, $750 and up.

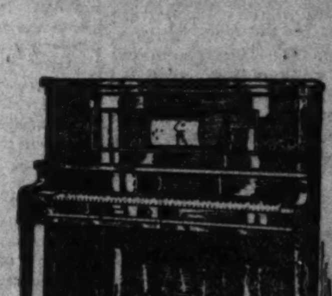
TheGenuinePianola
(Only at Aeolian Hall may one see the Genuine Pianola)

Even an ordinary player-piano will bring a certain amount of music into the home. If, however, one desires to throw open the entire world of music and to possess the means for artistically playing any composition, no instrument save a genuine Pianola will satisfy. It is unfortunate that the word Pianola is confused in so many minds with the term, player-piano. Pianola is a trade-mark name applying only to instruments of the Aeolian Company's manufacture, and in Saint Louis the genuine Pianola is displayed and sold only at Aeolian Hall.

Steinway Pianola
This musical and artistic triumph combines within one case the superb Steinway piano and the world-famous Pianola. No longer are the golden tones of this great piano reserved only for the master musicians' awakening — the Steinway Pianola provides for everyone the ability to play artistically upon the world's greatest piano.

Stroud Pianola
All over the world prominent musicians have commended this latest creation of the great Aeolian organization in the highest terms.

Its tone and action will awaken your enthusiasm. The player-action is a genuine Pianola with all of its exclusive features.



Among more than three hundred United States and foreign patents embodied in the Pianola and exclusive to it are the following vital features:

The Metrostyle, a device whereby the exact tempo phrasing of a composer may be reproduced at will through the following of a red tempo line with a pointer. The vital importance of this device can best be appreciated after one has tried it.

The Themodist, a device whereby the theme or melody may be automatically emphasized above the background of accompaniment. Without this feature music cannot be artistically played.

The Graduated Accompaniment, a device whereby the relation between the accompaniment and the melody or theme may be changed in contrast at will.

The Automatic Sustaining Pedal, a device whereby the difficult pedaling effects of the artist are automatically produced at the will of the player.

There is no good reason why you should even consider an imitation of the genuine Pianola. At Aeolian Hall you may secure a genuine Pianola piano for as little as $550 Terms, $3 a Week

Victor Victrolas

SOLDAN PROTESTS M'KINLEY'S ONE-POINT VICTORY

West-End Team, Beaten In Waning Moments, Objects to Referee's Decision—Central Wins.

Among the important incidents concerned with last night's interscholastic league basket ball double header were the clinching of the pennant by Central and a probable protest in the Soldan-McKinley set-to. In the opening game Central defeated Yeatman, 30 to 22, and the worst the mid-city quintet can now gain is a tie with McKinley. The second contest was a thriller from the start to the finish, McKinley defeating Soldan, under protest, score 26 to 25.

After fighting on even terms for the entire game, the score of the final was a 25-point tie, with but one-half minute to play. At this juncture Referee Hardin called a double foul and French and Smedley were chosen by their respective fives to toss the penalties. The South Sider succeeded in netting his throw, but the Soldanian failed. This put the McKinley quintet in the lead, 26 to 25. The ball was then centered and after Chalfont had received the jump, Ruel of Soldan threw a basket just as the whistle blew, giving two points and the game.

Decision Is Reversed.

Referee Hardin allowed the shot, but Voss, the umpire, claimed that time was already up. Hardin allowed the latter's claim and reversed his decision, making the tally void. This consequently gave the contest to McKinley. The West Siders here made a kick and after much fruitless argument became aggressive, only to be removed from the floor by other players. The protest probably will be filed tomorrow.

The game started with a rush and after a few minutes play McKinley gained a 2-point lead when Fuerborn made a tally. This advantage however was short lived as the Union avenue boys came back with a field goal. Owing to the splendid work of Marsh and McCormack, Soldan left the floor at the end of the first half with the score 16 to 15 in their favor.

Double-Foul Settles Game.

McKinley at the opening of the final period tied Soldan and forged a point in the lead through a free throw by French. The lead as in the first half changed until the time of the double foul called by Hardin. The new lineup shown by Coach Voss proved to be a wise change.

The opening encounter, in which Central humbled Yeatman, was of great interest until the last half. The game was fast and although Central had a slight lead from the start it looked like anybody's game from the start. The North Enders weakened at the end of the first period as the combination of Kansteiner to McElwee to Martens proved to much.

Princeton's Victory Over Harvard Causes Triple Tie in Hockey

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A triple tie in the intercollegiate ice hockey series was created when Princeton defeated Harvard, 4 to 2, here, tonight, both teams now being tied with Yale, with two wins and two losses.

Kilner started the scoring for Princeton but goals by Smart and Wanamaker put Harvard in the lead. Baker, for Princeton, evened up the score just before half time. Princeton's defense was impregnable in the second half, while Kilner and Baker scored again. Princeton and Harvard will play off their tie here next Saturday.

Racquet Finals Postponed.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Feb. 14.—On account of the railroad blockade, due to the snowstorm, the finals for the gold racquet championship here were postponed today until tomorrow.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Four More Rickeys Needed.

NO, fellow mahogany-polishers; this is not the sort of rickey you have in mind. The reference above is rifled at one Branch Rickey, commander of the 45 Brownies now on route to St. Petersburg, Fla., where they are to be sifted down to one big league nine.

Branch had better pick himself out a reliable alienist, and have him on the spot. With one ration of eyes, brains, ears and motor equipment, he is undertaking to look over five separate nines which compose his squad, see the virtues and faults in each, find out if these are temporary or permanent, get sufficiently well acquainted with each man to know his temperament and mental poise, and at last come out and say: "This is my best first baseman, shortstop, outfielder, pitcher, etc.; this is my next best first baseman, shortstop, etc."

If Branch could whack himself up into five parts, each part just as able and keen as he himself is, he might surround this situation to the extent of at least giving them all a "once-over." That he can hope to put into fit physical condition and teach the theory and practice of playing baseball to this squad in addition, and all alone, is sheer absurdity.

IT CAN'T BE DONE OUTSIDE OF THE PADDED CELL.

Thanks to Mr. Stallings.

APPEARS very much as though Charles Webb Murphy were running for Sweeney (Bill).

• • •

Garry Put the Aint in Saint.

CONSIDERING the pioneer baseball work of Herr Herrmann, it's remarkable that the baseball world has not re-christened Cincinnati, St. Owgoostine.

• • •

Ban Johnson Was There.

AND, by the way, Garry—where were you when the cyclone struck New York?

• • •

Bright Future for Murphy.

IF Charley Murphy ever gets down to his last $100,000 he can earn his daily lobster a la Newberg by signing up as a fog horn or a train caller. At "calling" Charles is there. Ask Ban.

• • •

About the New Rules.

MILLER HUGGINS and his fellow members of the Rules Committee made few radical changes, while combing the statutes for flaws. Here is the result of their findings:

If a pitcher drops the ball just as he's about to throw, it goes as a balk.

A base runner may not advance on an infield fly.

Base runners may take as many bases as possible if a thrown ball hits an umpire who is on fair ground.

Pitchers are now permitted to stand on the rubber.

Coachers on first and third may now address the batter.

Coachers on third may no longer interfere with the runner turning third by touching him, under penalty of a putout against his side.

If a hit ball is touched by a glove or cap thrown at it by a fielder, it goes for two, instead of three bases.

Where the Shoe Pinches.

THE Federal League is putting up some queer angles to baseball people. For instance, according to the financial side of the latest deal, Johnny Evers is to average $15,000 a year from his four-year contract and bonus. Ty Cobb gets but $12,500 per year. He's worth only about three or four of Evers.

"AMBLE, ramble, gamble, scramble —don't argify," will have to be the slogan of the Federal League, if it is to open its gates in the cities of its circuit, just two months from today, at the windup of its "big-league-or-bust" campaign.

And the bulk of the organization's busy little minutes henceforth will be devoted largely to gambling and scrambling. It's a SCRAMBLE to get ready in time and a big GAMBLE afterwards.

Six Parks to Be Built.

THE chief cause for worry lies with the parks. In St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, Brooklyn, Buffalo and Baltimore complete new stands must be erected, ground prepared and diamonds laid off and seasoned. Were wooden stands permitted in all the cities the task might be considered reasonable; but some of the plants are of concrete and steel, with big league fixings—and they will take time to complete.

May Delay Opening.

HOWEVER, the Federal schedule is not yet promulgated and the club owners will doubtless find specifically that they are certain to have at least four parks ready before they give the opening date as April 14.

Ay, There's the Rub.

NEXT to the grounds, the chief item of worry will be the developing of eight teams. At present no living man knows the prospective make-up of the clubs of this organization, since the players are to be pooled. The task of taking a bunch of new material and whipping it into big league condition in two months is a problem that SHOULD CAUSE GRAY HAIRS FOR SOME OF THE MEN WHO ARE UNDERTAKING TO MANAGE A CLUB FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THEIR LIVES.

However, Hughey Jennings grabbed a sixth place club on no previous acquaintance and remodeled it into a pennant winner in one season. There's hope for all, with that precedent to go by.

Curtain for E. Rube Waddell.

THE curtain is down on the eccentric career of Rube Waddell. In a letter to a manager who sent him a contract, down in sunny San Antone, HE ADMITS HIS PHYSICAL CASE IS HOPELESS.

So passes ingloriously into oblivion a career that might have surpassed the performances of Mathewson, Johnson and Walsh. Waddell owned an extraordinary physique and an arm without a peer. Being a left-hander, he was all the more cut out for the limelight.

But, extraordinary as were his physical gifts, his capacity for exhausting them was even greater. Rube, today, is a victim of his own self-indulgence.

Waddell should be independently wealthy, healthy and pointed out on the street as the most wonderful left-hand pitcher in the game. HE OUGHT STILL TO BE TWIRLING GOOD BALL.

The moral of Rube Waddell's finish is, of course, too obvious to need stating. But it's queer to note that it's a moral that seems never to appeal to the rising generation. Each, in its turn, supplies some superman, physically, who elects himself as the boy who can fight John Barleycorn, and put him out.

It's a big mistake. Many have PUT HIM DOWN, but none has yet PUT HIM OUT.

English Rugby Men Beat Irish.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—King George and Premier Asquith saw the English 15 today beat the Irish team by 17 points to 12 in the third game of the international rugby football series. The match was played at Twickenham, near London and 20,000 spectators saw the contest. The first match in the series played Jan. 17 was won by England over Wales and the second match on Feb. 7 by Wales over Scotland.

THREE RECORDS FALL IN I. A. A. C. RELAY CARNIVAL

New Marks Are Hung Up in Shotput, Low Hurdles and 1000-Yards Run.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A world's record for the 28-pound shot-put, with follows—36 feet 8½ inches—was made by Patrick Ryan, unattached, and the world's record for the 75-yard low hurdles—9 seconds—equalled by John J. Eller of the Irish-American Athletic Club at the games of the latter club at Madison Square Garden here tonight.

A new American indoor record was made in the 1000-yard invitation run for the McAlleenan trophy, Thomas J. Halpin of the Boston A. A. winning in 2:15, four-fifths of a second better than the record of A. R. Kiviat. The former world's record in the shot-put event was held by Dennis Horgan, 36 feet 3 inches. R. Templeton of San Francisco had run the hurdle event in the same time on Feb. 21, 1913.

Kramer Beats Kolehmainen.

In the two-mile scratch race, W. J. Kramer, Long Island A. C., defeated Hannes Kolehmainen of the Irish-American A. C. The time was 9m. 18 2-5s. A. R. Kiviat dropped out after going a mile and a half.

In the two-mile intercollegiate relay, Cornell (H. E. Irish, D. F. Potter, C. L. Spreden and D. S. Caldwell). defeated Yale (G. E. Brown, C. S. Bayne, R. M. Scotten and H. W. Smith) The time was 7:59 1-5.

Tiger Five Wins Second Close Go From Ames, 23-16

Although Speelman Is Disqualified, Missouri Manages to Finish on Top.

AMES, Io., Feb. 14.—Slippery handling of the ball today cost Ames another victory over Missouri University's basket ball team to match the one yesterday, having lost 24 to 21 yesterday. Missouri won over the Cyclones, 23 to 16, today.

Wear, for Missouri, and Swiney, for Ames, forwards, were the offensive stars. Both teams guarded closely. The Tigers played a greatly improved game today. Speelman, the Tiger center, was put out of the game by the referee for making illegal use of his feet after he had started the scoring by landing the first basket. Swiney, who did half of the scoring for Ames, was worn out and relieved by Porterfield. Lineup:

MISSOURI.	Positions.	AMES.
Drumm	Right forward	Dowell
Wear	Left forward	Swiney
Speelman	Center	Holmes
Cheek	Right guard	Hansell

Substitutes—Porterfield for Swiney, Roeser for Speelman. Field baskets—Swiney 2, Holmes, Hansell, Dowell 2, Wear 4, Speelman, Cheek 2. Free baskets—Swiney 4, Wear 5. Referee—Stewart of Iowa.

Jim Delehanty Is Released.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 14.—"Jim" Delehanty, who came to the Minneapolis club from the Detroit Tigers following the famous strike of members of that team in 1912, was tonight given his unconditional release by President M. E. Cantillon. It was said Delehanty expects to become manager of a team in a smaller league. Fred Hunter, first baseman for the Minneapolis club, signed his 1914 contract tonight.

Whitlock Beats 22 Millionaire Golfers

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 14.—W. M. Whitlock of Nice, Italy, formerly a New York manufacturer, today won the five-day millionaires' golf tournament on the Raymond Hotel links, defeating A. Adler, a clothing manufacturer of Rochester, N. Y., by one stroke. Whitlock negotiated the 18-hole course in 90 strokes. He was opposed in the tournament by 23 other players, all of whom are rated as millionaires.

High Rifle Score for Season.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The District of Columbia team in the interclub rifle shoot made the highest score of the season by scoring 966 out of a possible 1000. Warren, Pa., still leads Class A with eight straight wins.

Plank's Salary Demands Refused by Connie Mack

Pitcher Who Won Final Game of World's Series Is Only Holdout on Quaker Club.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—Eddie Plank, the hero of the final game of last year's world series, when he let New York down with only two hits, has returned his unsigned contract to Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics.

The veteran pitcher was offered the same salary he received last year, but he wants an increase. Connie Mack says he will not grant the request, as Plank is a high-priced man and the club has reached its limit in his salary.

So far as can be learned, Plank has not threatened to jump the club. He is the only member of the champions who is holding out for more money.

American League Declares War on National; Demands Murphy's Head

"We Will Stop at Nothing to Eliminate the Present Management of the Chicago National League Club," Declares Ban Johnson—Says Federal League Is a Blessing in Disguise.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.

"THE American League has declared war," declared B. B. Johnson today. "We will stop at nothing to eliminate the present management of the Chicago National League Club from organized baseball. It is, to my mind, essential that President Tener of the National League and Garry Hermann, president of the National Commission, be clothed with absolute authority to remove from the National League any club owner held to be a detriment to the game."

Johnson, roused by Charles W. Murphy's threat to take legal action against him, broke today the silence he has maintained since the joint league conference in New York and outlined his plan to maintain between the major leagues the good understanding, which he asserted, was menaced by the present conduct of the Cubs. The American League, he intimated, was prepared to go the length of changing the national agreeement or of favoring the formation of another major league.

Should Remove Menace.

"I am clothed with absolute power by the American League to remove any club owner who is regarded as a detriment to the organization," declared Johnson. "The heads of the National League should have the same power.

"At my meeting in New York with Tener, Herrmann, Baker, Dreyfuss and three or four others I told them that if the National League could not control this discordant element here in Chicago that the American League would be no longer able to dovetail with their organization. I told them that Tener and Herrmann should have the power that I have—to remove any club owner who was a menace to the game. There will be no backward step on the part of the American League. We are prepared to go to any length to get rid of this influence in Chicago.

"We had a four-hours session," added Johnson and at its conclusion I understood the National League owners would go into executive session and take action in connection with the situation as I presented it to them. Secretary John Heydler of the Nationals promised to send me a copy of the record of whatever was done for my information."

Baseball's Hardest Blow.

Johnson said that the entire baseball world was indignant that Evers should be dropped a few days before the team started on its training trip.

"Nothing could be more harmful to baseball," he declared. "Evers had just been sent South to look over training quarters and had been commissioned to sign a number of players, men whose signature I doubt Murphy could have obtained without the aid of Evers. Then he was dropped at a few days' notice when he thought in perfect good faith that he had a five-year contract. Of course Evers was dropped in accordance with the provisions of his contract, and he should have known what he was signing before he signed it. But we don't want that sort of thing in baseball. We want perfect confidence between players, owners and public.

Trap Set for Evers.

"The late Billy Locke witnessed the signatures to Evers' contract, and he came to me afterward and said that Evers was standing over a trap door and didn't know it. The side agreement attached to the contract provided that Evers might be dropped at 10 days' notice, but Evers signed it without reading it. We can't afford to betray the confidence of a ball player in that manner.

"This is the big issue in baseball now and not the Federal League. I think the Federal League comes to us now as a blessing in disguise. The American League has set out to see this matter through and we will not falter until it is satisfactorily settled.

"The national agreement," declared Johnson, "can be changed at any time by a majority vote of the parties interested. It doesn't require a unanimous vote.

"As to Murphy's threats against me personally," said Johnson, "they are mere vaporings. I do not reply to them, but I indicate by what I have said how far the American League is prepared to go. The American League cannot dovetail with the National League under present conditions."

Murphy Will Sue Johnson.

Murphy said today he had not heard from his lawyer in Texas on the subject of the threatened suit against Johnson. He reiterated, however, that the suit would be filed.

Murphy added to previous statements that he would enforce the delivery to him of Perdue and Sweeney or enjoin them from playing, he declared that he had not yet released Evers.

"I have still my contract with Evers and I certainly won't turn him over until I have Perdue and Sweeney. Yes, it is true that the transfer papers, signed by Gaffney and myself are in my possession, but the deal was to be completed by the delivery of the men."

The Chicago Federals will start March 8 for Shreveport, La., on their training trip, it was announced at headquarters here today. Joseph Tinker, manager, said that he signed today George Mulvaney a semi-pro. catcher of Cincinnati.

"We gave him a tryout last season," said Tinker, "and he is a good one, much like Jimmy Archer."

TENER SAYS MURPHY WILL GET FAIR DEAL

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.

GOV. JOHN K. TENER, the new executive of the National League, who hurried here last night after a brief visit to Harrisburg, Pa., left for Washington today to attend the Gridiron Club's dinner there tonight. Before leaving he said he had discussed the Murphy-Evers matter with Presidents Herrmann, Dreyfuss, Ebbetts and Gaffney, and he felt that everything so far had been arranged satisfactorily.

"There is no doubt," Gov. Tener said, "that the National League will see that the Chicago club is fairly dealt with in relation to the loss of Evers and the matter will be adjusted soon. Hereafter the affairs of the League will be carried on with a broader idea of sportsmanship. No individual club will be permitted to conduct its affairs without consideration for the other club members and the benefits of the League in general."

No Soccer Games Today.

All soccer games scheduled for today at both Athletic and Robinson Field, were called off yesterday afternoon because of the condition of the grounds. The snow is too deep for the proper presentation of the kicking game.

Iowa U. Captain Resigns.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Feb. 14.—Lee Dick, captain-elect of the Iowa football team, resigned today. The action caused surprise in athletic circles, as he had just recently been declared eligible by the Conference Committee. Dick announced that he had decided to complete his school work and graduate next June.

H. C. Frick to Back Feds

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.

WHILE James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League and Robert B. Ward, owner of the new Brooklyn "Feds," would neither confirm nor deny the report, it was said tonight that Henry C. Frick, the millionaire steel magnate, will be the real backer of the Pittsburg team of the "Outlaw" organization when the 1914 season begins.

On good authority, it was learned that President Ward has already been in communication with Frick, and the Brooklyn owner expects to hear favorably from the steel magnate in a short time.

Ward and Frick were boyhood chums and spent most of their years in Pittsburg. Both of them have been closely connected in business for many years.

If Frick decides to invest some of his fortune in the Pittsburg club, the Federal League will have three millionaire backers.

Keeler Slated as Manager of Brooklyn Feds

Famed Outfielder of Old Orioles Will Take Charge of Outlaws, Is Rumor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—After a stirring week of baseball politics, the majority of those most interested in the business end of the national game have left for their homes to prepare for the playing season.

President James A. Gilmore of the Federal League and his counsel, E. E. Gates, left for the West today. Prior to their departure they had a long talk with R. B. and G. S. Ward, the financial backers of the new Brooklyn (Federal League) club. They expressed themselves as being entirely satisfied with the result of their efforts to place a Federal club in Greater New York territory. Gilmore said he hoped to secure the financial backing of H. C. Frick of Pittsburg.

Walter S. Ward, secretary of the Brooklyn Feds said today that Washington Park will be ready for the first scheduled games of the season.

Just who will be appointed as manager of the new club has not been divulged by any one connected with the Federals, but persistent rumor has it that Willie Keeler, a Brooklynite, a player known to fame wherever baseball has a foothold, is very likely to be the one selected.

It was officially stated here today that Pitcher Walter Manning, formerly of the New York Americans, had sent a signed contract to Federal headquarters.

FEDERAL SCARE BLOCKS BIG DEALS, HUG SAYS

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14.—Miller Huggins, just returned from the New York meeting, says that practically all contemplated trades, deals and sales, both between the majors and between majors and minors, were found impossible on account of the turmoil now prevailing in the baseball world.

"Every time a magnate wanted to make a trade or sale," said Hug, the other fellow instantly answered: 'Will you guarantee to deliver the man?' Several deals which had almost reached completion were ended when the buyers wrote on the papers: 'Payable when the player signs.' I never saw anything like it in my life."

Hug says Pitcher Trekell announces his retirement to a Montana ranch, rather than go to the minors.

Western M. A. Defeats Principia.

In a well played game of basket ball, Western Military Academy of Upper Alton defeated the Principia five at the latter's gym yesterday afternoon, 49 to 43. Scoring by both sides was plentiful throughout the game. Kaw of the science school rolling up 20 points at the center position. The star of the visiting aggregation was McCord an excellent roving guard.

SOLDAN ONLY TEAM NOT REPRESENTED ON ALL-STAR FIVE

McKinley and Central Each Get Two Men on Interscholastic League's Best Turnout.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL

Task of Picking Best Squad This Season Made Hard by Number of Stars.

This Year's All-Star Interscholastic Quintet

First Team.	Position.	Second Team.
French (McK.)	Left field	(S.) Smedley
Martens (C.)	Right field	(C.) McElwee
Shanley (Y.)	Center	(C.) Kansteiner
Nies (C.)	Left guard	(Mc.) Coates
Fitzgerald (Mc.)	Rt. guard	(S.) McCormack

Picking an all-interscolastic basket ball team for the season of 1913-14 is a far more difficult problem than it was for the previous year. In the last race there were but a few real good players, and they showed up doubly well playing together on the same quintet—McKinley. The remainder of the league was made up of more or less mediocre players, probably with the exception of two or three. Consequently such players as French, Fitzgerald and Herbert loomed up better than they really were.

This year, however, the teams were far better balanced, not one being without the services of at least two competent boys. The guards as a whole were better as is shown by the more reasonable scores. The forwards were just as dependable and undoubtedly superior as a whole, but owing to the better guarding were not as flashy. However the center position was considerably weak this season, only one boy showing any real class.

Small, but Oh My!

Picking the first five, the forward positions appear as the greatest stumbling blocks. These places on all the teams were covered by unusually small and extremely fast boys. Among them were McElwee, Martins, Marsh, Krause, French and Smedley, all who are commendable. However, after looking over the records of each, Martens of Central, and French of McKinley, seem to have the best claims for the coveted positions. Besides, having proven themselves the best field basket snarers in the league, the boys rank among the best in throwing free goals. Incidentally, as French would be serving his second season on the mythical five, this year as captain.

At the guards there also are a likely bunch of tossers. Coates, Fitzgerald, Ruel, McCormack, Nies and J. McElwee, all of whom are excellent qualities. One distinctive feature of the guards' play this year was their scoring ability.

At this position Russell Nies seems to have the call on the rest of the candidates, gaining this reputation by his wonderful field play against French. As a whole, fewer baskets were netted by Nies' men than against any other guards. The other side goes to Tiny Fitzgerald of McKinley, although this player did not show as well this season as he did the last. This is also the latter's second year on the all-prep quintet.

Shanley to Play Center.

The center is more easily picked as the chosen one is the only boy who showed to any advantage at that position at all. He is Shanley of Yeatman High. "Tex" in several of the games played by his team gained more points than any two other men on his team. He is a tall boy, and therefore often gets the jump on his opponent.

In picking the second team, the best suited forwards are Smedley and Claude McElwee, the latter the Central captain. Smedley, who lined up with the Soldan five, probably would have shown up better had he been with a stronger aggregation. The guards will most suitably be McCormack, also of the gold and brown, and Coates of the South Siders.

Kansteiner gets the center office, having a slight advantage over Chalfont. The lithe jumper did not do very well at the first of the season, but played like a whirlwind at the close. After having this year's experience he should prove very competent next year.

Sox to Play 40 Games on Spring Training Junket

Heaviest Barnstorming Schedule in Years Mapped Out for Callahan's Team.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—One of the heaviest "barnstorming" schedules for years will be played by the Chicago Americans on their spring training trip. The schedule, announced today by Secretary Harry Grabiner, includes 40 games for the first squad and 35 for the second.

The squad will leave Chicago Thursday night for Paso Robles, Cal. About 50 will compose the party, but the exact number is not yet known. Many of the White Sox will not be on the train. Scott, Weaver, Benz, Daly, Slight and Manager Callahan are with the world tourists and will not reach California until about March 15. Other members of the team are already in California and will go direct to Paso Robles from their homes. In the absence of Callahan, "Kid" Gleason will have charge of the squad.

The first team will begin playing in California March 5 at Oakland and during March will be in California and Arizona.

Sharkey Forgot He Had a Jaw When He Trained for Battle With Ruhlin

Fighting Sailor Toughened His Ribs by Having His Brother Jump on Them Daily, but a Swat to the Jaw Finally Stopped Him.

UNTOLD TALES OF THE RING

THIS is the seventh of a series of inside stories of famous fights written for the Post-Dispatch by Robert Edgren. The series consists of true sidelights on famous battles, and have never before reached the eye of the public. Mr. Edgren's articles are appearing each Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1914, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

I WENT from London, 30 or 40 miles, out to a little English village called Chipperfield, and there, at the sign of the Two Brewers, I found Tom Sharkey.

In those days Tom was a broth of a lad, if ever there was one. No stronger and faster man of his weight ever put on a boxing glove. He was a small edition of the Hercules in the Museum at Naples, but done in bone and muscle instead of cold marble. And "fight" was his middle name.

Sharkey, that June day, was training for a fight with Gus Ruhlin in the National Sporting Club of London. He had been hard at work for a couple of months, for this was the turning point in Sharkey's life—the fight that was to decide whether he was still a contender for the championship or a has-been.

There was only one thing the matter with Sharkey. He had one weak spot. In the desperate 25-round fight with Jeffries for the world's championship he had forced the pace even when Jeffries met him with terrific right-hand drives into the body that might have knocked down a mule. Before that battle Sharkey always had been absolutely invulnerable to any blow except the solar plexus punch of Fitzsimmons. But the battering given by Jeffries, concentrated as it was, had broken several ribs, and when Sharkey fought again he found that he couldn't take punishment on that spot without immediately weakening.

Sharkey Explains His Plan.

I MET Tom, and after he had taken me in and shown me the ancient tap room of the Two Brewers, with its fireplace 800 years old, and its floor and benches that were worn down until the hard knots stood up an inch above the softer wood, we went to the loft where he did his training. No spectators were allowed there, for Tom's preparation for the Ruhlin fight was rather mysterious.

"You see," Tom explained, "Ruhlin is a good body puncher, and he'll figure on getting me with blows on my busted ribs. That's where I'll fool him. I want him to punch at my ribs until I knock him out, because I'd rather take it there than anywhere else. Feel these bumps. That's where my ribs were broken, and now they've grown twice as thick there, and stronger than ever. I'm working those ribs every day and making them tough. That's the secret. I'll show you, but you mustn't tell anybody." And Tom winked mysteriously.

A few minutes later Tom stripped to his fighting togs and stretched himself flat on the floor. "Come on, Jack," he called. To my amazement, Brother Jack Sharkey, who was something of a heavyweight himself, walked over, leaped high in the air and came down solidly with his heels planted squarely over Tom's broken ribs. Tom grunted and grinned.

Lucky to Be Alive.

"GO to it," he ordered. And for five or ten minutes Jack jumped up and down on the broad chest of his big brother.

"What do you think of that?" asked Tom finally. "Gus won't be able to hurt me after that."

"I think," said I, "you'll be lucky if you aren't crippled before you fight him."

"Aw, it doesn't hurt," grinned Tom.

Next Sharkey stood up against a wall while Jack and Johnny Gorman took turns pelting a big heavy medicine ball at his ribs—later on that was Joe Jeanette's favorite stunt. Sharkey only grinned when the big ball struck him. And then he stood with his stomach thrown out while Gorman hammered at his ribs with gloved fists. Sharkey seemed to shed the blows as easily as a duck sheds rain drops.

That day, and on succeeding days, Sharkey's work was nearly all intended to toughen those ribs. He never felt any other weak spot, and he didn't intend to have one when he fought Ruhlin again. Ruhlin had beaten him in New York. Tom was out for revenge.

On the evening of the fight Sharkey, grinning down from the ring, motioned silently at his ribs, as if there was a great joke to be played on Ruhlin when he began looking for the soft spot.

Sharkey Drops Ruhlin.

IN the first round it looked as if the joke might be on Gus, too, for Sharkey, rushing at him pell-mell, knocked him flat with a wild swing, and when he rose put him down again with a smash in the body. Gus managed to last out the round by dodging Sharkey's triumphant plunges. In the interval Billy Madden talked forcibly to Ruhlin, and Gus started the second round with an entirely different plan of battle. He stayed away, ducked, sidestepped and waited.

In fact, Ruhlin waited for several rounds. Finally, getting a wide opening, as Sharkey was rushing in all the time without the slightest effort to protect himself, Gus planted a solid punch on Tom's one weak spot and jumped away.

That blow didn't seem to hurt Sharkey. But round after round Ruhlin fought carefully on the defensive, planting a rib stinger every now and then. The Akron Giant sometimes turned a puzzled eye on Sharkey after these plunging blows, as if wondering why he didn't go down.

In the seventh round Sharkey winced after being hit hard on the ribs and began to guard lower. And again in the ninth Ruhlin played hard for the body, then shifted to the jaw, and a hard right made Sharkey stagger. Back went Gus to the body, waiting his chance for a finishing punch.

And the Winner!

IT was in the eleventh that the chance came. Tom was dropping his guard low, when suddenly Gus plunked over a right that caught him on the tip of the chin. Sharkey went down, flat on his face, out for eight seconds. But he managed to get up before the call of "ten." Then Ruhlin deliberately shot right after right at his jaw. Sharkey went down six times, knocked flat. The sixth time he had barely reached his knees at nine seconds, when the bell rang. Tommy Ryan, his second, dragged Tom to his corner, looked him over and tossed in the towel.

Three or four evenings after that I met Tom walking along a dark side street near my hotel. He stopped and passed the usual greeting. Poor Tom's face was well plastered and his eyes were in mourning.

"Well, anyway," he said, "he couldn't hurt me ribs. Think of me training them ribs for three months, and getting it on the jaw! Can you beat it?"

Griffith Makes Second Offer of $100,000 for Ty

"I Will Put Up My Own Money to Complete Deal," Declares Washington Magnate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Clark Griffith, manager of Washington's baseball team, is still after Ty Cobb.

"If the Detroit ball club will give me Ty Cobb for $100,000, I stand ready to make the offer," said Griffith today. "I will go through with it and if it is necessary, I will go down in my own pocket to complete the deal.

"From the time I came here," said Griffith, "I thought Washington was entitled to a better position than it had been getting and the fact that we passed a couple of world's champions in the two years I have been here does not stop me. I am convinced that if I can get some real offensive strength in that outfield of ours, I can cop the flag which Philadelphia seems to think belongs to Connie Mack."

Match Race at Jai Alai.

A series of match races at one mile will be put on at the Jai Alai roller rink Monday, Wednesday and Saturday nights between Ray O'Neill and Joe Benson, rivals in the roller racing game in St. Louis. The first heat will be run Monday night, the second Wednesday night and the final, if one is needed, on Saturday night. These two skaters have finished one-two in a lot of races in which there have been other skaters.

Gibbons Offers Packey $10,000 to Get in Ring

St. Paul Boxer Will Gamble on Receipts if Given Chance at Chicagoan.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—"In order to obtain a match with Packey McFarland I am willing to concede him everything—money, weight and date. If he will agree to box me at Madison Square Garden I will agree to accept 50 per cent of the gate receipts and out of the money that I receive I will pay Packey $10,000. If he is afraid that my share of the gate receipts will not net me a greater sum and that I will not pay him the $10,000 if the house is a slim one, I will guarantee him that sum and pay it to him before he enters the ring. I am willing to take a gamble with the club on the receipts and on the weather."

In those words Mike Gibbons, the clever boxer of St. Paul, told his views regarding the proposed match with McFarland. Gibbons was all "het up" over the announcement that the scheduled bout for March 9 had again been postponed.

"I am anxious to box Packey," said Gibbons, "and no man could reasonably demand more than I am conceding him. I herewith guarantee him $10,000; I am willing to meet him at 145 pounds at 4 o'clock on the day of the battle and I will arrange my bouts in other cities so that we can meet during the latter part of March if he cannot meet me at an earlier date."

JAYHAWKERS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME FROM PIKERS

Kansas Five Defeats Edmunds' Team 36—21 in Final Clash of Series.

By defeating the Washington University basket ball five last night, 36 to 21, Kansas University made a clean sweep of the series of four games with the locals. The visitors showed a great improvement over the form displayed Friday night and played the home contingent off of its feet. Incidentally, the Jayhawker five is the speediest team that has performed at the Piker gym for some time.

The team work was superb, the Kansans often pulling off their plays with such speed and precision that the locals stood bewildered. As to the basket throwing, that also was faultless, whereas the proteges of Edmunds failed time and again at caging comparatively easy shots. An odd feature was that the red and blue guards scored more points than the Piker forwards did. Vandervels, a forward, was the leading point getter of the evening, making seven field goals.

Pikers First to Score.

Washington took the lead at the start of the contest when French tallied a difficult basket. This was followed by two free throws by Berryhill and all was serene for the locals. However, the Westerners soon hit their stride and partly closed up the gap. Modisette came back with two field goals, which put the myrtle and maroon boys five points to the good. Kansas again got going and at the middle of the half were on even terms, each team owning 13 points. Then Spraull, Greenless & Co. got working and took the lead, never to be headed again. The score at the end of the first half was 19 to 17 in favor of Kansas.

The visitors started out like a house afire in the second period and kept up the pace until the end of the game. The locals also did improved work but this was offset by the speed of Kansas. After some teh minutes of play in this half it was evident that the St. Louisans were doomed and the only question was as to the magnitude of the score. Ted Maenner, a Washington guard, was put out of the game in this half because of committing four fouls. The contest was started at 7:30 o'clock, so as to allow the visitors to catch an early train.

Lineup:

Kansas (33).	Position.	Washington (21).
Spraull (8)	Left forward	Berryhill (7)
Vandervels (14)	Right forward	French (4)
Cole	Center	Modisette (10)
Dumnire (4)	Left guard	Berry
Greenless (10)	Right guard	Maenner, Donk

Referee—Greene (Dennison).

TWO UPSETS IN NATIONAL INDOOR TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Lively play in the singles and doubles of the National Indoor Lawn Tennis championship tournament today on the courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory resulted in a surprise and an upset. Dr. William Rosenbaum created surprise by beating George Aranyi of France, 6—2, 6—4, and A. S. Cragin scored the upset by beating W. C. Grant, the former champion, at 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

In addition to the players named, three others reached the round before the semi-finals, as B. M. Phillips beat C. J. Post, 7—5, 8—6; J. S. Cushman beat B. W. Stair, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2, and A. M. Lovibond, the regimental title holder, beat G. A. L. Dionne, 2—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Defaults were plentiful in the doubles. The best of the matches decided in the first round was that in which Karl Behr and B. S. Prentice, a combination of Yale and Harvard veterans, defeated C. S. Moore Jr. and R. K. Tomlin Jr., 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

In the second round Counts Otto and Alexander Salm-Hoogstraeten, the Austrians, defeated G. J. Steinacher and Dr. J. W. Travell, 6—3, 8—10, 13—11. Grant and Shafer, the champions, won easily.

Boxing Commission Needed to Unify Rules in U. S. A.

Clean-Break Is Essential

If Game Is to Prosper Queensberry Code Should Be Interpreted by Body That Will Force Referees to Eliminate Foul-Fighting, Sharpe Says.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

AT a recent boxing entertainment given by one of the local clubs the Queensberry rules were so flagrantly violated that many of the fans seated at the ringside made audible protest. The boxers conducted themselves while in the ring almost as they pleased, and the referee seemed powerless to do anything but throw himself between the boxers and split them apart when they clinched.

His repeated commands to "Let go and step back!" were ignored and he lost control of the situation when he resorted to and depended upon physical force alone to bring order out of chaos.

The bouts resembled rough-and-tumble fighting, the boxers deliberately holding with one arm while hitting with the other, butting, shouldering and wrestling about the ring, all of which it was intended the Queensberry rules should eliminate.

A Very Fine Distinction.

Some persons labor under the mistaken idea that "straight" Queensberry rules sanction the "rough-house" tactics described. It may be well to call attention to the fact that the only difference between "straight" Queensberry rules and the "clean-break" rule is that under the former boxers are expected to protect themselves when emerging from a clinch, whereas under the latter boxers are not permitted to strike when breaking away. In all other respects the rules are the same.

It is true that interpretation of the rules is not the same everywhere, and, unfortunately, this cannot be remedied until the sport is governed by a national commission, but for the sake of clean sport and its continuation without interruption a more general effort than ever before is being made to bar those things which has made this sport objectionable to a common sense of decency in past years.

Well to Consider the Source.

Some boxers and their managers who have appeared in St. Louis have complained that the rules in vogue here handicap them. Some of them don't like the "clean-break" rule, while others complain that they are not allowed to do enough in-fighting. However, their idea of "in-fighting" seems to be that they should be allowed to grab a man around the neck or body with one hand and punch his face with the other.

In one instance a manager complained that the ring of a certain club here was "especially upholstered" for a certain boxer. As a matter of fact, the ring complained of is just the same as it always has been since the club began operation. It has been found quite fast enough for such rabid footmen as Johnny Solzberg, Jabez White, Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane, Oliver Kirk, Benny McGovern, Stanley Roberts, Harry Trendall, Eddie Revoire, Billy Grupp, "Buck" Crouse, "Knockout" Brennan and others, and in this list are included bantamweights, featherweights, lightweights and middleweights.

Sort of a Feather Bed.

But whether the flooring of the ring at this club is "fast" enough for a certain boxer is not the principal consideration. It is padded to prevent injury to falling boxers, and is a precautionary measure that clubs in St. Louis are careful to observe.

As for the "rules" complained of, there is this to be said: The rules were adopted when boxing was revived in St. Louis with a proper regard of those things necessary to maintain boxing as a sport for those who like it as such, and not for fighters or managers who take up a temporary abode here and proclaim against the requirements that are willingly subscribed to by promoters and fans who are anxious to see the game survive.

Rules providing that boxers shall not hold with one hand and strike with the other, and prohibiting them from hitting when coming from a clinch, are intended to eliminate the rough-house tactics of the rough-and-tumble fighter and should be observed, and are observed, by persons more interested in preservation of the sport than they are in promoting the interest of any individual manager or fighter.

If boxers, or their managers, are to be permitted to come here and dictate their own rules and do as they please, boxing in St. Louis will have short shrift, and deservedly so. So far, with few exceptions, the sport has been conducted here in a manner that has avoided lodgment of complaints with the State or municipal authorities and has met with the indorsement of a respectable element that favors boxing when shorn of the disagreeable features that has made the ring a target for censure in past years.

Philadelphia Bans Roughness.

Boxers appearing in Philadelphia who have been in the habit of roughing it and "fighting all the time" regardless of the rules by hitting while holding and other violations, have been called to account by the Department of Public Safety and warned that it will no longer be tolerated, and promoters and managers who permit it will have no one but themselves to blame if they suffer a revocation of their license.

In its crusade against foul fighting the department especially emphasizes prohibition of the "kidney punch."

If the Queensberry rules are properly enforced prohibition of the "kidney" punch is unnecessary, as it can only be used, with few exceptions, when boxers clinch and are permitted to strike before they are required to step back. Once a boxer clinches he should not be permitted to strike until after the breakaway. When penalized in this manner boxers are careful not to clinch except when unavoidable, and the boxer who does not clinch is given the rightful advantage of being permitted to continue striking. At such times the "kidney" punch is made possible, but the boxer guilty of clinching has brought the punishment upon himself, and, so soon as he understands this, then resort to the "kidney" punch will be minimized to such an extent that but little danger will follow its infrequent use.

As a general rule the "kidney" punch is used by boxers who are holding with one hand, or who clinch, let go, hit, and clinch again, and so on, so long as they can keep it up—and this is a violation of the rules.

The "kidney" punch cannot be used except when one or both boxers are clinching, or a boxer is running away with his back turned or is suddenly whirled about.

IS YOUNG SINNET TRYING TO AVOID SOLSBERG MATCH?

Matchmaker Sullivan of Loca Club Will Go to Chicago to Find Out.

The case of Young Sinnet, the ba tamweight boxer who made Johnny Co lon extend himself to gain a verdict r cently, is puzzling Brooklyn Tommy Su livan, who matched the lad, so h thought, with Johnny Solsberg for ne Tuesday.

Some weeks ago Sinnet's backers aske Sullivan for a match here. Sullivan a that time could not use him, but lat he wrote accepting Sinnet and namin Solsberg as his opponent for next Tue day. He asked that he be informed the bout were not suitable.

Since that time no word has been r ceived from Sinnet, nor have answ to communications been received. Su van does not believe that Sinnet fe an encounter with Solsberg. He figu his communications have miscarried. a result he expects to go to Chicago try and round up that boxer. If he do Sinnet and Solsberg will go on Feb.

Here's a Make-Shift Card.

Ed Mvroka, the local heavywei who under the distinguished alias Kindon Belmont succumbed to Carl M ris in three rounds at the Future Ci A. C. about a year ago, will appear the first time in St. Louis since that c casion when he opposes Gabe Gulart Alton, Ill., in the feature event Tommy Sullivan's club.

Mvroka is a good heavyweight, as lo talent goes, but he made about as much i pression on Carl Morris as a pea-shoote might on the sides of the battle ship Ken tucky. Kingdon was ill-advised to go int a bout where he had to give away abou 60 pounds weight, many inches in heigh and reach, and three or four horsepower sheer strength.

His opponent of next Tuesday, Mr. Gula has left few imprints on the sands of pu lism. Other than that he is managed Charley Conley, who plays the strong p in the Onion Club of Alton, not a dope p has been smoked over the gentleman by a of the renowned scriveners of the Bl town.

We are safe in saying the men are i class by themselves.

The rest of the card is a sort of pugilist goulash, involving such ingredients as "Re O'Malley, Kid Gerber, Kid Vick, You Ketchel, Charley Leyh and Jim Carney.

SOLDAN ONLY TEAM NOT REPRESENTED ON ALL-STAR FIVE

McKinley and Central Each Get Two Men on Interscholastic League's Best Turnout.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL

Task of Picking Best Squad This Season Made Hard by Number of Stars.

This Year's All-Star Interscholastic Quintet

First Team.	Position.	Second Team.
French (McK.)	Left field	(S.) Smedley
Martens (C.)	Right field	(C.) McElwee
Shanley (Y.)	Center	(C.) Kansteiner
Nies (C.)	Left guard	(Mc.) Coates
Fitzgerald (Mc.)	Rt. guard	(S.) McCormack

Picking an all-interscolastic basket ball team for the season of 1913-14 is a far more difficult problem than it was for the previous year. In the last race there were but a few real good players, and they showed up doubly well playing together on the same quintet—McKinley. The remainder of the league was made up of more or less mediocre players, probably with the exception of two or three. Consequently such players as French, Fitzgerald and Herbert loomed up better than they really were.

This year, however, the teams were far better balanced, not one being without the services of at least two competent boys. The guards as a whole were better as is shown by the more reasonable scores. The forwards were just as dependable and undoubtedly superior as a whole, but owing to the better guarding were not as flashy. However the center position was considerably weak this season, only one boy showing any real class.

Small, but Oh My!

Picking the first five, the forward positions appear as the greatest stumbling blocks. These places on all the teams were covered by unusually small and extremely fast boys. Among them were McElwee, Martins, Marsh, Krause, French and Smedley, all who are commendable. However, after looking over the records of each, Martens of Central, and French of McKinley, seem to have the best claims for the coveted positions. Besides, having proven themselves the best field basket snarers in the league, the boys rank among the best in throwing free goals. Incidentally, as French would be serving his second season on the mythical five, this year as captain.

At the guards there also are a likely bunch of tossers. Coates, Fitzgerald, Ruel, McCormack, Nies and J. McElwee, all of whom are excellent qualities. One distinctive feature of the guards' play this year was their scoring ability.

At this position Russell Nies seems to have the call on the rest of the candidates, gaining this reputation by his wonderful field play against French. As a whole, fewer baskets were netted by Nies' men than against any other guards. The other side goes to Tiny Fitzgerald of McKinley, although this player did not show as well this season as he did the last. This is also the latter's second year on the all-prep quintet.

Shanley to Play Center.

The center is more easily picked as the chosen one is the only boy who showed to any advantage at that position at all. He is Shanley of Yeatman High. "Tex" in several of the games played by his team gained more points than any two other men on his team. He is a tall boy, and therefore often gets the jump on his opponent.

In picking the second team, the best suited forwards are Smedley and Claude McElwee, the latter the Central captain. Smedley, who lined up with the Soldan five, probably would have shown up better had he been with a stronger aggregation. The guards will most suitably be McCormack, also of the gold and brown, and Coates of the South Siders.

Kansteiner gets the center office, having a slight advantage over Chalfont. The lithe jumper did not do very well at the first of the season, but played like a whirlwind at the close. After having this year's experience he should prove very competent next year.

Sox to Play 40 Games on Spring Training Junket

Heaviest Barnstorming Schedule in Years Mapped Out for Callahan's Team.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—One of the heaviest "barnstorming" schedules for years will be played by the Chicago Americans on their spring training trip. The schedule, announced today by Secretary Harry Grabiner, includes 40 games for the first squad and 38 for the second.

The squad will leave Chicago Thursday night for Paso Robles, Cal. About 30 will compose the party, but the exact number is not yet known. Many of the White Sox will not be on the train. Scott, Weaver, Benz, Daly, Slight and Manager Callahan are with the world tourists and will not reach California until about March 15. Other members of the team are already in California and will go direct to Paso Robles from their homes. In the absence of Callahan, "Kid" Gleason will have charge of the squad.

The first team will begin playing in California March 8 at Oakland and during March will be in California and Arizona.

Fighting Sailor Toughened His Ribs by Having His Brother Jump on Them Daily, but a Swat to the Jaw Finally Stopped Him.

UNTOLD TALES OF THE RING

THIS is the seventh of a series of inside stories of famous fights written for the Post-Dispatch by Robert Edgren. The series consists of true sidelights on famous battles, and have never before reached the eye of the public. Mr. Edgren's articles are appearing each Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1914, by Press Publishing Co. (New York World.)

I WENT from London, 30 or 40 miles, out to a little English village called Chipperfield, and there, at the sign of the Two Brewers, I found Tom Sharkey.

In those days Tom was a broth of a lad, if ever there was one. No stronger and faster man of his weight ever put on a boxing glove. He was a small edition of the Hercules in the Museum at Naples, but done in bone and muscle instead of cold marble. And "fight" was his middle name.

Sharkey, that June day, was training for a fight with Gus Ruhlin in the National Sporting Club of London. He had been hard at work for a couple of months, for this was the turning point in Sharkey's life—the fight that was to decide whether he was still a contender for the championship or a has-been.

There was only one thing the matter with Sharkey. He had one weak spot. In the desperate 25-round fight with Jeffries for the world's championship he had forced the pace even when Jeffries met him with terrific right-hand drives into the body that might have knocked down a mule. Before that battle Sharkey always had been absolutely invulnerable to any blow except the solar plexus punch of Fitzsimmons. But the battering given by Jeffries, concentrated as it was, had broken several ribs, and when Sharkey fought again he found that he couldn't take punishment on that spot without immediately weakening.

Sharkey Explains His Plan.

I MET Tom, and after he had taken me in and shown me the ancient tap room of the Two Brewers, with its fireplace 800 years old, and its floor and benches that were worn down until the hard knots stood up an inch above the softer wood, we went to the loft where he did his training. No spectators were allowed there, for Tom's preparation for the Ruhlin fight was rather mysterious.

"You see," Tom explained, "Ruhlin is a good body puncher, and he'll figure on getting me with blows on my busted ribs. That's where I'll fool him. I want him to punch at my ribs until I knock him out, because I'd rather take it there than anywhere else. Feel these bumps. That's where my ribs were broken, and now they've grown twice as thick there, and stronger than ever. I'm working those ribs every day and making them tough. That's the secret. I'll show you, but you mustn't tell anybody." And Tom winked mysteriously.

A few minutes later Tom stripped to his fighting togs and stretched himself flat on the floor. "Come on, Jack," he called. To my amazement, Brother Jack Sharkey, who was something of a heavyweight himself, walked over, leaped high in the air and came down solidly with his heels planted squarely over Tom's broken ribs. Tom grunted and grinned.

Lucky to Be Alive.

"GO to it," he ordered. And for five or ten minutes Jack jumped up and down on the broad chest of his big brother.

"What do you think of that?" asked Tom finally. "Gus won't be able to hurt me after that."

"I think," said I, "you'll be lucky if you aren't crippled before you fight him."

"Aw, it doesn't hurt," grinned Tom.

Next Sharkey stood up against a wall while Jack and Johnny Gorman took turns pelting a big heavy medicine ball at his ribs—later on that was Joe Jeanette's favorite stunt. Sharkey only grinned when the big ball struck him. And then he stood with his stomach thrown out while Gorman hammered at his ribs with gloved fists. Sharkey seemed to shed the blows as easily as a duck sheds rain drops.

That day, and on succeeding days, Sharkey's work was nearly all intended to toughen those ribs. He never felt any other weak spot, and he didn't intend to have one when he fought Ruhlin again. Ruhlin had beaten him in New York. Tom was out for revenge.

On the evening of the fight Sharkey, grinning down from the ring, motioned silently at his ribs, as if there was a great joke to be played on Ruhlin when he began looking for the soft spot.

Sharkey Drops Ruhlin.

IN the first round it looked as if the joke might be on Gus, too, for Sharkey, rushing at him pell-mell, knocked him flat with a wild swing, and when he rose put him down again with a smash in the body. Gus managed to last out the round by dodging Sharkey's triumphant plunges. In the interval Billy Madden talked forcibly to Ruhlin, and Gus started the second round with an entirely different plan of battle. He stayed away, ducked, sidestepped and waited.

In fact, Ruhlin waited for several rounds. Finally, getting a wide opening, as Sharkey was rushing in all the time without the slightest effort to protect himself, Gus planted a solid punch on Tom's one weak spot and jumped away.

That blow didn't seem to hurt Sharkey. But round after round Ruhlin fought carefully on the defensive, planting a rib stinger every now and then. The Akron Giant sometimes turned a puzzled eye on Sharkey after these plunging blows, as if wondering why he didn't go down.

In the seventh round Sharkey winced after being hit hard on the ribs and began to guard lower. And again in the ninth Ruhlin played hard for the body, then shifted to the jaw, and a hard right made Sharkey stagger. Back went Gus to the body, waiting his chance for a finishing punch.

And the Winner!

IT was in the eleventh that the chance came. Tom was dropping his guard low, when suddenly Gus plunked over a right that caught him on the tip of the chin. Sharkey went down, flat on his face, out for eight seconds. But he managed to get up before the call of "ten." Then Ruhlin deliberately shot right after right at his jaw. Sharkey went down six times, knocked flat. The sixth time he had barely reached his knees at nine seconds, when the bell rang. Tommy Ryan, his second, dragged Tom to his corner, looked him over and tossed in the towel.

Three or four evenings after that I met Tom walking along a dark side street near my hotel. He stopped and passed the usual greeting. Poor Tom's face was well plastered and his eyes were in mourning.

"Well, anyway," he said, "he couldn't hurt me ribs. Think of me training them ribs for three months, and getting it on the jaw! Can you beat it?"

Griffith Makes Second Offer of $100,000 for Ty

"I Will Put Up My Own Money to Complete Deal," Declares Washington Magnate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Clark Griffith, manager of Washington's baseball team, is still after Ty Cobb.

"If the Detroit ball club will give me Ty Cobb for $100,000, I stand ready to make the offer," said Griffith today. "I will go through with it and if it is necessary, I will go down in my own pocket to complete the deal.

"From the time I came here," said Griffith, "I thought Washington was entitled to a better position than it had been getting and the fact that we passed a couple of world's champions in the two years I have been here does not stop me. I am convinced that if I can get some real offensive strength in that outfield of ours, I can cop the flag which Philadelphia seems to think belongs to Connie Mack."

Match Race at Jai Alai.

A series of match races at one mile will be put on at the Jai Alai roller rink Monday, Wednesday and Saturday nights between Ray O'Neill and Joe Benson, rivals in the roller racing game in St. Louis. The first heat will be run Monday night, the second Wednesday night and the final, if one is needed, on Saturday night. These two skaters have finished one-two in a lot of races in which there have been other skaters.

Gibbons Offers Packey $10,000 to Get in Ring

St. Paul Boxer Will Gamble on Receipts if Given Chance at Chicagoan.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—"In order to obtain a match with Packey McFarland I am willing to concede him everything—money, weight and date. If he will agree to box me at Madison Square Garden I will agree to accept 50 per cent of the gate receipts and out of the money that I receive I will pay Packey $10,000. If he is afraid that my share of the gate receipts will not net me a greater sum and that I will not pay him the $10,000 if the house is a slim one, I will guarantee him that sum and pay it to him before he enters the ring. I am willing to take a gamble with the club on the receipts and on the weather.

In those words Mike Gibbons, the clever boxer of St. Paul, told his views regarding the proposed match with McFarland. Gibbons was all "het up" over the announcement that the scheduled bout for March 9 had again been postponed.

"I am anxious to box Packey," said Gibbons, "and no man could reasonably demand more than I am conceding him. I herewith guarantee him $10,000; I am willing to meet him at 145 pounds at 4 o'clock on the day of the battle and I will arrange my bouts in other cities so that we can meet during the latter part of March if he cannot meet me at an earlier date.

JAYHAWKERS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT GAME FROM PIKERS

Kansas Five Defeats Edmunds' Team 36—21 in Final Clash of Series.

By defeating the Washington University basket ball five last night, 36 to 21, Kansas University made a clean sweep of the series of four games with the locals. The visitors showed a great improvement over the form displayed Friday night and played the home contingent off of its feet. Incidentally, the Jayhawker five is the speediest team that has performed at the Piker gym for some time.

The team work was superb, the Kansans often pulling off their plays with such speed and precision that the locals stood bewildered. As to the basket throwing, that also was faultless, whereas the proteges of Edmunds failed time and again at caging comparatively easy shots. An odd feature was that the red and blue guards scored more points than the Piker forwards did. Vandervels, a forward, was the leading point getter of the evening, making seven field goals.

Pikers First to Score.

Washington took the lead at the start of the contest when French tallied a difficult basket. This was followed by two free throws by Berryhill and all was serene for the locals. However, the Westerners soon hit their stride and partly closed up the gap. Modisette came back with two field goals, which put the myrtle and maroon boys five points to the good. Kansas again got going and at the middle of the half were on even terms, each team owning 13 points. Then Spraull, Greenless & Co. got working and took the lead, never to be headed again. The score at the end of the first half was 19 to 17 in favor of Kansas.

The visitors started out like a house afire in the second period and kept up the pace until the end of the game. The locals also did improved work but this was offset by the speed of Kansas. After some ten minutes of play in this half it was evident that the St. Louisans were doomed and the only question was as to the magnitude of the score. Ted Maenner, a Washington guard, was put out of the game in this half because of committing four fouls. The contest was started at 7:30 o'clock, so as to allow the visitors to catch an early train.

Lineup:

Kansas (33).	Position.	Washington (21).
Spraull (8)	Left forward	Berryhill (7)
Vandervels (14)	Right forward	French (4)
Cole	Center	Modisette (10)
Dumnire (4)	Left guard	Berry
Greenless (10)	Right guard	Maenner, Donk

TWO UPSETS IN NATIONAL INDOOR TENNIS TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Lively play in the singles and doubles of the National Indoor Lawn Tennis championship tournament today on the courts of the Seventh Regiment Armory resulted in a surprise and an upset. Dr. William Rosenbaum created surprise by beating George Aranyi of France, 6—2, 6—4, and A. S. Cragin scored the upset by beating W. C. Grant, the former champion, at 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

In addition to the players named, three others reached the round before the semifinals, as B. M. Phillips beat C. J. Post, 7—5, 8—6; J. S. Cushman beat B. W. Stair, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2, and A. M. Lovibond, the regimental title holder, beat G. A. L. Dionne, 2—6, 6—0, 6—2.

Defaults were plentiful in the doubles. The best of the matches decided in the first round was that in which Karl Behr and B. S. Prentice, a combination of Yale and Harvard veterans, defeated C. S. Moore Jr. and R. K. Tomlin Jr., 6—3, 4—6, 6—2.

In the second round Counts Otto and Alexander Salm-Hoogstraeten, the Austrians, defeated G. J. Steinacher and Dr. J. W. Travell, 6—2, 8—10, 13—11. Grant and Shafer, the champions, won easily.

Boxing Commission Needed to Unify Rules in U. S. A.

Clean-Break Is Essential

If Game Is to Prosper Queensberry Code Should Be Interpreted by Body That Will Force Referees to Eliminate Foul-Fighting, Sharpe Says.

By Harry S. Sharpe,

Referee for the Future City A. C. and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

AT a recent boxing entertainment given by one of the local clubs the Queensberry rules were so flagrantly violated that many of the fans seated at the ringside made audible protest. The boxers conducted themselves while in the ring almost as they pleased and the referee seemed powerless to do anything but throw himself between the boxers and split them apart when they clinched.

His repeated commands to "Let go and step back!" were ignored and he lost control of the situation when he resorted to and depended upon physical force alone to bring order out of chaos.

The bouts resembled rough-and-tumble fighting, the boxers deliberately holding with one arm while hitting with the other, butting, shouldering and wrestling about the ring, all of which it was intended the Queensberry rules should eliminate.

A Very Fine Distinction.

Some persons labor under the mistaken idea that "straight" Queensberry rules sanction the "rough-house" tactics described. It may be well to call attention to the fact that the only difference between "straight" Queensberry rules and the "clean-break" rule is that under the former boxers are expected to protect themselves when emerging from a clinch, whereas under the latter boxers are not permitted to strike when breaking away. In all other respects the rules are the same.

It is true that interpretation of the rules is not the same everywhere, and, unfortunately, this cannot be remedied until the sport is governed by a national commission, but for the sake of clean sport and its continuation without interruption a more general effort than ever before is being made to bar those things which has made this sport objectionable to a common sense of decency in past years.

Well to Consider the Source.

Some boxers and their managers who have appeared in St. Louis have complained that the rules in vogue here handicap them. Some of them don't like the "clean-break" rule, while others complain that they are not allowed to do enough in-fighting. However, their idea of "in-fighting" seems to be that they should be allowed to grab a man around the neck or body with one hand and punch his face with the other.

In one instance a manager complained that the ring of a certain club here was "especially upholstered" for a certain boxer. As a matter of fact, the ring complained of is just the same as it always has been since the club began operation. It has been found quite fast enough for such rabid footmen as Johnny Solzberg, Jabez White, Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane, Oliver Kirk, Benny McGovern, Stanley Roberts, Harry Trendall, Eddie Revoire, Billy Grupp, "Buck" Crouse, "Knockout" Brennan and others, and in this list are included bantamweights, featherweights, lightweights and middleweights.

Sort of a Feather Bed.

But whether the flooring of the ring at this club is "fast" enough for a certain boxer is not the principal consideration. It is padded to prevent injury to falling boxers, and is a precautionary measure that clubs in St. Louis are careful to observe.

As for the "rules" complained of, there is this to be said: The rules were adopted when boxing was revived in St. Louis with a proper regard of those things necessary to maintain boxing as a sport for those who like it as such, and not for fighters or managers who take up a temporary abode here and proclaim against the requirements that are willingly subscribed to by promoters and fans who are anxious to see the game survive.

Rules providing that boxers shall not hold with one hand and strike with the other, and prohibiting them from hitting when coming from a clinch, are intended to eliminate the rough-house tactics of the rough-and-tumble fighter and should be observed, and are observed, by persons more interested in preservation of the sport than they are in promoting the interest of any individual manager or fighter.

If boxers, or their managers, are to be permitted to come here and dictate their own rules and do as they please, boxing in St. Louis will have short shrift, and deservedly so. So far, with few exceptions, the sport has been conducted here in a manner that has avoided lodgment of complaints with the State or municipal authorities and has met with the indorsement of a respectable element that favors boxing when shorn of the disagreeable features that has made the ring a target for censure in past years.

Philadelphia Bans Roughness.

Boxers appearing in Philadelphia who have been in the habit of roughing it and "fighting all the time" regardless of the rules by hitting while holding and other violations, have been called to account by the Department of Public Safety and warned that it will no longer be tolerated, and promoters and managers who permit it will have no one but themselves to blame if they suffer a revocation of their license.

In its crusade against foul fighting the department especially emphasizes prohibition of the "kidney punch."

If the Queensberry rules are properly enforced prohibition of the "kidney" punch is unnecessary, as it can only be used, with few exceptions, when boxers clinch and are permitted to strike before they are required to step back. Once a boxer clinches he should not be permitted to strike until after the breakaway. When penalized in this manner boxers are careful not to clinch except when unavoidable, and the boxer who does not clinch is given the rightful advantage of being permitted to continue striking. At such times the "kidney" punch is made possible, but the boxer guilty of clinching has brought the punishment upon himself, and, so soon as he understands this, then resort to the "kidney" punch will be minimized to such an extent that but little danger will follow its infrequent use.

As a general rule the "kidney" punch is used by boxers who are holding with one hand, or who clinch, let go, hit, and clinch again, and so on, so long as they can keep it up—and this is a violation of the rules.

The "kidney" punch cannot be used except when one or both boxers are clinching, or a boxer is running away with his back turned or is suddenly whirled about.

IS YOUNG SINNET TRYING TO AVOID SOLSBERG MATCH

Matchmaker Sullivan of Loc Club Will Go to Chicago to Find Out.

The case of Young Sinnet, the bar tamweight boxer who made Johnny Cou lon extend himself to gain a verdict re cently, is puzzling Brooklyn Tommy Su livan, who matched the lad, so h thought, with Johnny Solsberg for nex Tuesday.

Some weeks ago Sinnet's backers aske Sullivan for a match here. Sullivan that time could not use him, but lat he wrote accepting Sinnet and namin Solsberg as his opponent for next Tue day. He asked that he be informed the bout were not suitable.

Since that time no word has been r ceived from Sinnet, nor have answ to communications been received. Su van does not believe that Sinnet fe an encounter with Solsberg. He figu his communications have miscarried, a result he expects to go to Chicago try and round up that boxer. If he do Sinnet and Solsberg will go on Feb.

Here's a Make-Shift Card.

Ed Mvroka, the local heavyweig who under the distinguished alias Kindon Belmont succumbed to Carl M ris in three rounds at the Future Ci A. C. about a year ago, will appear the first time in St. Louis since that o casion when he opposes Gabe Gulart Alton, Ill., in the feature event Tommy Sullivan's club.

Mvroka is a good heavyweight, as lo talent goes, but he made about as much i pression on Carl Morris as a pea-shoote might on the sides of the battle ship Ken tucky. Kingdon was ill-advised to go int a bout where he had to give away abou 60 pounds weight, many inches in heigh and reach, and three or four horsepower sheer strength.

His opponent of next Tuesday, Mr. Gula has left few imprints on the sands of pu lism. Other than that he is managed Charley Conley, who plays the strong p in the Onion Club of Alton, not a dope has been smoked over the gentleman by of the renowned scriveners of the Blu town.

We are safe in saying the men are i class by themselves.

The rest of the card is a sort of pugilist goulash, involving such ingredients as "Re O'Malley, Kid Gerber, Kid Vick, You Ketchel, Charley Leyh and Jim Carney.

Likewise, all them want the prima donna's divvy of percentage and that's the main reason w Bishop is still unable to close the match.

"I'm trying to get Duffy first,' Bishop. "He has consented to come, there's a small difference in percenta asked. I think we'll be able to reach ter The date has been changed to Feb. 26. E die Murphy is out of reason in his demand I will use Dundee or White, if I can't Duffy."

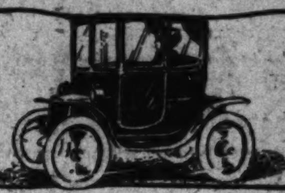
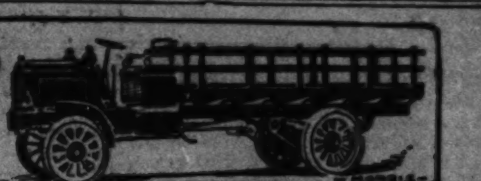
AUTOMOBILE NEWS.





SIX MEN INSIDE DID MORE THAN 12 OUTSIDE

After the street railway company had carefully transferred the snow of Friday's storm from the tracks to the curb, the drivers of automobiles were up against the difficult proposition of pulling through banks of snow two or three feet deep to land their passengers on the walk. One driver in a little Packard "18" was stalled in a drift on Olive street up to the top of his radiator, and the motor's greatest effort gave no more result than the spinning of the driving wheels and flying sparks from the chain. Chauffeurs standing near by came to his assistance with extra chains, bags under the wheels and husky shoulders against the car without effect.

An old automobile man passing by suggested more brain and less brawn—opening the door of the limousine piled some six or eight of the willing helpers in. With this weight on the rear end the rear wheels gained sufficient traction to pull out without difficulty, and a half minute's properly directed effort accomplished more than a half hour's toil.

A NEW MARMON SIX

The Missouri Motor Car Co. is now exhibiting a new six-cylinder car known as the Marmon "forty-one." The latest Marmon is a medium "six," being considerably smaller than the 6-48 model and coming about midway in point of size between that and the four-cylinder Marmon "thirty-two."

The car has six cylinders, with a bore of four and one-fourth inches and a five-and-one-half-inch stroke. They are of the L-head patterns, cast three in block. The new Marmon has a full floating rear axle, with a housing of pressed steel.

The body is of the convex curve type of substantial and durable sheet metal construction. The doors open forward on concealed hinges, with door handles inside. There are several new features, not before found on any car. The front doors are cut back of the forward edge of the front seat cushions, thus giving easy entrance to the front of the car, espeecially on the left or driver's side. The steering column is adjustable, permitting the driver to alter its angle to suit himself.

In addition to the regular equipment these ten cyclecars will have spiked rear wheels and runners in front for winter use.

SOCIETY FOLKS SEE COLE HOME OPENING

A motor car event in St. Louis during the week was the formal opening of the magnificent new home of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri, at 1419 Locust street, Thursday night.

J. J. Cole, president of the Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis, was the personal guest of Henry B. Graham of the St. Louis organization, and was accompanied by Homer McKee, director of sales and advertising.

Although the night was extremely bad, between two and three hundred of the elite of St. Louis braved the storm and spent the better part of the evening in the new building.

A commandery from the First Missouri Infantry paid their respects in full dress. The Shriners Chorus from the local Temple of Shriners dropped in long enough to pay their respects and to add to the musical program, dance music was furnished and the big marble floor in the main salesroom was devoted to the festivities.

Mr. Cole personally stated that the new place of his St. Louis representation was, without a doubt, the most artistic in America. "There is nothing on Broadway or Michigan avenue more splendid," said Mr. Cole. "I am perfectly pleased, too, that this beautiful Cole service home should be in St. Louis, the city in which I formerly was associated in the buggy business"—rather a neat little piece of sentiment, isn't it?

Mr. McKee left St. Louis last night in company of Nelson S. Gotshall for Kansas City, where they will have charge of the Cole exhibit at the Kansas City show. Mr. Gotshall is general manager of the Cole Motor Co. of Missouri. They were accompanied by Fred J. Berkley and J. F. Knight.

SPRING AUTO SHOW OPEN TO PUBLIC ALL DAY SUNDAY

Exhibits Will Be Kept in Place and Concerts Will Be Given Afternoon and Evening —Sales Reported.

The spring automobile show at the St. Louis Coliseum will be kept open Sunday and Sunday night to accommodate those who have not found the opportunity during the week to visit it or for those who want to make a further study of the lines of cars shown there, or those who have been kept away by the bad weather.

The show has been fairly well attended during the week and what was lacking in crowds was made up for by the interest of those who went there. They were interested in automobiles, and 90 per cent of them were in the market for cars.

None of the exhibits will be moved out until Monday morning and there will be band concerts both Sunday afternoon and night. The various exhibits of accessories will also be kept running to show the new and novel accessories and appliances.

All of the dealers who have been exhibitors have reported sales made during the week and even Saturday afternoon cars were sold. The Pathfinder Motor Car Co. disposed of the classy six-passenger sedan, Berline body, Pathfinder car which was on display all week, to E. W. Grove Jr. of St. Louis. D. S. Ralston, the president of the Pathfinder company, has been a close attendant on the exhibit all week.

The De Luxe Automobile Co. sold Saturday afternoon the three-passenger Henderson coupe which was part of the Henderson exhibit, to Theodore Hagerman Jr.

The Imperial Motor Co., through M. L. Weber, sold an Imperial light six off the floor, to Adolph Merz of St. Louis.

The feature of the exhibit at the automobile show of the Hans Motor Equipment Co. of La Crosse, Wis., is a spark plug tire pump, which does away with carrying air bottles or labor incident to punctures and blowouts. R. Divette, in charge, has practically closed with one of St. Louis' big accessory jobbing houses, to distribute this product in Missouri. In addition to tire pumps, this concern also manufactures air and oil gauges, altitude gauges, gravity floats and a full line of motor necessities, which are used on over 200,000 cars.

Mr. Shettler, chairman of the Racing Committee of the Western Automobile Association and the man who has always come nearer guessing the average speed of the races than anyone else, is positive in his statement that the average speed in the Vanderbilt cup race will be higher than 80 miles per hour.

CHICAGOANS GIVE POPE PIUS ELECTRIC CAR

Learning that Pope Pius must depend on wheeled chairs and the cumbrous state carriage on his excursions through the Vatican grounds, Chicago Catholics have purchased a Chicago electric for presentation to the Roman pontiff, and have specified that it be equipped with Firestone cushion tires. Some time ago a gasoline car was given the Pope, but was found unsuited to his needs, so in turn it was given to Cardinal Rompolla.

The electric was chosen because of its ease of operation, the Pope being able to drive it himself if he chooses. The name of the car, too, will be a constant reminder of the donors.

On the panels of the machine will be embossed in red the papal coat of arms. The seats are richly and deeply upholstered with imported Bedford cloth. This is covered with cream Bedford cord, bound in gold. The papal crest also is embroidered in gold on the backs of the seats. On the floor of the car, in addition to the regular rubber mat and gray carpet, is a heavy, luxurious, imported rug of pure white fur. The windows and doors are decorated with French lace valance.

A delegation of Chicagoans, prominent in the church, will go with the car to Rome next month, to make the presentation.

NEW MOTOR CAR IS IDEAL FOR WINTER USE

The many improvements that have been made in automobiles in the last few years have made possible the use of an automobile all the year round to the extent that comparatively few owners now put their cars away for the winter.

The streets of St. Louis on Friday, when the ground was covered with snow (and it snowed most of the day) indicated how general the winter use of the automobile has become. On every downtown street car after car was lined up along the curb.

The automobile was not considered safe to ride in when the streets were slippery and when the weather was cold a few years ago. More than that, owners who drove their own cars disliked working for 10 or 15 minutes spinning the crank of a chilled motor.

The side curtains were troublesome to adjust, and when adjusted it was inconvenient getting in and out of the car. The wind shield, not being a part of the cowl, cold drafts came in where they were fastened together. Brakes were not as reliable as they are now and the right-hand drive made the task for the man at wheel more hazardous.

The improvements that are an integral part of 1914 Moon cars are a good example of how all these various objections to winter motoring have been overcome.

The sure-shot Delco electric starter spins the motor with the driver in his seat. In extreme cases, when the car has been standing a long time and the motor has become thoroughly chilled, it would be practically impossible to start it by hand without taking the trouble to prime the cylinders. If necessary, the Delco will spin the motor continuously for 22 minutes without destroying the charge in the storage battery.

The rear gasoline tank has increased the dependability of the fuel feed and practical tests have demonstrated that with the tank in the rear there is very much less slippage in the rear wheels. Hence there is less danger of skidding and, incidentally, less tire wear. Greater braking surface increases the safety in operation, as does the left-hand drive.

SHIPPED 30 CARS OF CARS

Another demonstration of the stability of the motor car industry, in spite of the rumors and knocks of the pessimists to the contrary, is given in a recent order filled by the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, O. This concern last week shipped a special train containing 30 carloads of Overland machines to the Overland-Marion Sales Co., its Philadelphia distributor. Ninety Overlands were included in the shipment, which was a special order, in excess of the allotment of the Philadelphia concern, made necessary by an unforseen demand for the Toledo-built cars.

Regal

This Year More Than Ever—Be a Regalist

A Regalist is a motorist who has learned wisdom by experience. And this year you will see a great increase in their number.

For Regal superiority in the essentials of easy riding, stability, safety and comfort is inherent because of the exclusive Regal principles of construction. Seven years of success is back of every Regal car.

These seven years have witnessed an evolution from relatively small beginnings until today the thousands of Regal cars sold annually are turned out in a million-dollar plant, up-to-the-minute in equipment and directed by experts.

Back of the Regal, too, stands a company thoroughly stable financially, whose future is assured under any readjustment of conditions in the industry.

These are facts which you will do well to consider carefully when choosing your next car.

It Makes the Brake Effective
The Safety First Symbol—Five Bars and a Crosstie

"Safety First" in the Quick Stops!

Safety must go deeper than the tread.
It has to be made into the tire itself.
It has to be quality—just as you will bank on certain men in emergencies because you know the quality in them.

Goodrich Tires are quality through and through. Goodrich Unit Molding—the original Safety First idea in tire making—produces a tire which wears as a unit—every part helping every other part to render the service demanded of it.

Don't experiment. Insure Safety First for your car and its occupants by equipping at least the rear wheels with

Goodrich Safety Tread Tires

Best in the Long Run

The five thick, tough Goodrich rubber fingers dig down through mud, slush and ooze—they clean and grip the road. They stop the skid before it starts; they make the brake effective; they give confidence and control.

And the extra thickness of Goodrich rubber in the tread at the point of contact gives you longer wear, longer service and lower cost mileage.

We have been pioneers in bringing tire prices to their present low level, and, besides we set the standard of quality by which others are judged

NEW ACCESSORY STORE

Mr. G. W. Anderson, St. Louis manager for the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., 801-3-5 North Third street, has leased the new building at 3120 Locust street and on March 10 will open there with a line of automobile accessories. This store is one of a series of 50 that is being installed throughout the United States and Canada and will be operated as a branch of the main store room and office on Third street.

The H. W. Johns-Manville Co. is the first large concern to handle the automobile accessories business on a national scale and this, coupled with the fact that each branch will have a finely equipped service station to care for its patrons and keep J-M accessories in first-class condition at all times, promises a very bright future for the new department.

R. E Campbell will be in charge of the new St. Louis accessory store, and he advises that it will be fitted up in a very attractive manner.

Cabanne began in the bicycle business and first sold the Stevens steamer. Then he took up the American Mors, built in St. Louis, and in 1908 joined with the Oldsmobile company, for which company he was up to the present connection St. Louis manager, with a record of 397 Oldsmobiles in use in this city now. In 1908 he drove an Olds in the Glidden tour, being one of four out of 190 starters to finish with a clean score.

WHAT IS AN 'UNDERSLUNG'

President Fred W. Haines of the Regal Motor Car Co. describes the two methods of automobile frame suspension, viz.: overhung and underslung. Mr. Haines says: "In the car of overhung build the frame rests upon the springs, which in turn rest upon the axles. In the underslung, while the springs of the car rest upon the axles, the frame is slung below the axles, the ends of the frame being curved up and connecting with the springs, the axles between.

This suspension lowers the frame of the car so that the center of gravity or the majority of the weight of the car is concentrated below the axles. Underslung construction really carries the weight cradled below the tipping center, so that an enormous force is necessary to tip over a car of this type. It not only prevents "turning turtle," but reduces the chances of skidding to a minimum. The overhung frame carries the center of gravity suspended above the tipping center.

TO USE LARGER BUILDING

The St. Louis Auto Sales Co., of which D. Donnelly is president, has just closed a lease for the well equipped building at Twenty-second and Pine streets, for a long term and in 30 days will be installed therein.

The building is four stories high and is well suited for the big repair, painting and body building business which will be installed in it. Alterations will be made, such as the installation of a large elevator for cars, and the placing of large plate glass windows all around the first floor frontage for a show and salesroom. Dust proof dry rooms for paint jobs and much new machinery will be put in.

BRISBANE TELLS OF MOTOR CAR'S FUTURE

In his address to the Maxwell dealers at the recent banquet in Chicago, Arthur Brisbane, famous editor, referred to the statements we hear so frequently to the effect that the purchase of automobiles constitutes an exhaustive drain on the resources of the country, as the veriest piffle.

"We have spent vastly more on railroads, and we still need more railroads. We are going to have them, too.

"Why, we spend more on chewing gum or ice cream soda than on automobiles. We spend twice as much on tobacco and twice as much on whisky, although all of these latter we could do without.

"We cannot and do not want to do without automobiles." Mr. Brisbane characterized the automobile as not only one of the greatest inventions of the human mind, but as one of the greatest factors of civilization.

"It unites the home," said the famous editor, "and it helps to keep the home complete in the only place where the home is really one—in the country. It keeps the boys and girls on the farm by placing the farm within reach of the city and the enjoyments the city provides."

Mr. Brisbane referred to the light five passenger car such as the Maxwell "25," which sells for $750, as "the greatest American car," because the average American family consists of five, and the light five-passenger car will carry them anywhere.

"I frequently near it said," said Mr. Brisbane, "that the era of the high-priced car is past. That is not true. There are 60,000 people in this country whose income is more than $15,000 a year. Any one of these can afford to pay for the highest-priced car made.

"It is true, however, that many of these 60,000 decline to pay an excessively high price for their automobile, because they consider it represents more extravagance than they should indulge in."

BUYER DECIDES ON CAR'S SPECIAL POINTS

"First impressions go a long way toward determining the sale of an automobile, particularly if the prospective buyer is making his first investment," said John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Co., Toledo, O. "This is very often the case with a man who has not definitely decided upon any special type of car and who sees for the first time a feature in design or construction that is pleasing to him. He will then change from a lukewarm prospect to an eager listener and if the salesman is fortunate enough to be present at this, the psychological moment, he will clinch the sale nine times out of ten.

"Nothing has been spared in the way of expense to make the 1914 Overland as beautiful and pleasing to the eye as possible. It is a greater value than ever before with its larger motor developing 35 horsepower, its longer wheelbase of 114 inches and the many costly accessories that are included in its equipment. The body lines include such refinements and improvements as flush U-doors with concealed hinges, full cowl dash and improved windshield mounting are much in evidence.

"Notwithstanding all these improvements in design together with the costly full equipment, the price of the car has been lowered. I do not hesitate in claiming the 1914 Overland to be the greatest value for $950 on the market."

GOODYEAR HAS NEW RIM

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. announces that after more than a year of testing and experimenting with various types of rims, it is prepared to supply especially light, strong, effective quick detachable or demountable rims for No-Rim-Cut tires, and all standard types other than clincher tires.

The new rim is made in the old Goodyear '07 profile, permitting the tires to widen out at the base and rest in their natural positions, providing greater air space and consequently greater carrying capacity and increased mileage. Less strain attacks the side walls because the tire beads are not pinched together as in some rims now used. This solves the problem of tires "breaking above the bead."

In the new rim, also, the flanges are high enough and have a proper contour to give necessary support to a No-Rim-Cut or a straight side tire. Where flanges are low and not properly curved, tires are subject to damage unless kept fully inflated and saved from all overloading.

BUY NO WINTER TIRE

Until You See This Goodyear Innovation—This Anti-Skid with Plain-Tread Smoothness—This Thick, Tough, Sharp, Enduring

ALL-WEATHER TREAD

Here is a Tire which you can see excels all other anti-skids.

It gives you on dry roads all the advantage—all the smoothness, all the economy—of the plain-tread tire.

On wet roads—soft or solid—it gives an almost resistless grip.

The tread is double-thick. It is made of extra-tough rubber, toughened by a secret process.

The grips are deep and enduring. They last for thousands of miles, and never all wear off.

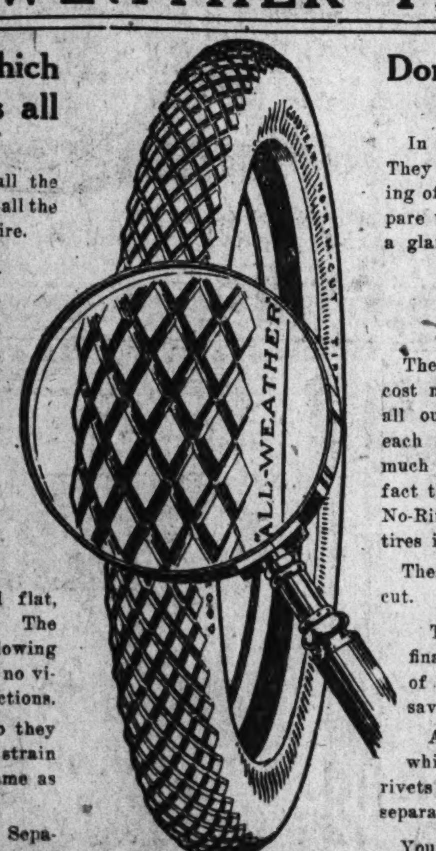
The edges are sharp, and they stay sharp. And these edges, set at 45 degrees, face the skidding direction.

The surfaces are broad and flat, giving plain-tread smoothness. The blocks are in alignment, following the tire's direction. So there is no vibration as with scattered projections.

Then the blocks widen out so they meet at the base. Thus every strain is spread over the fabric the same as with smooth-tread tires.

That's immensely important. Separate projections center the strains at little points in the fabric, causing a short-lived tire.

Make a moment's comparison, and for all wheels at all seasons you are bound to adopt these treads. There are eight vital advantages which you will find in no other anti-skid.



Don't Risk Wet Roads Without Them

In winter these treads are essential. They should go on every wheel. Nothing of the kind has been made to compare with them. You can see that at a glance.

Eight Others Cost More

There are eight anti-skids which cost more than All-Weathers, despite all our advantages. The reason is, each comes on a tire which has a much smaller output. Then mark the fact that All-Weather treads come on No-Rim-Cut tires, the most popular tires in the world.

These are the tires that can't rim-cut.

These are the tires which are final-cured on air, at an extra cost of $1500 daily. This is done to save countless blow-outs.

And these are the only tires in which hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed to prevent tread separation.

You get all these exclusive features when you get No-Rim-Cut tires. They combat the three greatest tire troubles.

They save so much that these tires for years have held the topmost place in Tiredom. And no man who knows them can fail to adopt them. Come let us prove this to you.

FIX UP THE OLD BUS—

You know how good it is—what it will do, and what it don't pretend to do.

Everything on earth depreciates with age, but—four or five thousand miles or eight or ten doesn't mean the end of a car's value, though you'd think so if you start to trade it in.

FIX IT UP

Make it more comfortable and better looking and you'll be ahead of the game in dollars and sense.

Paint—covers a lot of sins, but it must be put on right—we do it just that way.

Fore-doors—add dollars to a car's appearance and much comfort to those riding—ours are skillfully designed and installed. Prices very moderate.

A New Top—the one-man type for instance—tones up a car's looks—and is way ahead of the old type—or re-covering the old top frame would help.

A new shield, demountable rims, a bumper or horn to replace one that you don't like.

Just get the figures and figure the difference yourself—and then you'll decide, as many others are doing—to stay with the old car a year or two more. Let us show you.

PETITION FOR REBER APPROACH HEARD OVER GALLAGHER'S PROTEST

ditions, it would put it into the power of the Terminal Association to compel every road that used the bridge to enter into its monopoly contracts. The Post-Dispatch had always accepted the Reber approach as the best engineering approach, and after the approval of it by the commission of the Engineers' Club had supported all the bond issues on that theory. Its convenience as the best approach and as one that would give free scope to the usefulness of the bridge was strengthened when the extension was added which made it possible for the city to go over the Terminal belt if advisable, and by the decision of the Supreme Court, which opened the Terminal tracks to all other roads on fair terms.

Another question he wanted to ask was with reference to the possibility of preventing railroads obtaining access to the bridge at the Reber approach, because they would have to cross certain other roads. He asked Bates whether he thought that railroads entering St. Louis now or wishing to enter St. Louis, could be prevented from doing it because they crossed other roads; and if it was not the fact that, after the right of the roads, to cross other tracks was obtained, if railroads did not arrive at a modus vivendi, an arrangement by which they worked in unison in order to use their own tracks and the common facilities? He cited instances. The Eads Bridge, for example, ends in a network of tracks in the heart of East St. Louis. And yet many trains use the Eads Bridge on schedule time. They have a system by which the roads cross each other and use the bridge without difficulty.

Another instance. Seventeen railroads use the Union Station, where hundreds of trains run every day, yet all of them run into that pocket without interference or interruption, and on schedule time.

The McKinley road had come into St. Louis as a new road and crosses many other railroads at grade. He believed there were nearly 25 crossings, including the inner and outer terminal belt. But although the McKinley is a trolley line, running many more trains than a steam line, it finds no difficulty in bringing its trains into St. Louis on schedule time. Many roads enter all the great cities across each others tracks and have intricate terminal systems, without interference or interruption. The problem Bates had suggested was a common problem which was easily solved by engineers and railroad men; that no matter where the approach was placed, if it served the railroads, these problems would have to be solved and could be solved.

Dr. Fletcher said: "You don't pretend to say that there are no objections to the Reber approach?"

"No, there may be some objections to it, as there would be to any approach."

"Then you don't support it as an absolutely unobjectionable approach. Why do you insist upon it as the approach we ought all to select?"

"By the weight of the evidence, carefully analyzed. The Post-Dispatch realizes the situation that exists here in St. Louis. We realize that the long delay and the failure of the city to complete the bridge is a great reproach to the city. We have been in an unfortunate controversy. We thought a conclusion ought to be reached. We have taken up all the proposals and analyzed them carefully, and from the facts we have concluded that the Reber approach with its provisions for an extension is the very best that could be selected, from a legal standpoint, from an engineering standpoint, from a physical standpoint, from a railroad standpoint. There are less objections to the Reber approach than to any other. As between the Reber approach and the A. & M., the weight of argument is against the A. & M. approach. We believe that in this crisis when St. Louis must solve the problem, when we must remove the reproach and when the people demand that the bridge be completed, we should get together on the best proposition, the one which offers the cheapest and best and quickest solution. For that reason we support the Reber approach and we want to get general co-operation on that proposition.

"You would not deny," said Charles Fletcher, "that the value of lands along the Reber approach would be increased by the building of that approach, just as the lands of the line of the A. & M. approach will be increased in value. Would you say that because the value of land was increased along the Reber approach, that therefore it ought not to be built?

"No," was the reply. "Whenever any great public work is done, any great public improvement put through, there is always an increase of land values, in connection with it."

"Then why do you make a distinction between the Reber approach and the A. & M. on account of an increase of land values and the enrichment of owners of land?"

"Because," was the reply, "in the one case—the Reber approach—the increase of land values is incidental to the public work. In the other—the A. & M.—the public work is incidental to the increase in land values."

Mr. Scully asked Mr. Johns what the Post-Dispatch meant by designating the A. & M. approach as "the A. & M. grab"—whether it meant that the members of the Municipal Assembly supporting the plan or the promoters were the grabbers?

"The promoters, of course; those who expect to profit by it," he replied.

Gerhart Is Heard.

Frank H. Gerhart, granted permission to address the committee, said that as the northeast approach, which he favored, was not under consideration by the committee, he wished to speak particularly against the Reber approach. He argued that 90 per cent of the traffic that would come in over the bridge would be from the north side of East St. Louis and would have to cross the tracks of other railroads, and of the East St. Louis street, to get to the Reber approach. This would be a distinct disadvantage, he asserted.

After Gehart had spoken nearly an hour, quoting decisions of the courts and reading letters in support of his northeast approach as an engineering proposition, and debating several points with Col. Spencer, he was asked by the committee if he would not permit an interruption of his speech to give others an opportunity to be heard.

With the understanding that he would be given an opportunity to appear before the committee again tomorrow, Gerhart permitted the interruption.

W. B. Kenney of the New St. Louis Star was called and asked to explain an editorial in his paper charging that a politician had gone to Chicago to arrange for a shipment of money to facilitate the passage of the A. & M. bill. Kenney said the editorial had been based on a news report in his paper.

William Butler Flynn, a reporter for the paper, was then called by the committee, and asked if he had written the story.

"We understand," said Chairman Fletcher, "that you wrote a story which recently appeared in the New St. Louis Star to the effect that an unnamed politician had gone to Chicago to arrange for the shipment of money here to insure the passage of the A. & M. bill. That he first sent word that the bill was to be killed because the money was not forthcoming, but later was assured that it was going to be here. What this committee wants to know who is going to ship the money, who it was for, or whether the Terminal had bottled up the shipment?"

Flynn said he could not tell the committee whether he had written the story in question, but that he had worked on it. However, he could not reveal the source of his information, he said, without the consent of his informant. He would try to get that consent, and give the committee the information it sought.

"Now, wasn't that a pipe story?" asked Delegate Hall.

"Not at all," said Flynn. "It was told to me by a particular friend of Dr. Fletcher."

"No friend of mine would tell such a story," said Fletcher. "Who ever it was is a contemptible liar. This looks like a nebulous affair—intended to smudge this committee, but so written as to really escape saying anything. I do not think it is a gentleman's pledge for any man to exact a pledge of silence from a newspaper man when he is giving that sort of information."

The committee then adjourned to meet at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Fletcher said the hearing would be continued as long as necessary to have the arguments fully presented.

Charges Against Consul Dismissed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14.—For lack of jurisdiction, the case against Charles Sanjinez, Bolivian Consul-General here, accused of an offense against two girls, 13 years old, alleged to have been committed in a moving picture theater, was dismissed today in police court by Judge Deasy. Sanjinez was arrested Jan. 19.

agent and had been in charge of the depositions taken and of the employment of detectives. "We have detectives working on this case in Oklahoma City right now," he said.

Young admitted having asked Ross Lillard, attorney for Mrs. Bond, not to have the papers served on Senator Gore, giving as a reason that he hoped to settle the case out of court. Lillard declined to delay the papers on that account.

Senator Gore appeared more cheerful today than at any time since the trial began.

Dr. J. Q. Newell, Marshal for the Western District of Oklahoma at the time of the alleged occurences, testified he met Mrs. Bond in the parlor of her hotel and in reply to a question as to how she felt said: "Not very well, but I have some strings to pull on Gore yet."

Newell said he met Dr. Earp last summer in Oklahoma City and Earp showed him an Indiana paper containing what purported to be a long confession from Senator Gore. Earp, Newell testified, was quoted throughout the alleged confession.

In this confession Gore was quoted as saying: "They laid a trap for me and I fell into it. I tried to fondle Mrs. Bond a little, but she fought like a hyena."

Earp on the stand testified that Senator Gore made this statement to him. Newell said when he showed him the paper, Earp remarked: "Every word of that is a lie. There is not a word of truth in it."

Depositions Are Read.

In a deposition Bert Cole said while he and Mrs. Cole were visiting at the home of Mrs. Bond he saw Jim Jacobs in the house and heard him and Mrs. Bond discuss the hiring of attorneys to handle the case.

In a deposition Howard J. Spates, manager of the Winston Hotel in Washington, said he first heard of the alleged assault on the second day after it occurred when he was asked about it by a St. Louis newspaper man. He said he asked Mr. and Mrs. Bond to leave the hotel and that Robinson denied any knowledge of the occurrence when asked about it. Judge Clark admitted a codicil to the deposition of Spates, taken when attorneys for the plaintiff were not present, in which Spates said that during a conversation with Robertson, Robertson said he and Mrs. Bond and Jacobs were going to put the charges into a book and circulate it among Oklahoma voters and that they were going to get the "old blind ——."

The jury was excused for the first time in the trial while attorneys argued the admissability of depositions bearing on the character of Mrs. Bond. Judge Clark ruled that general character testimony only was admissable on both sides.

Character Testimony Heard.

Judge A. L. Rappalee, called by the defense as a character witness, said he knew Mrs. Bond in 1902 in Western Oklahoma and that Mrs. Bond's general reputation was bad. W. F. Dodd of Caddo, formerly on State Board of Pharmacists; T. A. Alexander of Caddo, and C. A. Billow of Caddo County, offered similar testimony.

CONGRESSIONAL CLUB ABANDONS "100 LIST"

Political Wirepulling by Women Brings Ruction; Wives of Government Officials Barred From Membership.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Too much political wirepulling by the women of the Congressional Club has caused that the wing of the club known as the "One Hundred List" to be abandoned.

In future only members of the families of Cabinet officers, Justices of the Supreme Court and Senators and Representatives will be eligible for membership.

The "One Hundred List" was composed of wives and daughters of other Government officials, principally of Washington. By recent changes in the Constitution, all these, numbering about 50, were retained in the club, but the name, "One Hundred List," was expunged from the records.

"The Congressional Club was intended at the beginning to be merely a social organization said Mrs. Duncan U. Fletcher, wife of Senator Fletcher, president of the Congressional Club, in explaining the "ruction." "We were strictly opposed to the members taking part in any political matter. The club's growth through the "One Hundred List" was such that we finally decided that it was time to put an end to it."

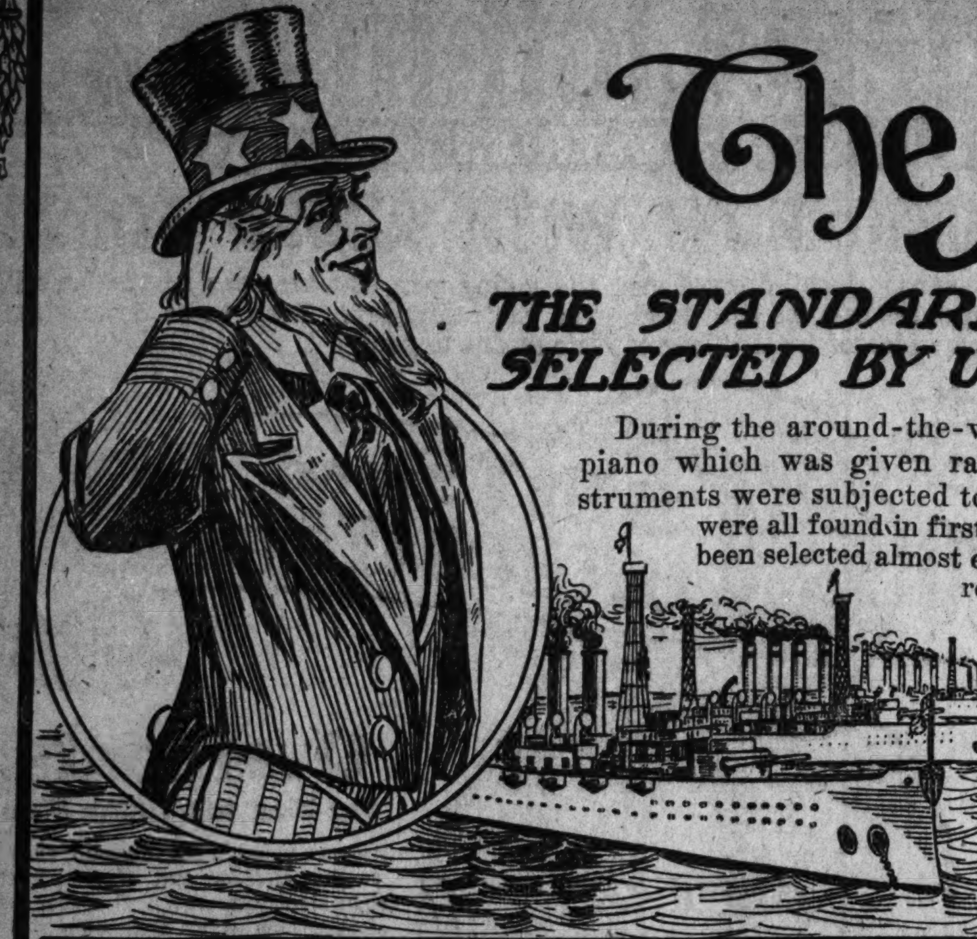
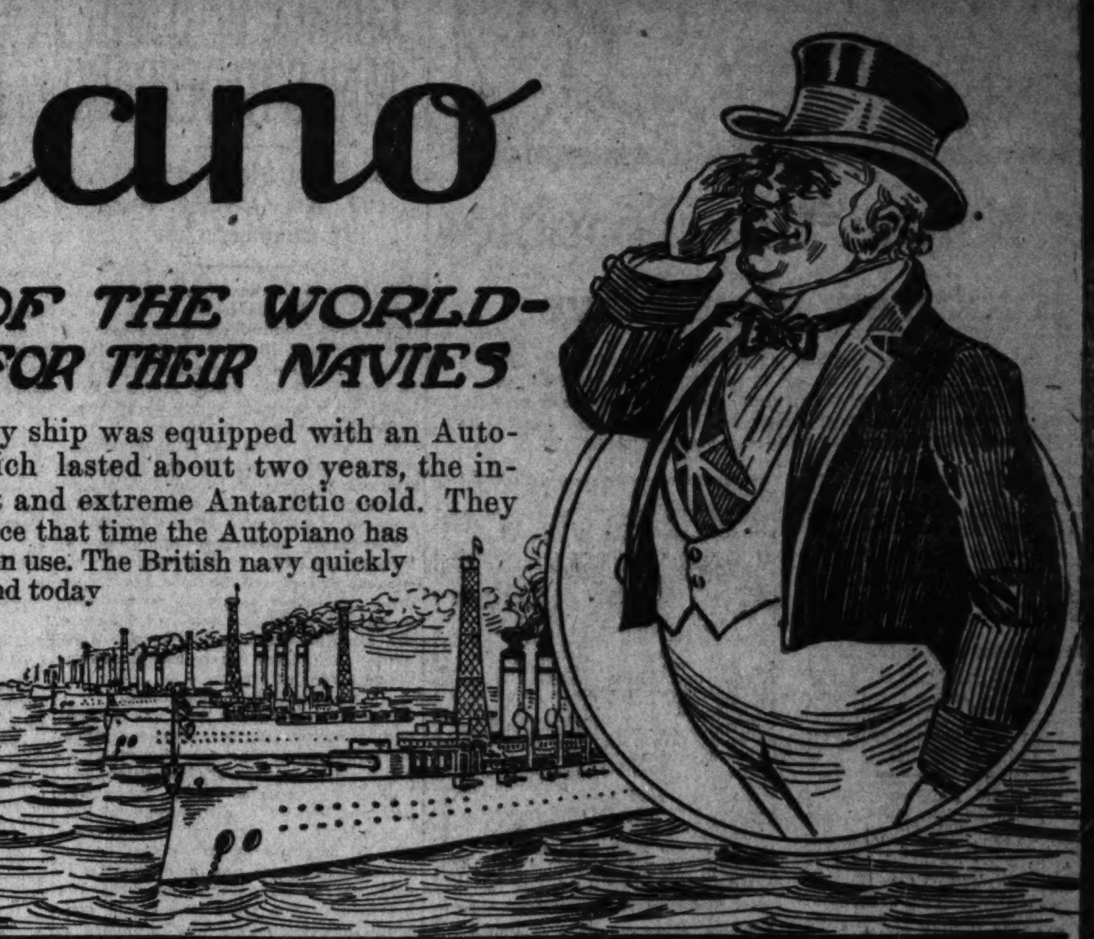
The Autopiano

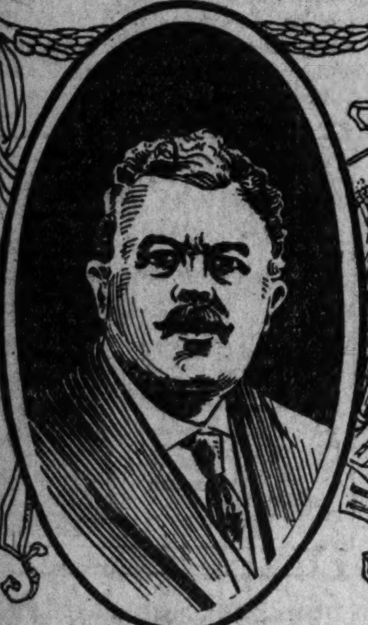
THE STANDARD PLAYER-PIANO OF THE WORLD-SELECTED BY UNCLE SAM AND JOHN BULL FOR THEIR NAVIES



During the around-the-world cruise of the Atlantic fleet in 1908 almost every ship was equipped with an Autopiano which was given rather rough usage by the marines. On this trip, which lasted about two years, the instruments were subjected to unusual dampness, besides the terrific tropical heat and extreme Antarctic cold. They were all found in first-class condition when the fleet returned to New York. Since that time the Autopiano has been selected almost exclusively for the United States navy, over 100 being now in use. The British navy quickly recognized the tone and lasting qualities of the Autopiano, and today it is the favorite instrument on many of its big dreadnaughts.



The Choice of The World's Greatest Composers and Primadonnas

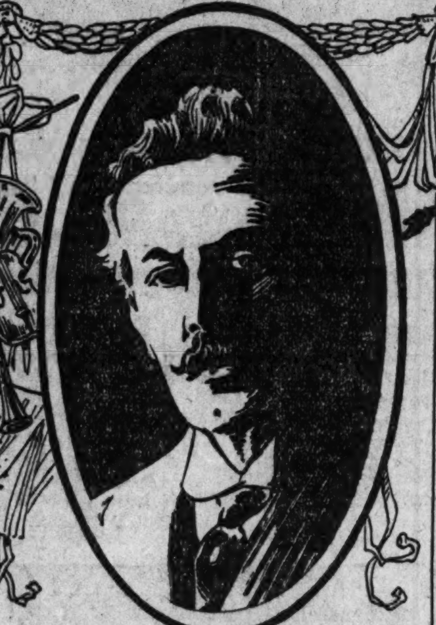


Victor Herbert

Composer of Mlle. Modiste, Naughty Marietta, The Fortune Teller, etc.

"The Autopiano in my home has been a source of pleasure to the entire household. I can readily understand its remarkable success. It is wonderful how artistic are the effects that may be had in playing it with the music roll. It is a splendid equipment for any home.

"VICTOR HERBERT."

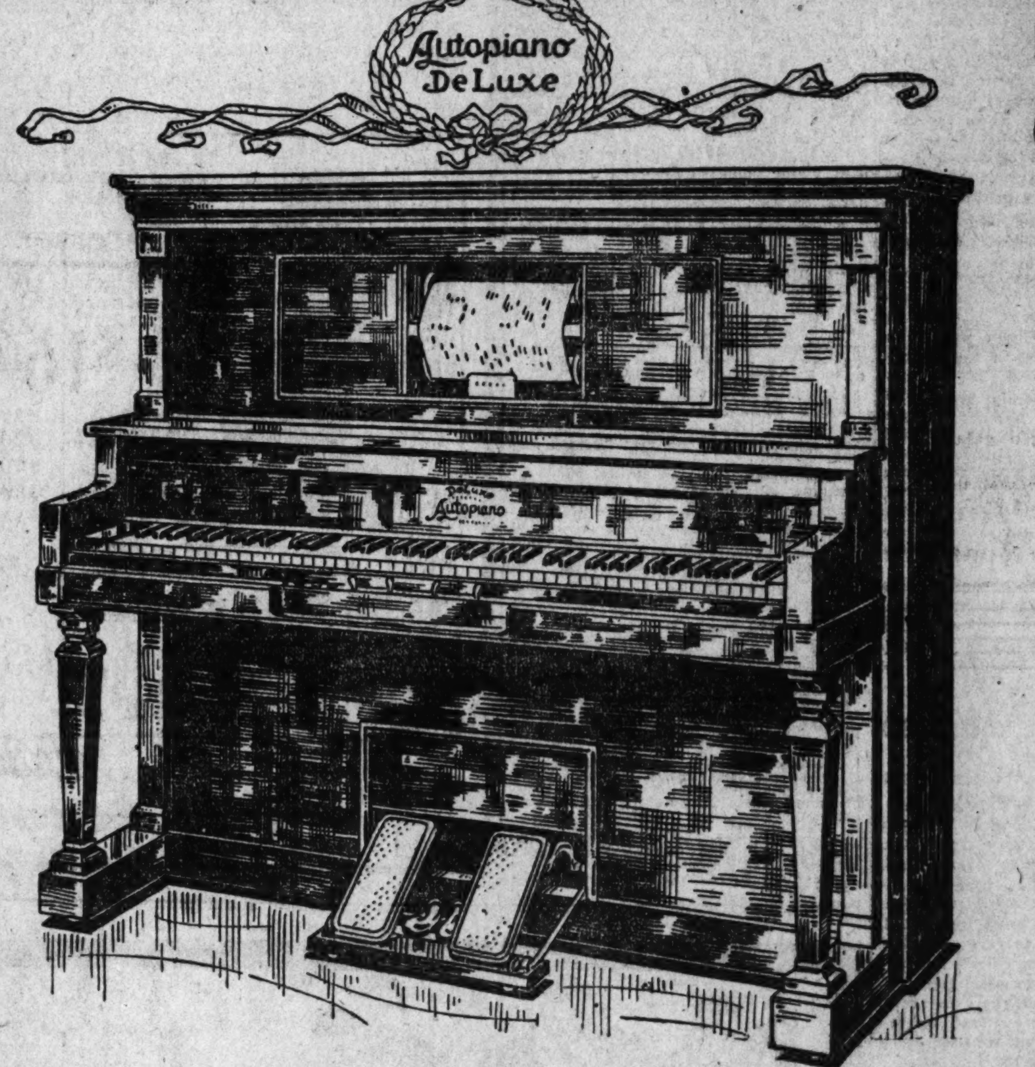


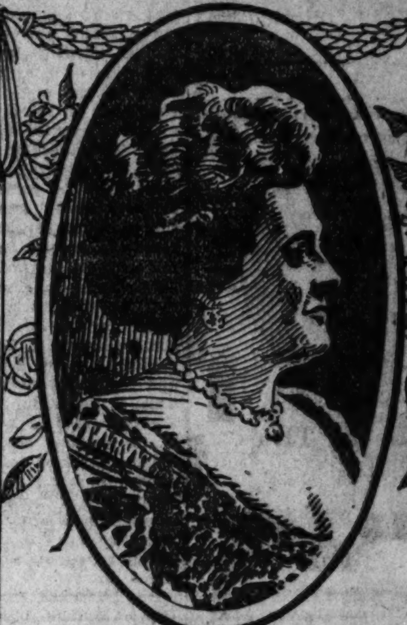
Giacomo Puccini

Composer of Madame Butterfly, La Boheme, Tosca, etc.

"Before I had heard the Autopiano I had a far different opinion of player pianos. The Autopiano is a marvel of art and science combined. I congratulate you on your clever and successful invention.

"GIACOMO PUCCINI."



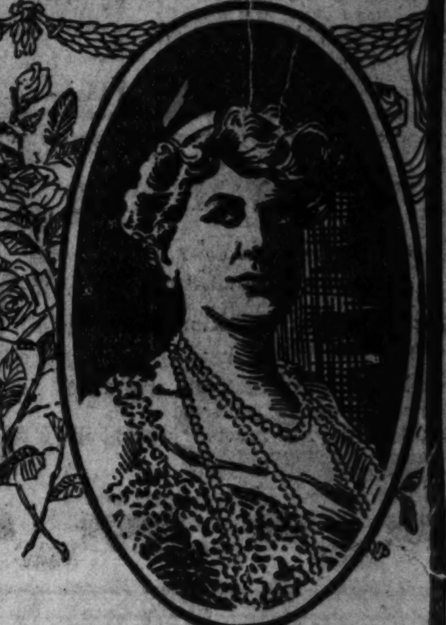


Luisa Tetrazzini

"The Autopiano is a blessing to humanity. It should be in every home. I find I can play the great operas with the same feeling and expression with which I sing them. I love to play it—it is wonderful—there is no player piano to equal it.

"Faithfully yours,

"LUISA TETRAZZINI."

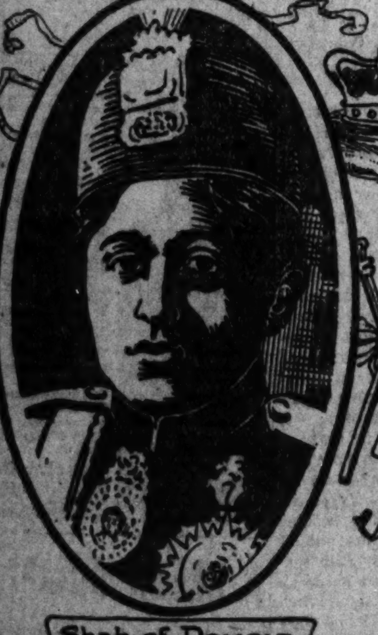


Mary Garden

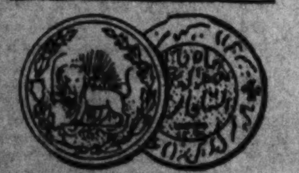
"The Autopiano is the height of ingenuity when it comes to playing the piano by means of a music roll. By your system for accenting the melody, one is led to imagine hearing the velvety touch of a Paderewski. Sincerely,

"MARY GARDEN."

Gold Medals from the Royalty



Shah of Persia



His Imperial Majesty, Ahmed Mirza, Shah of Persia, presented The Autopiano Company with a gold medal and appointed it purveyor of the Imperial Court of Persia, in recognition of The Autopiano's high merit.

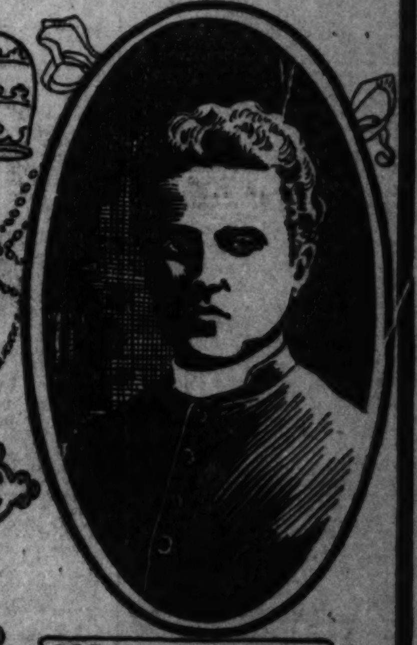
"Cardinal Merry del Val."

Also the order of St. Sylvester was bestowed on Charles Kohler, the founder of the Autopiano Company.



M. Lorenzo Perosi

We Know the Troubles Ruptured Men Have

We have studied the troubles of ruptured men from Maine to California. Been doing it for 42 years. Have attended to nearly 300,000 cases. And we've found that 90% of the misery and worry most ruptured people have had to go through can be laid to the devilishness of leg-strap and spring trusses.

Is Your Truss Doing Any Good?

It is almost impossible to make an elastic or spring truss hold, even when buckled up tight that it's like being squeezed in a vise.

They nearly always let a man keep on getting worse until he can't work or has to be operated on. They are almost sure to shorten your life.

And their misery-causing belts and leg-straps make them simply a curse to wear.

No More Belts or Leg-Straps

We have found a way to hold any man's rupture without harmful pressure, without any belt or spring around your waist, without having to wear leg-straps.

It is our guaranteed rupture holder.

It is as big an improvement over elastic and spring trusses and so-called "appliances" as the modern locomotive is over the first steam engine ever built.

60 Days Trial To Prove It

We have so much faith in it—have seen what it has done for so many others—that we are willing to make one especially for your case and send it to you for sixty days' trial. Willing to give you plenty of time to see for yourself just how good it is.

If it doesn't keep rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way, then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single penny.

It is the only thing we know of for rupture that you can get on long enough trial to make sure; because the only thing good enough a stand a thorough test.

All about It in Free Book

Don't send any money. Just write for our big free book—cloth bound, 96 pages—and find out everything you want to know.

It shows just why operation is usually a gamble with death, and why it would hardly ever be necessary if it weren't for the mischief done by leg-strap and spring trusses.

It exposes the so-called "appliances," "plasters," etc.—puts you on guard against being fooled by false claims.

And it tells all about our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss. Shows how simple it is. How it does away with leg-straps. How people who have tried it say it is as comfortable as their clothing. How it automatically protects you against every strain, so your rupture can't be forced out. How it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the muscle weakness which is the real cause of rupture. How it has brought complete cure in thousands of cases. How it is water-proof and will hold in the bath. How you can get it on 60 days' trial and how little it costs if you keep it.

The book gives voluntary endorsements from over 5000 people, including physicians. Also explains the careful attention we give you and why our long experience and thorough knowledge makes us successful in cases that would utterly baffle your local truss fitters.

Better write for the book today. That will take only a minute, but it may free you from trouble for the rest of your life.

DOCTORS HELD ON CHARGE OF USING MAILS TO DEFRAUD

Student Says He Sent $105 and Did Not Benefit From Guaranteed Cure.

Drs. David Davieson and Charles Adams of S. D. Davieson & Co., who have been conducting a museum of anatomy at 11 South Broadway, were taken into custody yesterday afternoon, by Deputy United States Marshal Williams, on a warrant sworn to by Postoffice Inspector S. O. Wynne.

The warrant charges the physicians with devising a scheme and artifice to defraud patients of money by use of the mails. The arrests are in conformance with a decision of the Postoffice Department, determined upon several months ago, when it was decided to rid the country of questionable practitioners. Two other warrants were sworn to and placed in the hands of a deputy for service, but no returns had been made upon them when the Marshal's office closed at 5 p. m.

Student Made Complaint.

Drs. Davieson and Adams are charged with having made false representations and promises to Theodore Hollmann, 25 years old, a student of Warrenton, Mo. Hollmann consulted them and was promised a cure for a tumorous growth, it is alleged, but after having sent them $105, in installments, for which he received treatments and medicine, he is said not to have benefited from the treatment. The Government will contend that Hollmann was promised a cure without operation.

Dr. Davieson, it is alleged, procured patients by circulating letters, pamphlets and advertisements, setting forth that his concern employed highly qualified physicians and surgeons who had cured many and that only latest improved scientific treatment was given. The warrant charges that these claims were not so, and that money sent for treatment on these promises was fraudulently converted to the use of the doctors. Upon receipt of money for treatment, the Government alleges, medicines were sent to patients that were not proper, and treatments prescribed that were not skillfully designed, as represented, or not adequately sufficient for cure or alleviation.

Dr. Davieson, after his arrest, denied that he was guilty of the charges preferred by the Government. He said he and his assistant, Dr. Adams, who is his employe, were licensed practitioners, and that his concern had been in business 40 years in St. Louis. He said the concern had been located 30 years in its present quarters. He declared his concern had not advertised in newspapers for many years, long prior to the death of his brother, Dr. S. Davieson, several years ago. He said the museum was kept open to the public for educational purposes, and that it had benefited many.

Dr. Davieson furnished bond in the sum of $1000 for himself and Dr. Adams. They are to appear for preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Irvine Mitchell next Tuesday at 11 a. m.

WANTS NAME CHANGED

Divorced Woman Requests Name of a Former Husband.

Circuit Judge Wurdeman of Clayton received a letter yesterday from Mrs. Bertha Goerlich of 1700½ South Main street, Los Angeles, Cal., who was divorced by her husband, Albert Goerlich, in Judge Wurdeman's court, on Oct. 5, 1913, asking the Court to restore to her the name Bertha Gross, which she acquired by a former marriage. Her reason for asking the change, she said, was that she had two children by the former marriage and wanted her name to be the same as theirs.

The letter was filed with the motion docket and will be passed on next Saturday. Albert Goerlich obtained a divorce by default on the ground of desertion. Mrs. Goerlich did not contest the suit.

BLIZZARD IN NEW YORK

Intense Cold Follows Storm in the East.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A snowstorm said to rival in severity the famous blizzard of 1888, raged to the accompaniment of zero weather in the Upper Hudson Valley, the Mohawk Valley and northern and western parts of New York State all day, tying up many smaller railroad and trolley lines and paralyzing communication generally. All trains were delayed. Late today the fall of snow ceased in many districts, only to be followed by a return to zero weather and high winds of the past four days.

Four deaths were caused in this city by the storm, and the fatalities due to the recent cold spell and stormy conditions number 17.

RICH ELOPER INDICTED

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 14.—Joel M. Foster, millionaire poultry man, arrested on Jan. 13 for eloping to this city with Delilah Bradley, a Pemberton, N. J., Sunday school teacher, was indicted by a grand jury. Foster will be arraigned Thursday.

He is under $500 bond on a charge preferred in police court here.

Burglar Gets $300 in Jewelry.

While the family of Walter C. Weber, 5846 Waterman avenue, were at dinner yesterday evening, a burglar forced a back door, made his way to a bedroom on the second floor and stole $300 worth of jewelry from a dresser. He escaped without giving an alarm.

DR. SHAW'S LEG BROKEN ON HER 67TH BIRTHDAY

Suffrage Leader Slips on Footstool as She Alights From Train in Jersey City

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—This was the sixty-seventh birthday of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Women's Suffrage Association, one of the most famous leaders of the fight for "Votes for Women." She is kept to her rooms at the Hotel McAlpin tonight with a compound fracture of the right leg, suffered in alighting from a Pullman car at the Jersey Central Terminal, Jersey City.

Dr. Shaw, with Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, had been on a speaking tour. When the train came in Mrs. Catt alighted first. As Dr. Shaw tried to follow, her foot slipped on the edge of the little footstool and she fell.

Only a week ago Miss E. Anthony, Dr. Shaw's companion, a niece of the late Susan B. Anthony, fell at Dr. Shaw's Philadelphia home and broke her arm.

How to Make the Best Cough Remedy at Home

A Family Supply at Small Cost, and Fully Guaranteed.

Make a plain syrup by mixing one pint of granulated sugar and ½ pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a family supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold almost instantly, and will usually conquer an ordinary cough in 24 hours. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, bronchial asthma, whooping cough and spasmodic croup.

This method of making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is now used in more homes than any other cough syrup. This explains why it is often imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HOW BUST MEASURE MAY BE INCREASED

No Longer Need to Be Flat Chested and Undeveloped.

The woman without a properly developed bust is as nearly shapeless as any woman can be. A full, firm, perfectly rounded bust is her birthright and natural inheritance and quite as much for her health's sake as for mere personal appearance she should see to it that this natural right is hers. The bust can be developed by proper treatment just as safely and surely and probably more quickly than any other part of the body.

Some time ago a prominent physician discovered in experimental laboratory work a combination of stimulating ingredients possessing remarkable power in developing an undeveloped or retarded bust. "Sorose" has since been used by thousands of women with wonderful success. There are no creams, oils or massage of any kind, no mechanical pumps or appliance, nothing that can possibly injure in any way. You just take it as directed and see almost from day to day the steady growth of the shrunken, undeveloped busts to full-rounded beauty until development of from three to six inches is obtained.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. sell it on a positive guarantee of success and satisfaction or money back. Price for a three-weeks' treatment $1.00. Mail orders filled by Embee Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

ROGER SULLIVAN MAKES TART REPLY TO BRYAN'S ATTACK

Illinois Senatorial Candidate Refers to Charge He Doesn't Rise to Dignity of Office.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Roger C. Sullivan will not permit William J. Bryan's opposition to his senatorial candidacy to drive him out of the primary fight next September. There is a note of defiance in the statement issued by Sullivan today in reply to the Secretary of State's attack on him.

He calls on the editor of the Commoner to be more specific in his charge that Sullivan does not rise to the dignity of the office. Sullivan did not prepare an answer to Bryan until he received a telegram personally from the Secretary of State assuring him, it is said, that he stood sponsor for the Commoner article. Sullivan declined to make known the contents of the Bryan message.

"As he did not make public my telegram to him, it would be discourteous for me to reveal the contents of his reply," said the candidate.

Sullivan's authorized statement follows:

"I have refrained from comment on Mr. Bryan's editorial in the Commoner until I ascertained the authorship of that article. Today I received a confirmatory night message.

"If a Democrat in Illinois has no right to announce himself as a candidate in his home State without the sanction of Mr. Bryan, who has more than once and without success undertaken to control the Democratic party in Illinois, then my candidacy is 'unthinkable'; not otherwise.

"In reference to his statement that I do not rise to the dignity of the office:

"In the last of the campaigns in which Mr. Bryan rode the Democratic party, including the candidates for Congress, to defeat, I was of sufficient importance and rose to sufficient dignity after his nomination to sit in the councils of the party at his solicitation and request. I may say further he willingly permitted me to finance the campaign in his behalf and he tendered me his grateful thanks for my efforts.

"In passing, I may say Mr. Bryan's conception of the 'dignity of an office' has been so frequently commented upon by the public press in the last nine months that I am willing to let the public judge whether he is a capable critic of that subject."

TENNESSEE DEMOCRATIC ELECTION LAW INVALID

Re-Election of Hooper Believed to Be Sure Following Court Ruling; Decision Assailed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 14.—What is regarded as a hard blow to the Democracy of Tennessee was dealt today when the Supreme Court, by a vote of 3 to 2, declared unconstitutional the Democratic election law passed by the last Legislature and placed back in the hands of the fusion forces the election machinery of the State, insuring the reelection of Republican Gov. Hooper and a fusion Legislature this fall.

Justice Buchanan, appointed to the bench by ex-Gov. Patterson when he was chief executive, joined the old opponents of Patterson and made a majority ruling.

Justice Lansden and Green former fusionists, fiercely assailed the majority opinion, declaring that the majority, in questioning the action of the House on the passage of the bill, was leading up to anarchy.

CREDITORS PROTEST WHEN BANKER EMPLOYS REED

Fear Connection of Senator Will Injure Their Case in Federal Court.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Feb. 14.—To protest against retention of Senator James A. Reed as attorney for J. B. Thomas, president of the Bank of Willow Springs, who was indicted on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the failure of the Daniels Commission Co., a meeting of creditors of the firm was called today, to be held Feb. 20, at Springfield.

In a letter to the creditors of the concern, A. J. Brittain, trustee, calls attention to the fact that the name of Senator Reed has been brought into the case, and that his employment would be to the detriment of the creditors, who are now in the Federal Court.

MACHINE GUNS FOR BRITISH EMBASSY IN MEXICO CITY

Marine Guard Also Dispatched to Mexico After America Is Advised of Plan.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The dispatch of a small legation guard of marines and machine guns from a British cruiser at Vera Cruz to the legation in Mexico City was ordered only after the State Department had been advised of the plan through the American Embassy in London.

Threats that the British legation would be made a particular object of attack in the event of a public uprising led to the precautionary measure, and it was intimated at the State Department today that Mexican authorities were not only willing but anxious that other diplomatic representatives in Mexico take similar measures.

The superdreadnaughts Delaware, Florida and Utah left Guacanayabo Bay, West Indies, today for Vera Cruz, to relieve the battleships Rhode Island, Georgia and Virginia in Mexican waters. Rear Admiral Fletcher will continue in command of the American warships.

Since John Quit Drinking

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman,
In all this little town;
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown.
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more.
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name,
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same.
So I sent for GOLDEN REMEDY,
(As sly as sly could be)
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited,
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute,
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as anyone,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking,
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN REMEDY.

AUTENRIETH, WHO IS DEMOTED, WILL QUIT CIVIL SERVICE

Assistant Postmaster Refuses to Go From $4000 to $1200 Position.

The long-looked-for changes in best-paying positions in the St. Louis Postoffice came yesterday, when Postmaster Selph announced 14 changes in salaries and positions, effective tomorrow

Chief among the changes designated is that of Albert Autenreith of Clayton, a Republican, who, under Republican administration, was promoted to the assistant postmastership, with a salary of $4000.

Under the new schedule, Autenrieth would be superintendent at Winner Station, with a salary of $1200. At his home in Clayton last evening Autenrieth said he would resign from the civil service tomorrow.

He declined to be interviewed, saying the department rules forbade and it might mean dismissal, but close friends to whom he talked said he refused to accept the reduction in salary and position after 13 years of service.

Autenrieth, they said, declared the changes were a part of the political spoils incident to Democratic administration of the department, all but one of those included in the changes being Republicans. He said all those on the list were competent men, and that charges could not be preferred against them to justify removal.

At the suggestion of Postmaster Selph, a special commission was sent from Washington to St. Louis last November with the announced purpose of investigating the handling of mail and the operation of the department, with a view toward improvement and reorganization.

The recommendations of the commission laid the foundation for the changes announced by Postmaster Selph. It has long been the custom, when postoffice administration changes from one political party to another, to make changes in the personnel of the important offices. Selph announced changes for "the good of the service."

The changes are as follows:

Albert, Autenrieth, from Assistant Postmaster to Superintendent Winner Station, with a salary of $1200; Frank A. Rehm, from Superintendent Central Station to Superintendent Cabanne Station, salary $1500; Charles A. Koch, Superintendent Cabanne Station, to letter carrier, $1200; George W. Davison, cashier (money order) to Finance Clerk; Athol J. Michener, Superintendent of Mails to Superintendent Central Station, $2000; Otto Gemmer, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to foreman, $1600; Edmund A. Green, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to special clerk, $1400, Edward H. Niehaus, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to letter carrier, $1200; John P. Biedenstein, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to special clerk, $1400; Frank S. Krebs, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to foreman, $1600; De Lancy La Berge, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to foreman, $1500; William J. Kipp, Assistant Superintendent of mails to foreman, $1600; Henry J. Gilson, Superintendent of Winner Station to clerkship, $1200; Rudolph Fischer, Assistant Superintendent of Mails to letter carrier, $1200.

CHURCH ASSOCIATION WOULD OUST MEEKER

Springfield Congregationalists Complain of Pastor's Work for the "Wets."

The St. Louis Association of Congregational Churches has been requested by the Springfield association, representing the Congregational churches of Southwest Missouri, to withdraw its fellowship from the Rev. Jacob E. Meeker, former pastor of Compton Hill Congregational Church, now a candidate for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Tenth District.

A dispatch from Springfield states that, at the meeting of the Springfield Association, held in the First Congregational Church there, complaint was made by the pastors of churches in Jasper County, that Meeker had aided the "wets" in the recent local option elections there, and that his work had helped to defeat the "dry" forces in Carthage and Carterville.

Those making the complaint said that Meeker's influence, in his speeches against the "drys," had been greatly increased by the fact of his ministerial standing. While he is not now pastor of a church, he is still in good standing as a clergyman of the denomination, and the complaints held that he should not be allowed to remain in good standing.

GAVE UP HUSBAND, TOOK HIM BACK WHEN DESTITUTE

Woman's Strange Story Told at Inquest Into Man's Mysterious Death.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—The story of a woman who released her husband to another woman and took him back 10 years later when he was crippled and destitute, was revealed today at the inquest over the body of John F. Rommell, 70 years old.

Mrs. Rommell testified she surrendered her husband 18 years ago to a Mrs. Gardner. After 10 years Mrs. Rommell found him penniless and his right arm almost useless. He had been injured in a street car accident. She invited him home, although she did not accept him as her husband, and there he had lived until this morning when his body was found in his room in the basement with a gash in the neck.

The coroner's jury was unable to decide whether the man had been murdered or whether he ended his own life. The police are searching for Mrs. Gardner, who, according to Mrs. Rommell, had insured Rommell's life naming herself as beneficiary.

"I know some woman called occasionally to see him in his room in the basement," said Mrs. Rommell. "I don't know who it was unless it was Mrs. Gardner. She never came upstairs."

A roomer at the Rommell home testified he was awakened this morning by the slamming of a door and heard Mrs. Rommell say: 'He's dead, and I don't care what you do.'"

He could not recognize the voice of the person to whom Mrs. Rommell was talking.

EXCESS FARE SUIT TO BE TRIED IN STATE COURT

Judge Divelbliss, at Richmond, Denies Motion to Transfer St. Paul Case to Federal Court.

RICHMOND, Mo., Feb. 14.—The suit of the State of Missouri against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, to recover alleged overcharges made since the Missouri rate cases have been in litigation, cannot be removed to the Federal Court, but must be tried in the Ray County Circuit Court, according to a decision by Judge Divelbliss in that court here today.

The railroad's counsel asked that the case be transferred to the Federal Court. Of the suits filed against the railroads to collect a total of $24,000,000 of alleged overcharges, the suit here today was the first to be considered by a State Judge.

Representatives of the State said the ruling probably will be followed by the Judges in the other State cases. The next case to be heard will be that against the Kansas City Southern at Butler next Monday.

Representatives of the State in today's case asked that the hearing proceed immediately, but the Court, at the request of the railroad's attorneys, set the case for trial Feb. 23.

When the Stomach Goes Back to Work

Then Is the Whole System Glad. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Quickly Put the Stomach In Shape.

When the stomach fails to do its work properly the whole machine of man is unstrung and wholly incapable of work. This condition obtains from the tiniest nerve to the big, strong, pumping heart.

It is a wise law of nature that has made the stomach man's strongest organ, but when it stops work man ought to realize that it does so because it can continue no longer.

"Hooray! Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are the Real Appetite Bringers."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will certainly give the stomach the repair it needs and is always crying aloud for.

A tablet taken after each meal will in the course of several hours become a portion of the digestive fluids. It will build up these fluids. First in the stomach, then in the intestines.

The liver is the storehouse of the body. Here are assembled all the reserve fluids of the system and here the various ingredients of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mingle with the faulty natural juices and strengthen them, or if they are too strong then they will be reduced to their proper strength and proportion.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain a single ingredient, one grain of which is sufficient to digest 3000 grains of food. Just think how gratefully such an element is received into a body that cannot digest at all without a new weakening of the already depleted juices.

Go to your druggist this very day and obtain a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, price, 50 cents. A week's trial will make you a new man and your stomach will go back to work.—ADV.

Myrtle Hahn Says D. D. D. Prescription Is Worth Rockefeller's Millions to Her.

In loving remembrance of my dear husband, Wilmer J. Newton, who departed this life Feb. 15, 1913.

There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
And wounds that cannot be healed,
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
They cannot be half revealed.
I could not realize what was said
When the message came that he was dead,
But God, who loved him best,
Has taken him home to rest.

Sadly missed by his loving

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, Valentine Heilmann, who departed this life one year ago, Feb. 15, 1913.

While the flickering tapers of night burned low,
Death closed his eyelids and bade him go;
Relieved of all his worldly strife,
We hope he has entered a better and brighter life.

By constant toil he molded true
The highest form that virtue knew;
Within he climbed the toilsome steep,
But weary grew and sought death's sleep.

But in my heart shall ever live
The memory and loneliness only death can give.

Sadly missed by his CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

"Buy Your Piano or Player"

Where everything is in your favor. If you will only consider how conservatively we have run our business during the past 40 years—giving our patrons "full value" for their money rather than expect them to pay for high rents, solicitors, excessive advertising and running expenses—you will readily understand how we steadily grew despite the fact of our keeping mum. We sell only pianos of lasting durability (we learned the piano makers trade); leave nothing undone for your future satisfaction; have the lowest prices in town for the quality considered and arrange terms to suit; just come and see; we'll gladly show you our mutual benefit. F. BEYER & SON, 17th and Locust. (c68)

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

Of Interest to Our Stockholders and Customers

The Grand Prize Contest

REALIZING that customers and stockholders are vitally interested in every Contest held by our salesmen, we are going to report the progress of this contest every Sunday in the St. Louis papers so you may know just where your favorite salesman is running in this contest.

Our circle of customers and stockholders has now grown so large, the only way we can reach them is through the public press.

The Grand Prize Contest will be the most exciting and interesting race we ever held. It commenced February 2d and ends at midnight of April 30th, 1914.

A salesman, to win, must pile up a large volume of sales. In fact, it is predicted that the winning salesman will bring in sales during the contest aggregating at least $30,000.

Every salesman is keyed up to his highest pitch and is concentrating his every effort to lead in this race. It is not alone the value of the prize, but the glory of winning that is worth working for.

No doubt this contest will be watched by many Salesmen and Sales Managers throughout the city.

Here's a list of our salesmen as they line up in the contest for the week ending Friday, Feb. 13th, at 12 o'clock noon:

1st place—C. H. Bayles.
2d place—K. N. Matthews.
3d place—E. A. Rashcoe.
4th place—G. W. Horstmann.
5th place—F. L. McAllister.

The above salesmen have all made good scores the past week. Following is a list of our other salesmen who are also entered in this contest:

F. C. Gorham
Earl Watkins
C. C. Karst
C. E. Gilbert
J. A. Loftus
V. T. Gilliam
James O. Harris
F. D. Robertson
M. C. Drumeler
Geo. O. Jury
H. D. Currence

Now pick out your favorite salesman and give him your very best support.

You have friends who are interested in purchasing homes and properties like Maryland Terrace, Vinita Park, Vinita Terrace or Rosemont.

Remember, also, that we have one of the most interesting and profitable propositions to offer investors in the form of

6% FIRST MORTGAGE NOTES
in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $250, $500, $1000.

and in addition to this we also frequently have First Deeds of Trusts, secured by valuable properties on the west edge of the city in amounts of $500, $600, $750, $800, $1000, $1500, $2500

We so arranged this contest that every salesman has an equal chance to win it.

Do what you can to help your friend on the sales force. He will appreciate it; so will the company.

Don't forget the phone numbers: Bell Olive 535; Kinloch, Central 537. Address is 816 Olive St., right on the ground floor.

$300,000 HOTEL TO BE ERECTED AT LOCUST AND 18TH

Arthur Fitzsimmons and James Hagerman Jr. Head Project for Seven-Story Structure — Price for Ground Highest Paid in This Section.

COLD WEATHER HALTS PENDING BIG DEALS

Block of Stores at Maryland and Boyle Avenues Is in Process of Changing Hands—Building at Grand and Sullivan Is Sold for $35,000.

The southwest corner of Locust and Eighteenth street was sold yesterday by Cornet & Zeibig, agents, to a syndicate of which Arthur Fitzsimmons and James Hagerman Jr. are the heads, with plans for a hotel to cost $300,000.

While the cost of the site, held jointly by August Chouteau of St. Louis, Madam de Noue of Paris, France, and George Taylor of Seattle, Wash., was not made public, it had been quoted at $2000 a foot, or $155,000. This is the highest price a front foot yet realized for ground, where the improvements are not considered, on this thoroughfare west of Twelfth street.

There is a frontage of 75 feet on Locust street by a depth along Eighteenth street of 155 feet, the site having a second frontage on St. Charles street. An old dwelling of nominal value occupies the site.

Seven-Story Building Planned.

The plans are for a modern seven-story fire-proof structure of 125 guest rooms, each equipped with a bath. The hotel, according to Ralph Coal, prime mover of the project, has already been leased to a well known hotel manager.

The site is just one block south of the Marquette Hotel at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, a McNair & Harris project, which has been a tremendous success.

The purchasers of the Locust street corner, representing the hotel building company, compose the Hagerman-Fitzsimmons Realty Co. The Shenandoah Theater on South Grand avenue, and the Kings on King's highway north of Delmar, were built by this team who have also just completed the Park Theater at Delmar and Hamilton avenues at a cost of $100,000. Another theater is being built by them at Grand avenue and Hebert street, at a cost of $90,000.

The improvements announced for the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets, it is said, are assured.

The completion of a century and a half of the life of St. Louis, this week, was marked by a revival of interest in real estate. G. Prather Knapp of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. called attention yesterday to the opportune testimony to the solidity and permanence of St. Louis which is given by the improved demand for business and residence property.

Cold Weather Halts Business.

Transactions in realty were restricted during the week, owing to the inclement weather, especially in the residence and outlying districts. There are hundreds of prospective purchasers, but they are not disposed to look at property until the snow or cold has subsided.

The large purchases of the last month or two, though desultory, betoken a movement of large proportions, Henry R. Weisels of the Weisels-Gerhart Co., declared.

There are now pending an unprecedented number of deals involving between $100,000 and $500,000. Most of them are on a cash basis, investment rather than speculation being the object. On the calendar are some large trades for apartment buildings with stores, or flats and for interests on Locust, Pine or Chestnut streets, east of Jefferson.

Block of Stores Swapped.

Development on a large scale is foretokened in the section adjoining the business area, which accordingly offers great opportunities for speculation.

A deal virtually concluded, it is said, is that by which a block of apartments and stores at Maryland and Boyle avenues, together with other holdings, are to be swapped for property adjoining the Scottish Rite Cathedral on Locust street.

The Grand building at the southeast corner of Grand and Sullivan avenues, was sold by Sidney Schiele, acting for the North Grand Avenue Realty Co., to Gustav Thal, a client of Ebbeling-Hannibal Realty Co., for $65,000. This is a two-story building, yielding an annual rental of $6780.

The building is in the development center of North Grand avenue, being opposite the site of the proposed North Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A. and only one block north of the theater under construction at Grand and Hebert street.

Thal's investments in the St. Louis realty market so far this year aggregate $265,000, it is said.

Sales of apartments were comparatively active considering the arctic weather, the demand favoring all sections.

REALTY MEN HEAR OF PLAN TO ENTERTAIN BANKERS

Automobile Tour of City Planned for Missouri Financiers, Says Hildenbrandt at Luncheon Given by John S. Harris.

Twenty-three realty agents and operators were the guests yesterday of John S. Harris at a luncheon at the American Hotel at which E. A. Hildenbrandt, president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, presided. As spokesman for the host, President Hildenbrandt outlined a modus operandi by which St. Louis is to be revealed to the 1500 or more bankers and financiers in attendance at the convention of the Missouri Bankers' Association to be held in St. Louis on May 19 and 20.

Tour of City Planned.

A tour in automobiles of downtown St. Louis and of the manufacturing centers and of the residence and outlying districts, will be the feature of the project.

Eugene Altheimer will be chairman of the Program Committee, including W. E. Caulfield and John S. Harris, the latter being the moving spirit of the idea. Out of courtesy to Festus J. Wade, president of the St. Louis Clearing House Association, the Board of Directors of the exchange will be asked to appoint a committee to confer with him.

The diners, incidentally, celebrated the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of St. Louis with happy references to Laclede, its founder.

Harris is regarded as one of the dominant spirits of the St. Louis realty fraternity. As sales manager of the Kilgen-Rule Real Estate Co. he disposed of by auction, in lots to suit, both North Parkview addition and Hillcrest with notable success. Several big auctions are now scheduled by Harris for the spring.

John J. Dowling, secretary, and C. M. McDonald, treasurer of the local organization, were not at the luncheon, being present at the session of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges at Tampa, Fla.

Progressive Policy Planned.

From this time forward it was announced a progressive policy will be pursued by the exchange. Among those present at the luncheon were:

FEDERAL PROSECUTION OF MEMPHIS BANK LIKELY

Depositors Urge District Attorney to Start Investigation of Failure.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 14.—Depositors of the defunct Mercantile Bank have asked the Federal Court to proceed against officials involved in the institution's failure, it became known late Saturday.

United States District Attorney Casey Todd admitted to a reporter that he had been requesetd to institute a Federal investigation. He declined, however, to take action immediately. According to the District Attorney, the depositors appeared before him individually, each urging Federal proceedings against any individual connected with the bank's officers or directorate, who might be held responsible for the crash Action by the Federal authorities, it is understood, would be directed through a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Depositors who placed money in the bank between the hours of 6 o'clock and 8 o'clock Saturday night will be reimbursed in full from funds still in the hands of the receiver, according to a ruling Saturday by Judge Fentress of the Chancery Court. The decision was given in the petition of S. T. Carnes, who deposited a check for $16,000 after banking hours. The Court ordered the receiver to return the check.

C. Hunter Raine, president of the bank, is still in jail. It is understood that he will, for the present at least, make no effort to give bail.

SIX MEN, TWO WOMEN, 2 CHILDREN, LOST AT SEA

Coal Barges Torn From String in Terrific Gale in Long Island Sound.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Feb. 14.—Six men, two children and two women are believed to have lost their lives in today's storm through the foundering of a string of four coal barges in Long Island Sound off this city. Hope that the barges might have survived the 60-mile gale was abandoned when the tug Salutation returned from a vain search. The barges were in tow of the tug Pliny Fisk, from New Haven, which put in here early today and reported their loss. The tug left New Haven yesterday with six barges. Between Bartlett's Reef and Cornfield Light the four sternmost broke away. The other two were brought safely to port and Capt. Edward Gilligan Fisk went back in the tug Salutation, a bigger boat, to hunt for them. The Government transport Gen. Brennan also took up the search.

Outside the harbor, the navigators of the two boats found conditions too severe even for their heavy craft. Capt. Gilligan said there was no chance that the coal-laden barges could have withstood such a storm.

C. Tindle.

The Montgomery County stockholders had several thousand dollars in the bank and they have been negotiating a friendly settlement but without success.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 781 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

*Ex-dividend during the week.

Total sales for the week, 1,190,200 shares.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review today, says:

"When a notable change for the better has come in the financial position, and when the change, during a week or so, has been emphasized by more or less spectacular news—a fall in the foreign bank rates, extraordinary success of a new loan offering at London or New York, upward rush in prices of British consols and New York City bonds—the market's appetite for startling novelties becomes so far whetted that a day or a week without such a series of events on a rising scale is a disappointment.

"Lacking continuance of the climax, Wall street and the investing community begin to hint that the revival has spent its force. The unpleasant incidents of the day receive the attention which they could not get when the fit of enthusiasm was on. This, by a curious paradox, is the seemingly invariable character of a sound revival in finance.

"Occasions of the sort, when no attention is paid to offsetting considerations, are open to much mistrust, in the light of experience. It is apt to be asked, by people skeptically disposed, whether the sudden January recovery was not, perhaps, a mere sunshine movement like the historic series of upward movements in 1908.

The Contrast Is Great.

"But the fundamental contrast between that season and this, financially speaking, lies in the fact that the doubtful and unpleasant possibilities, on which so much stress has been laid since the stock market reacted, were at that time deliberately ignored.

"When the steel trade was operating at 60 per cent of capacity, it was represented as returning to a boom; when statistics of unemployment began to make people uneasy, the Prosperity League held a convention and voted to make the first of June general re-employment day. The whole community was persisting in an illusion from which it had a subsequent unpleasant awakening.

"An even more startling awakening came from the mental condition of the spring of 1901, when Wall street not only refused to give weight to unfavorable possibilities, but roundly declared that such possibilities could not exist.

"Company credit was used to jack up the stock market, in order that there should not even be a disconcerting weather sign. The financial leaders were manipulating the barometer and tying down the safety valve, and the after-results were what might have been expected.

"There is at least no tampering with such instruments today, when the confusing evidences of troublesome spots in the situation remind one of how, at almost the moment when the great trade revival of 1897 began, stock of the bankrupt Northern Pacific property sold on the Stock Exchange at 25 cents per $100 share.

Public Is Sensible.

"Perhaps this calm and deliberate attitude towards an undoubted movement of industrial recovery is the most reassuring of all signs of the times. It at least means that whatever is to be rebuilt will be rebuilt, and will be soundly built and not piled up in the frantic haste of excited speculators.

"If a genuine business revival is to come, it will not this time be one of those premature experiments, on a basis of entangled capital and unliquidated liabilities, which marked such occasions as that of 1909.

"But the very fact that the foundation is solid should encourage care in raising the superstructure—which, from present appearances, will not be wanting.

"So far as regards the financial markets themselves, it will be more fully recognized, as time goes on, how changed the circumstances are under which the stock exchanges are responding to larger movements of the day.

"Such changes in the surrounding circumstances of markets have invariably come, with the longer readjustment, after a great financial panic, which marked the ending of a financial cycle. Conditions in this regard were not the same, half a dozen years after 1873, as they had been immediately before it.

"The same was true of 1893, and all experienced people knew that it would be true of the sequel to 1907. It is in all respects for the better that this should be so, and that the epoch following one of those historic events should be marked by the disappearance of the particular methods and machinery of finance, which brought the crisis on.

"But the change always makes the financial situation seem unfamiliar and incomprehensible, even when it emerges from the confusion of the years of after-panic readjustment.

"Stock prices closed the week irregular to higher, as compared with the preceding Saturday's finals. Trading was largely professional."

SETTLEMENT SHOWS BUYING OF STOCKS

Account in London Indicates Investors Have Entered Market Freely.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The fortnightly settlement of accounts on the Stock Exchange this week—which had been awaited with great interest for its showing as to the nature of the buying in the preceding rise—showed clearly that actual absorption of stocks had been the heaviest in years. It should be observed, however, that this buying had been for financial institutions and for a small but wealthy section of the public, rather than from the mass of small buyers, whose activities usually make a boom. Nevertheless, the recent buying may be a prelude to a boom movement, especially if the situation clears up in Ulster, Mexico and Brazil.

The week's renewed advance in consols, to the neighborhood of the previous high price, is ascribed in the market to belief that a compromise will presently be reached in the dispute between Ulster and the Government.

Hitherto the rise in stocks has been based entirely on cheap money; but it is generally believed that removal of the difficulties in that quarter will bring in the general public. If this occurs, a sharp rise in prices will be inevitable, because of the scarcity of stocks.

On the whole, a favorable view is taken both of the money and Stock Exchange situation for the next six months. After that, it is believed that a sharp reaction may ensue, because of the enormous volume of new loan issues.

Trade Is Reviving.

Within that period, these issues may redouble the influence of reviving trade, in the direction of hardening money rates, and driving back prices of existing securities. Yet there are signs of really growing demand by the general public.

The great success of the Russian loan at Paris, is one important incident, though that is partly due to the Russian Government paying both its own and the French taxes on the issue, thereby popularizing it with the French investor.

This was a good tactical move, because the problem in France just now is to attract the hoarded money. The situation at Paris is improving, but its slowness to respond to the great improvement elsewhere shows how bad the previous position was.

Another factor in the situation, is the fact that India and the Continent are now getting the bulk of our gold arrivals from South Africa. This suggests that the climax of easy money has probably been already reached—unless your market will participate freely in the rise of Americans, until those securities may be made attractive by the dearness of other stocks. This may occur a few months hence; but in the meantime, it is not considered that Wall street will resume great activity, unless impelled by great ease in money.

Such a condition we imagine, may possibly result from the operation of your new currency bill. But we do not expect that the full influence of that measure will be disclosed immediately.

CATTLE ADVANCE ON CONTINUED SMALL RECEIPTS

Steers, Heifers and Cows of Good Quality All Show Effects of Sharp Demand.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	12,500	12,104	16,728
Hogs	65,000	65,932	56,948
Sheep	12,000	9,323	11,693
Horses and mules	5,000	4,380	2,778

Receipts of cattle this week were just about of the same moderate volume as the preceding period. There was a vastly different story to tell of the market the past week than of the preceding period. Firmness, which was evident at the close of the previous period, continued during the past week, and the small supply acted as a stimulant. There was a much better demand and practically all grades of steers sold 15@25c higher. The top, $9.25, was made by a bunch of yearlings. Best heavy steers sold at $8.80, with a good sprinkling at $8@8.75.

The supply of heifers was rather generous, but there was a good demand all week, and heifers enjoyed an active market, with prices gradually on the upturn. Desirable grades of heifers sold largely 10@15c higher, and the medium kinds were on a good, strong basis. The top on mixed loads was $8.85; best straight loads going at $8@8.50.

Cows, Too, Are Higher.

Cows were in moderate supply all week, but the quality was a much improved factor, these being a good proportion of choice kinds included in each day's run. All grades of cows enjoyed a strong demand, and at the close, with the exception of canners and cutters, a 10@15c advance was evident. Best beef cows sold as high as $7.75.

Bulls reflected no change from the close of the preceding week, as the supply was moderate and demand fairly strong.

Vealers opened strong, but advanced 25@50c, with a top of $11.75.

Only small offering of stockers and feeders was available, and the demand continued strong, as a result the market was active, and prices mostly 10@15c higher. Best feeding steers made $7.75, and stockers $7.75.

Receipts in the quarantine division were very light, and came mostly from Texas and Oklahoma, with steers from the former State predominating. Only a very small proportion of the receipts came from Southeastern territory. Due to a much enlarged demand from order buyers, the steers were in keen request, and sold promptly on arrival at prices which looked a good 15@25c better than the previous week. Texas fed steers made $8.20, which was top, and fed steers from Oklahoma sold at $6.75@7.20. Texas grassers brought $6.55. No change was evident in the trade in canners and yearlings, as there were barely enough on hand during the week to test the strength of the market.

Hogs Touch High Mark.

A liberal supply of hogs was received most days, but at that there was not any more hogs offered than was needed, in fact, several thousand more than arrived would have found an active demand each day. Prices were on the advance most of the week, and at all times 5@10c higher than Chicago. A good many Southern pigs and lights were offered the first half of the week.

Shippers were active in their operations all week, and with the assistance of the city butchers made a strong trade for the good hogs of medium and heavy weight, those over 200 pounds being much preferable to the lighter ones. The top ranged from $8.70@9, the latter price being reached on Wednesday for the first time since last September. Most of the good hogs brought $8.75 and upwards.

Packers were good buyers the fore part of the week, but rather slow later, as they figured that the hogs were getting too high. Best packers sold at $8.70@8.90; fair grades, $8.50@8.65, and the rough ones, $8.25@8.50. Best grade of lights under 165 pounds, sold at $8.40@8.75; fair, $7.50@8.25; best pigs under 125 pounds, $8.15@8.35; fair to medium, $7.55@8, and the poor grades, $6.50@7.85 as a rule.

Good Sheep and Lambs Strong.

Just a fairly good supply of sheep was received each day, and there was no material change to the trade. A good share of the arrivals were lambs from Colorado, and then there was a good many Western lambs and sheep fed in local territory, also on sale. Native offerings were very scarce all week, and none of them very good. Buyers were willing to pay good prices for fat sheep and lambs, but the poorer grades were slow to move at any figure.

Best lambs, most of which came from Colorado or were Westerns fed in Missouri and Illinois, sold at $7.50@7.80; fair grades brought $7@7.50, and the culls $6@6.75. Yearlings were on a steady basis, and ready sale if good. Best sold at $6.50@6.85; fair, $6@6.40. The number of yearlings offered was larger than usual.

Mutton sheep that were fat, sold at $5@5.45, and they were in extra good demand. The supply was limited, and therefore those offered went in a hurry. Some plain grades sold at $5@5.25. Choppers and good stockers went at $3.85@4.50; fair grades, $3@3.75, and bucks, $4.25@4.50; most of them at the latter price.

Horses Steady; Good Mules Wanted.

There was a liberal offering of horses disposed of on the market last week, and values remained on a steady to strong basis all the way through. The Eastern and Southern states took a good supply of their kinds at good, steady values, and no complaints were registered as to the condition of the trade all week. Quality kinds found best sales.

The mule market was fairly good all week, but there was an easier feeling to the trade all the way through. The kinds that found the best market were the good, fat quality kinds of mules, ranging from 15 and an inch to 16 hands high. These brought satisfactory prices, and shippers were well pleased with their sales. Thin, common kinds were poor sellers all week, and should be left in the country.

SPOT COTTON IS SLIGHTLY WEAKER, SALES ARE SLOW

Like Future Contracts, Substantial Support Develops at a Certain Figure.

Cotton Consumed in January Is Fairly Heavy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Cotton consumed in the United States during January amounted to 540,874 running bales, including 23,735 bales of foreign cotton and 28,785 bales of linters, compared with 533,743 bales in January last year, the Census Bureau announced today.

Cotton in manufacturing establishments Jan. 1, was 1,651,466 bales, including 50,504 bales of foreign cotton and 87,081 bales of linters, compared with 1,912,903 bales on Jan. 31, last year, and in independent warehouses, 2,970,149 bales, including 2362 bales of foreign cotton and 49,519 bales of linters, compared with 2,657,048 bales last year.

Imports were 19,624, equivalent 500-pound bales, compared with 52,022 bales in January last year.

Exports were 1,052,198 running bales, compared with 900,931 in 1913.

Cotton spindles active during January numbered 31,112,728, compared with 30,359,843 in January last year.

The transactions in the spot cotton markets have been lighter during the past few days. Such sales as have been made, however, have been at satisfactory prices and not much below the level governing a week ago.

Future contracts in New York declined to a level close to 12 cents for March, but plenty of suport develops around that figure. It is said that there is a large speculative short interest in that month that has lost no opportunity to hammer the market in the hope that they might get to cover on some break. These interests were disappointed in the expectation of reaching stop-loss orders around 12 cents, but were assisted a good deal by the liquidation of a big line of long cotton held by the Memphis banker who lost so heavily as to ruin the bank. Soon after the liquidation of this cotton, the market recovered a good deal of its loss.

Mills abroad and in this country are not heavily stocked with cotton, and accounts from manufacturing centers all agree that business is good and improving. Wholesale dealers in dry goods report a brisk business and, better still, they report that collections continue good.

Cheap Money Helps Market.

The money market is easy, not only in this country but in Europe, and rates of interest in foreign capitals have decreased materially. England is more cheerful over the outlook for trade with the Far East, as silver has advanced somewhat. Sales of cotton in Liverpool have been fairly large, but the disposition there is, as always, to buy on breaks. Buyers have not overlooked the downward tendency of the contract markets and the consequently higher basis and are inclined to hold off on the small advances that have occurred. So far they have benefited by this policy and have bought some cheap cotton this season.

The weakest feature of the domestic market is the cheap offerings by the smaller buyers in the Southwest. Numbers of these have offered cotton for sale with the frank admission that, if the price was not right, they would sell for less. Nothing goes to weaken the primary markets as much as hawking cotton from mill to mill, and this has been done extensively this season.

How Receipts Run.

The movement of cotton is comparitively large, and interior stocks in the counted towns are nearly 150,000 bales larger than last year at the same time. The movement toward the ports is very free. Receipts for the season are some 300,000 bales ahead of last season, while exports are about the same. It is a reasonable expectation that from now on exports will be very heavy as compared with last season, although crops in other countries from which Europe draws her supplies are large. Consumption is not decreasing anywhere.

The total visible supply is increasing each week. Last week the total visible was 411,332 bales in excess of the supply at the same time last year; American, however, was only some 60,000 bales in excess of the supply at the same time last year. The movement into sight is large, and justifies the various increases in crop estimates.

While the present crop may reach a figure close to 14,750,000 bales, as some think, it should not, under the present rate of consumption, be too large. Already are heard predictions of a large acreage for next year's crop, and probably there will be a large acreage. There should be at present prices.

While prices have declined steadily for a long period, the price of middling cotton at this writing is high enough to make the cultivation profitable, and consumption is large enough to take care of a big crop.

Heavy snows east of the Mississippi River and light ones West, gave wheat futures an irregular range in the late trading the past week.

All reports received from the winter wheat belt were favorable, and there has seldom been a season when the crop has entered the growing period in a more favorable condition, and on an increased acreage.

It is, however, slightly a fallacy to estimate the crop on the present outlook, as a dry spring, bug damage, hot winds in Kansas and wet harvests may reduce the yield when least expected.

It is usually the case when the crop outlook is most ideal that crop scares, actual and real, develop. On this account many of the best traders in the market are favoring the buying side, on the theory that crop conditions cannot be improved upon, and that any change in the "scenery" over the winter wheat belt must be for the worse.

The statistical position of wheat is strengthening steadily and may at any time prove a vital factor in making prices.

World's wheat shipments for the week overran the estimates and totaled 14,600,000 bu, against 12,496,000 bu last week and 14,800,000 bu last year.

Supplies of wheat on passage increased 1,480,000 bu for the week against 2,248,000 bu last week and 4,984,000 bu last year. The total now is 37,592,000 bu, against 36,112,000 bu last week and 42,688,000 bu last year.

The statement of world's shipments shows that Europe is now coming to us for her current supplies. More than one-third of the total, or 5,000,000 bu, were contributed by North America, while Indian, Argentine and Australia only furnished 4,176,000, against 7,328,000 last year. This country has the power to dominate the world's price of wheat for the next six months, it seems.

The visible supply of wheat in Europe this week amounts to 78,496,000 bu, against 81,896,000 bu last week, showing a decrease of 3,400,000 bu. Last week there was an increase of 848,000 bu, and last year an increase of 100,000 when the total amounted to 79,600,000.

Foreign Crops Are Good.

The Foreign Crop Summary said:

"United Kingdom—The crop is favorable and the weather very favorable for field work.

"France—The weather has become seasonable and many complaints are being received of damage from the recent severe cold.

"Germany—There are no complaints regarding the new crop. The weather is mild.

"Russia—The weather is milder and the crop outlook is favorable.

"Rumania and Bulgaria—Crop outlook favorable. Arrivals are light but liberal exports are expected during the season.

"Hungary—It is severely cold and fears of damage.

"Italy—The weather is seasonable and the crop outlook favorable.

"North Africa—Improvement is noted in the crop outlook.

"Australia—Conditions are unchanged from last week.

"India—Outlook unchanged. In the central districts harvesting is progressing, but offers of wheat are absolutely nil."

Stocks of grain Chicago show: Wheat, 5,785,000 bu; decrease, 386,000; last year's stocks, 7,458,000. Corn, 8,924,000 bu; increase, 145,000; last year's stocks, 3,103,000 bu. Oats, 10,390,000 bu; decrease, 549,000; last year, 3,603,000 bu.

Broomhall cabled: "Argentine shippers here are placing the exportable surplus of wheat at 48,000,000 bu, while the consensus of opinion of continental shippers is that there will not be over 36,000,000 bu. Our agent cables that the outturn is very unfavorable and estimates are being further reduced.

Supplies Show a Decrease.

Bradstreet's detailed showed:

Wheat, United States and east of Rockies, decrease 1,970,000 bu; United States and west of Rockies, decrease 176,000 bu; Canada, decrease 831,000 bu; United States and Canada, decrease 2,977,000 bu; afloat and in Europe, decrease 3,400,000 bu; total decrease 6,377,000 bu. Corn, United States and Canada, increase 255,000 bu. Oats, United States and Canada, decrease 699,000 bu.

Broomhall's special Russian news cable said: "The weather is very cold, but snow extends over the entire country and the condition for winter seedings is favorable. The movement from the interior is being interfered with. Stocks at railway centers and accumulating points are ample, but shipments, although larger than last year, are in no wise heavy and offers are made sparingly to satisfy immediate demands. No wheat is being pressed for sale. The financial situation is strong and this encourages the holding attitude, which is further augmented by the reduced yield in Australia and small crop of poor quality in Argentine."

An Argentine cable said: "Owing to very unfavorable harvesting returns it is necessary to further reduce the exportable surplus of wheat and oats and the surplus of wheat is now placed at 48,000,000 bu and oats 36,000,000 bu. Corn, late planted, is a partial failure."

Liverpool weekly stocks of wheat are 2,544,000 bu, decreased 72,000 bu. Corn 2,933,000 bu, decreased 179,000.

The corn market was heavy and with little increased country offerings and little or no demand for the cash article. The Argentine crop is ample and the Danube continues to sell Europe, which with their big stocks practically gives them every bushel they need for some time to come, and any chance of our making any sales for export is indeed remote. Oats were easily in sympathy with corn.

Corn on passage for the week totaled 11,628,000 bu, a decrease of 255,000 bu. Last week there was a decrease of 281,000 bu, when the supply was 11,883,000 bu, and last year a decrease of 2,100,000 bu, when the supply was 21,250,000 bu.

Bradstreet's exports showed: Wheat and flour this week, 4,000,000; last week, 3,779,000; last year, 4,234,000; two years ago, 2,299,000. Corn this week, 62,000; last week, 297,000; last year, 2,712,000; two years ago, 1,523,000.

Shipments of wheat and flour July 1 to date, 180,086,000; same period year ago, 158,908,000.

Shipments of corn July 1 to date, 1,838,000; same period year ago, 17,554,000.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

EDITED BY T. W. ORCUTT
Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

Prize Winning Pen of White Plymouth Rocks

THIS excellent pen of white Plymouth Rocks won the first prize at the recent Coliseum Poultry Show in St. Louis. The pen was exhibited by Dr. L. D. LeGear of Kirkwood, Mo. This variety of the American class is very popular as a utility fowl. They have bounding vitality and build up bone and flesh rapidly and are excellent layers.

WORLD'S GREATEST POULTRY SHOW FOR THE ST. LOUIS ZOO

Post-Dispatch's Offer to Install Permanent Exhibit of 100 Varieties of Fowls Accepted.

Through the Poultry Department of the Post-Dispatch, St. Louis is to have the greatest poultry show ever planned. More than 100 varieties of poultry and land and water fowl will be on exhibition permanently as a part of the St. Louis Zoo in Forest Park. Each variety will be shown by six hens and one rooster housed in a pen 20x75 feet, with a model poultry house in the center.

A tract south of the zoo bird cage, with 2100 feet front, has been allotted for this exhibit. The construction of the plant and assembling of the fowls will be in charge of T. W. Orcutt, editor of the Post-Dispatch Poultry Page, who will act for the zoo officials.

There is no precedent for an exhibition of this kind. A permanent poultry show of this magnitude never has been undertaken. In some zoos the more ornamental chickens often are shown as curios. Even in limited time poultry shows, where breeders exhibit for prizes, there never has been a display of the great number of breeds that it is planned to put into Forest Park for winter and summer exhibition free of charge.

The idea is original with Orcutt, who suggested his plan to Robert A. Kaiser and George E. Dieckman, members of the City Zoological Board. They were pleased with plan and after investigating it thoroughly, authorized Orcutt to go ahead.

The Housing Plans.

The site will be staked out as soon as surveyors can do the work and the building of the fences and colony houses will be begun as soon as the weather permits. Orcutt has laid out a system of double pens and houses, so that two flocks can use the same shelter, but will be separated. Each pen will be 40x75 feet, with a partition running through the center. The house will be in the middle of the yard, the partition being in line with the partition fence.

The back part of each yard will be made into a sand lot and here the chickens will spend most of their time, especially will they be kept there on damp days. The front part of the yard will be a grass lot and the fowls will be let in there for exercise and to get a taste of grass. It is planned to have the fowls in the front yard on show days, although there will be a walk at the rear of the yards as well as at the front.

It is planned to obtain the exhibition flocks from the best breeders of the 100 or more varieties that will be shown. Breeders will be asked to donate the seven fowls wanted for a pen and the name of the breeder will be placed on the front of the cage, not only as a return for his favor in donating the fowls but as a matter of information for those poultry fanciers who judge birds by the particular strain as well as by breed. All birds accepted must conform to the standard.

Fifteen Pens Promised.

Although the plan has not been made public and only enough breeders approached to test the popularity of such a move, more than 15 pens have been pledged. Breeders wishing this exhibition for their birds may learn the details and what pens are open by addressing T. W. Orcutt, in care of the poultry department of the Post-Dispatch.

There also will be opportunity given to the equipment men to demonstrate up-to-date devices for feeding, watering and other care of the fowls, as the pens will be made representative of the best in poultry equipment in every way. The houses will be built under Orcutt's personal supervision.

The idea has created great enthusiasm among those breeders who have learned of the plan, as they declare such an exhibition will be the greatest possible boon to the poultry business in St. Louis and surrounding country. This move, following so closely on the success of the Post-Dispatch poultry department in opening the way for the State poultry show to come to St. Louis next November, is paving the way to make St. Louis the center of the poultry industry of this country, a distinction the city deserves by every right.

Poultry Problems Solved.

Comb Pickers.

My black Minorca hens are picking the male birds' comb and the raw places will not heal. Will you kindly give me a remedy to stop this?—Constant Reader, St. Louis.

Remove your male bird from the flock, bathe his comb with peroxide of hydrogen and apply burned alum to the sore places until they are fully healed. Feed your hens a little more beef scrap. If you know which hen picks the comb, trim her beak at the point down to the quick. The absence of the male bird from the hens for a few days will not affect the fertility of the eggs.

Broody Hens.

I have 11 chickens that have laid more than 16 dozen eggs since Dec. 10 and are still laying. Can you tell me how to make them go to sitting?—Mrs. F. S., St. Louis.

There is no way to make a broody hen set during other than the natural period. You are fortunate to have your hens laying in this manner. Would suggest that you purchase an incubator or buy or borrow a broody hen.

Leg Weakness.

One of my hens seems to have lost the use of its legs. It is not broken, but seems to be dislocated at the shoulder. The hen can move her left, but cannot stand on it. What can I do?—J. A. B., St. Louis, Mo.

Leg weakness is caused from lack of animal matter in food, close confinement, no exercise and overheating in brooders. Give your hen a dose of castor oil and add a little beef scrap in the mash twice a week. Afford opportunity for exercise, especially on the ground, and feed plenty of green food.

Indian Runner Ducks.

Mrs. J. W. Bismark, Ok.: Write to any of the advertisers of these ducks whose advertisements appear on this page.

Mrs. C. C., Belleville, Ill.: See answer to J. B. A.

Milky Eggs.

Our eggs, when cooked, become milkey. Can you suggest cause? I feed sprouted oats, corn and green bone. Eggs are kept in icebox. The chickens are Barred Rocks and Black Minorcas. F. W., St. Louis.

The average weight of a normal egg is two ounces, the contents contain the following compositions. Shell, 10.5 parts; water, 6.6; fat, 9.3, and ash, 0.9. Eggs belong to the nitrogeneous group of foods and naturally are combined in the diet with material supplying carbohydrates. Too much beef scrap fed to hens has caused the contents of their eggs to appear milkey when boiled, but in most cases this condition is attributed to weak shells permitting water to enter through the pores while boiling. Would suggest that you feed all of the shell making food, such as oyster shell and grit, the chickens will eat at all times.

Rhode Island Reds.

I have a pen of Rhode Island Red pullets hatched last May that are laying well. Would you advise using them for breeding stock this season or would you wait another year.—C. F. S., Belleville, Ill.

Your pullets, bred to a vigorous male this year, should give you good results. However, a great many experienced breeders claim that 2-year-old hens make the best breeders.

Apoplexy.

Please give me a remedy that will cure ducks that have large crops, with droopy heads. It is some kind of a throat disease which has killed three of four affected in my flock in the last two months. J. P. M. A. X., St. Louis.

Overfeeding frequently brings on apoplexy, indicated by a staggering gait, failure of eyesight, gas in the crop, small appetite and thirst. Make your mash more bulky by adding green food and bran.

Leg Weakness.

I have a chicken which seems to have lost control of itself. It seems to be in perfect health, eats everything, but cannot walk. Can you tell me what the trouble is? H. W., East St. Louis.

See answer to J. B. A.

Pigeons.

Please let me know an accurate way to distinguish the sexes of pigeons. Also does a pigeon need oyster shell to form the shell of eggs? A SUBSCRIBER, St. Louis.

The male pigeon's head is larger than the female's, and the male will sweep the ground with his tail when driving the hen. Pigeons should have shell and grit when confined in an aviary.

ANXIOUS.—Your hen died from apoplexy. See answer to J. P. M. A. X. Cut down your feed and feed plenty of green food instead of so much grain and mash.

E. A., Dixon, Tex.—Do not know of any breeder of this variety in this country. Would suggest that you import the birds.

Green Bone.

I have been told that green bone is good to make hens lay and am at a loss to know how to feed it. Some say that too much is injurious and will affect the fertility of the eggs. Should it be feed mixed with a mash? How much? How often?—Mrs. K. S., Farmington, Mo.

Green bone is a splendid food for the production of eggs. One ounce to each bird twice a week is sufficient. Any more than that is liable to injure your hens. Do not feed it mixed with other foods; feed it separately in a trough.

Frost Bite.

One of my cockerels roosted outside a few nights ago and his comb and gills were frostbitten. I rubbed them with snow and applied sweet oil the next day. Do you think he will lose his comb?—W. H. B., Webster Groves, Mo.

If your bird's comb was frozen it will turn black and fall off in a short time. If it is not badly frozen I would suggest that you apply vaseline to it twice a day, first removing the frost by bathing the comb in cold water before applying the vaseline. This treatment will often save the comb.

Frostbite.

Will you kindly tell what causes the tips of my rooster's comb, also the lower part of his wattles, to turn dark, and what can I do for him? I notice that the droppings from my birds are milky white and watery. What is the cause, and the remedy? MRS. E. T. B., St. Louis.

The comb and wattles of your male bird has been frostbitten. Bathe the head with cold water and apply vaseline to the affected parts. The condition of the droppings indicates that too much meat is being fed.

Poultry Suggestions

In cold weather always collect the eggs at least twice a day. Have the chicken house facing south.

Make all perches movable, and to fit into a socket, never nail, as they are then liable to harbor red nits.

Perches should not be more than two feet from the floor, three inches wide, with the edges beveled off.

Put kerosene or creosote on the perches once a month.

Test eggs on the tenth day.

Remember that a brooder that will accommodate 75 chicks at two weeks is not going to be big enough for them when two months of age.

When a fowl loses weight and goes lame, the cause is usually liver disease, and the bird should be killed.

Never have one perch higher than the other in the same house.

Disinfect the inside of poultry house once a year at least.

Your lost article is more likely to be recovered throught the Post-Dispatch than through any other medium because so many more persons will read it in the Post-Dispatch.

THIS IS THE CRITICAL PERIOD IN POULTRY YARD

Chickens Must Be Closely Watched and Hatching Prepared For at Once.

How about that incubator? If you have decided that you are going to have one this spring, get your orders in to the manufacturer early, so that you will not be disappointed by a possible tardy arrival at the freight station. A little later everyone will be ordering, and delays are dangerous.

For hatching extra-early stock, incubators should be started the middle of the month. This will give you chicks early in March and, with careful brooding, they should get a good start and be ready to lay in the fall, when eggs are scarce.

Many amateurs, however, especially those who are interested in Mediteranean breeds, defer starting their incubators until March 1. Those who raise the American or Asiatic varieties would do well to make an early start, as these breeds take longer to develop.

Be sure that your flock has been built up for an effective breeding sason. It is cheap insurance against poor hatches and puny chicks, to use eggs only from healthy, vigorous stock. Separate the best matured and developed stock from the others, feed them well, and use only their eggs for hatching purposes.

Many authorities give as an absolute rule for success in mating pens for breeding, to place 2-year-old males with pullets, and cockerels with the older hens.

As soon as you complete the arrangement of the breeding pens, dispose of your surplus males, reserving but one or two for possible changes in the make-up of the pens. The idle males are expensive lodgers.

If you want to have some broilers this spring, the incubators should be started early in February.

If your fowls have been kept indoors all winter, be sure that the weather is fairly settled before turning them out of doors toward the end of the month. Sudden changes are very often disastrous. The cold, damp days of early spring leave much havoc in their wake in poultry yards.

If you want to utilize the services of some of your broody hens this spring, be sure that they are in earnest before you place any eggs under them. Hens that are broody in February are very often changeable, just like the weather this month.

Be sure that your water supply is ample and clean at all times.

Another wise precaution is to see that the eggs you are saving for hatching are not chilled in the nests before you gather them. Eggs reserved for hatching should be kept at a temperature of from 50 to 60 degrees, and on their sides. They should be turned once or twice a day.

Don't forget the three evil D's—damp, drafts and dirt. All of them are costly to the poultry keeper.

If you have glass doors in your poultry house, look to it that they are cleaned often. A lot of sunshine may be kept out by the dust that is the result of scratching litter and which settled on the glass.

Before you start your incubator, run it a few days before putting in the eggs, in order to make sure that it is in good working order.

If handling an incubator is new to you, spend a good deal of time learning how to run it. Follow the manufacturer's directions in preference to taking a lot of irresponsible "say-sos" in regard to it.

Never overcrowd fowls, the egg yield will be poor as the result of same.

Eggs Under Hens Should Be Tested

Foolish to Waste Time and Run Risk of Breakage With Infertile Product.

It is a fact that a very small per cent of the eggs set under hens are ever tested, to determine whether or not they are fertile. It is quite as essential to test the eggs set in the natural way as by artificial means.

The poultryman who would run an incubator through a hatch without testing and removing the infertile eggs, would be looked upon as one with little experience and judgment in this kind of work. Usually it is an easy matter to set three hens at one time, then on the seventh or ninth day place all the fertile eggs with two hens and reset the other one.

Ordinarily there will not be more fertile eggs out of the 39 than can be covered nicely by two hens, but if there should be, the eggs may be divided among the three hens. If a hen has but eight fertile eggs under her, she will do better if the five or seven infertile eggs are taken out. She will be less apt to break them, and will give better results in the end.

A tube for testing may be obtained from any poultry supply house, or a tester may be easily made by using a small box with a lamp inside and a small hole before which the egg is held

South Slope Best for Poultry Yard

If Your Chickens Are Kept Where the Sun Does Not Shine, Move Them.

The drainage is a very important consideration in locating a poultry house and yard. The ground should be well drained by sloping to the south.

A yard on a southern slope dries quickly after a rain, and it gets the full benefit of all the sunshine, consequently it is nearly always dry.

The direct rays of the sun are great purifiers and destroyers of disease germs and this helps greatly in keeping disease out of the flock. When hens are compelled to run about in a muddy yard and so keep their feet wet and muddy, their feathers become wet too, and in cool weather they become chilled. Hens will not lay under such conditions.

Dampness is also a direct cause of roup and all its kindred ailments, as well as rheumatism.

In warm weather a wet yard soon becomes filthy, and is a good place for the growth of all kinds of disease germs.

If your poultry yard is already built in such a place, it will pay you to move it to a south slope. If this is not possible, then haul dirt and raise the ground in the yard high enough, so that it will be dry; clear away on the south side to let the sun in, and make some kind of a windbreak on the north.

The MAGNET that pulls advertising—RESULTS.

More often persons "take what they can get" rather than "what they want" in the selection of furnished rooms. This need not be so. The Post-Dispatch big Boarding Directory, arranged for quick reference, offers a wide range of selection. But this is not all. If it is not advertised a wanted ad will generally bring responses offering exactly what is wanted.

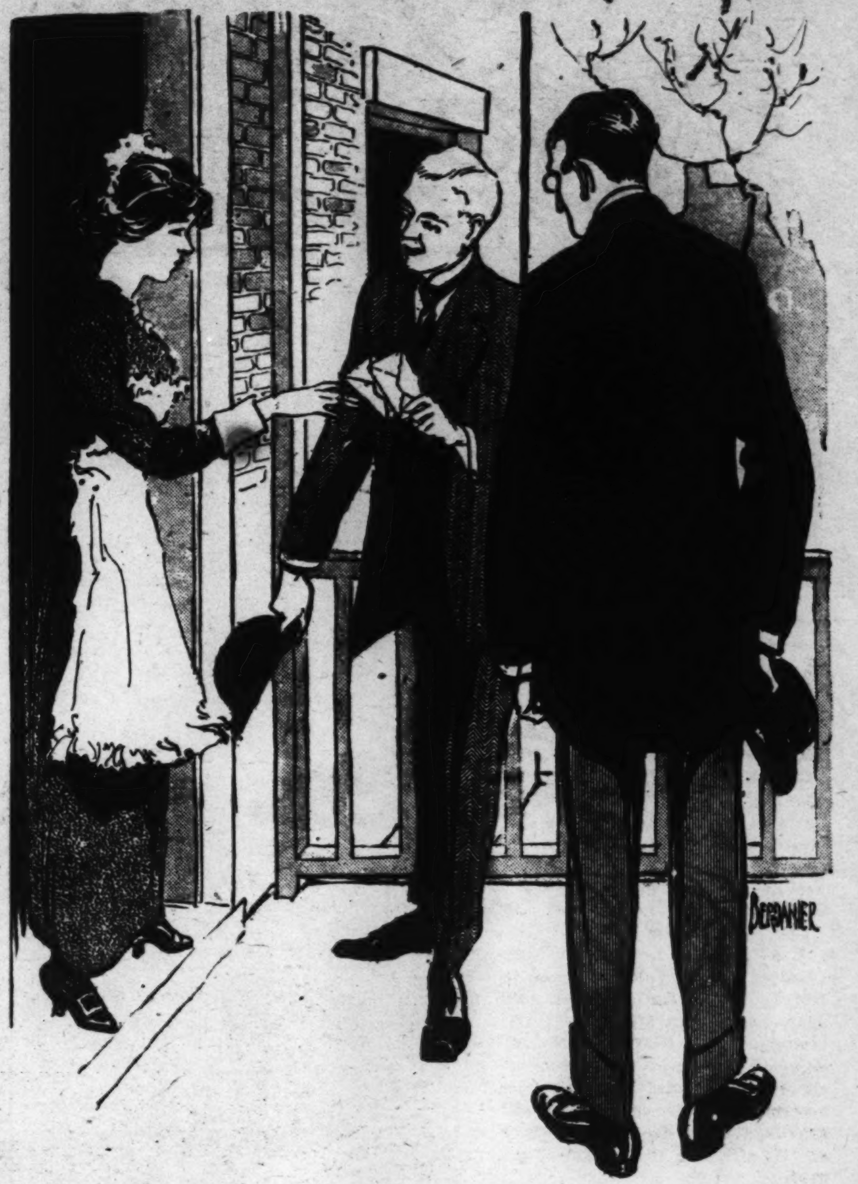
Little Swindles Within the Law—and Without

"Picture-Frame Game" and Other Alluring Schemes With Which Sharpers Ensnare the Unwary and Escape Punishment—Detective Chief's Remedy Is: "Call a Policeman Whenever Anybody Offers You Something for Nothing"—The Fake "New Directory" and a Dangerous New Artifice for Fleecing Merchants



"If you draw the lucky envelope you get a splendid picture of yourself free. If you draw the unlucky one you needn't buy unless you want to."

TWO suave young men presented themselves at the entrance of a home in the residence district of St. Louis and with a show of deference introduced themselves to the girl who opened the door. Would she accept a chance, they begged to know, by which she might obtain a valuable portrait of herself, a genuine aquarelle, for nothing?

They displayed cards representing themselves as agents of an art gallery, which purported to have been established for the respectable period of 30 years. It appeared that they had two envelopes, one of which the girl was to draw. If she chose the lucky one, the picture would be hers. And if she were so unlucky as to draw the other envelope, she would be under no obligation to buy the picture. That could be discussed later.

The girl yielded to the temptation which makes the word "free" almost irresistible to human nature. She drew an envelope. Wonderful to say, she picked the "lucky" one. The agents complimented her upon her good fortune and then causally asked her to sign a receipt for the picture, as a part of their daily report at the office. They gave her a printed blank and showed her where to place her name. In her joy over getting a "work of art" for nothing, the girl signed without reading.

Before departing the canvassers incidentally informed her that there would be an expense of $1.98 just "to cover the cost of material," etc. Later on, it developed, she was expected to buy a "24-carat gold frame," which would be supplied for $5.

No such art gallery as they professed to represent was listed in the city directory. The address given was that of another firm. The names of the managers of the firm printed on the contract were not in the city directory.

This is one of the methods of making a living, frequent in large cities, which Detective Chief Allender of St. Louis says are "within the law." On numerous occasions, he says, he has presented evidence of this same picture-frame graft, only to be informed by the Prosecuting Attorney that there was no case against the swindlers. The only safeguard, he believes, would be for men and women to learn to call a policeman whenever they are offered "something for nothing."

A variation of this scheme is to solicit orders for enlarging photographs of deceased members of families. The victim does not learn until later that the order which he or she signed included an order for an expensive picture frame. To compel collection, the original photograph is held and, as it is often the only one in the possession of the family, the game frequently succeeds.

A similar dodge was used in a subscription campaign. A woman who was already a subscriber of a publication was informed that if she would enter her name for another 18 months she would receive a silver percolator, of which she was shown an attractive picture. She agreed, and in due time received the premium.

It was a percolator and it was silver plated, but it was so small as to have been better suited for a doll's cupboard than for the family tea table. To cap the climax, the victim discovered that in signing the subscription order she had also agreed in writing to pay 50 cents extra for 18 months, or $9 in all. The percolator cost perhaps $1.50. This plan has been varied by using a carving set, of pygmy size, as a premium. Both are declared to be "within the law."

The most prevalent of these "legal grafts" is declared by Chief Allender to be that of overdrawing bank accounts. There are more complaints under this head, says he, than under any other of the class, the extent of the practice being almost incredible. Not once, but several times a day, merchants, shopkeepers and others report that they have accepted checks in payment for purchases, invariably giving cash as change, and then had the checks returned with the mark "No Funds."

The police investigate and nearly always learn that the sharper has at one time had an account in the bank drawn upon sufficient to redeem the check. "Any honest man is likely to make the mistake of overdrawing his account," is the defense, and the offender, although it is morally certain he knew his account was without funds, is given the benefit of the doubt. Of course, the money may eventually be collected, but there can be no criminal prosecution.

A new swindle, which is not literally "within the law," but is practically so, because the victim not only does not know he has been robbed but apologizes profusely to the sharper, is described by Allender as being prevalent in Chicago, and as likely to spread to other cities unless merchants are forewarned. He calls the operators "sure-thing thieves."

A man enters a store, makes a 50-cent purchase, tenders a $20 bill, gets his change and departs. An hour later, when the shop is at its busiest, a second man, of prosperous appearance, enters and also makes a half-dollar purchase. He pays with a dollar bill, but when the change arrives exclaims, not too loudly or indignantly, that a mistake has been made. He gave the clerk a $20 bill, he declares.

The flustered clerk calls the floorwalker and the floorwalker summons the proprietor. They all attempt to convince the customer that he is mistaken. He holds his ground with the calm and polite but also firm air of a man who is too sure he is right to become angry, but who also is determined to stand up for his own. At last he clinches the debate.

"I guess I'm what you call a crank," he says with a smile, "but I've had the short-change game worked on me before. So I've got the habit of keeping a memorandum of the numbers of all the bills I have."

He pulls out a purse and a memorandum book and shows the proprietor that he has listed the number of every one of the bills in the purse.

"This," he concludes confidently, "is the number of the $20 bill I just gave your clerk. You will find it in the cashier's till."

Sure enough, the identical $20 bill is found in the till, and the proof is convincing to the proprietor. After glaring malevolently at the clerk, he begs the visitor's pardon humbly and presses $19.50 upon him. The two confederates meet at an appointed place and divide the proceeds. The clerk is usually discharged. And even when the merchant finds a shortage in his cash, he is inclined to attribute it to some other cause than the wiles of his customer, so striking has been the evidence of the memorandum book with its list of numbers.

The "fake-directory" game, according to Allender, is also one that is not often prosecuted. An agent calls upon a business man and represents that he is soliciting advertising for a new directory. The merchant is invited to contract for space, but is informed that no money will be collected until the work is published and the business man sees his advertisement in print. He signs an agreement to this effect.

But the contract is so craftily worded and printed that it can be cut in two in the center without severing a letter, with the result that the part bearing the merchant's signature becomes a simple promissory note, collectible upon demand. After some months, when the transaction has become hazy in his memory, the note is presented for collection, always by "an innocent purchaser." The victim, seeing his own undoubted signature attached to a note, may be confused into paying, as the sum is some such small amount as $25 or $50.

The "fake employment agency" is operated chiefly upon foreign-born laborers. The swindler opens an office with lurid signs advertising that he has work to offer in railroad camps at $2.50 a day and board. Each applicant pays a fee and is gratified by seeing his name written in a book. A day and hour are appointed for his departure to the camp, and not until they arrive does he learn that he has been fleeced. He has no evidence better than a verbal contract. He appeals to the police, but the bird has usually flown. One Austrian, according to the records, recently obtained $3 each from 150 countrymen in one day by means of a well-staged "employment office."

On every hand honest persons are besieged by more or less ingenious schemes to separate them from their money. Some of them are old, but they still find victims, even after they have been exposed repeatedly.

Such is that of the man who, hatless and coatless as if he lived or worked nearby, rushes into a restaurant where there is preferably a girl cashier. He has a quantity of change in one hand and a stamped and addressed envelope in the other. He requests a $20 bill in return for the change, as he wishes to mail a remittance.

The cashier gives him the bill and thinks she sees him put it in the envelope

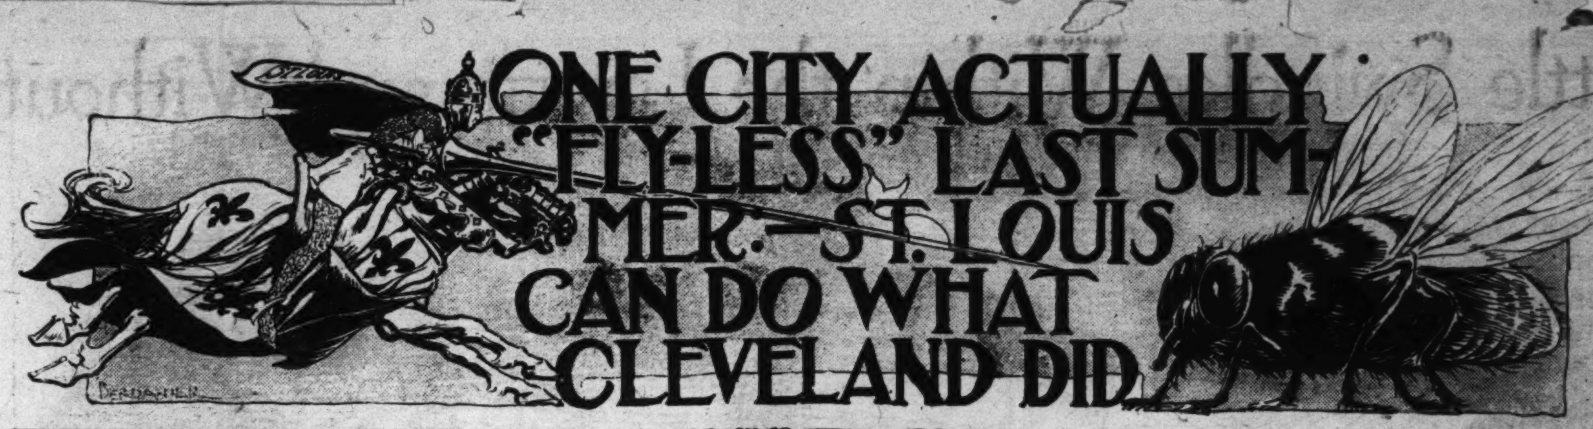
"I guess I'm a bit of a crank. I've got a habit of putting down in a memorandum book the numbers of all the bills I have. Here is the number of the $20 bill I gave your clerk."



ONE CITY ACTUALLY "FLY-LESS" LAST SUMMER—ST. LOUIS CAN DO WHAT CLEVELAND DID

CLEVELAND turned the common housefly into a curiosity at a cost of only $2000 a year, by beginning to swat pests that survived February, and by enlisting schoolboys as "junior sanitary police" to report unsanitary spots in which insects could breed. : : : : : :

The Menace of the Housefly

IT has been scientifically proven that the fly is the chief agent for spreading typhoid fever, infantile paralysis and infantile enteritis.

Recent research is declared to have shown that the fly may also disseminate cholera, bubonic plague, tuberculosis, anthrax, ophthalmia, swine-fever and possibly diphtheria and smallpox.

Even if the fly were not a disease-bearer, it should be warred upon as a disgusting pest, which wallows in filth, and then trails its loathsome feet across our food and faces.

DR. JEAN DAWSON

ST. LOUIS can be made literally a flyless city this summer at a cost of $2000, and the time to begin the campaign is NOW!

For a sum equal to the interest on the bonds of the uncompleted free bridge, computed from 6 o'clock any Monday morning until 5 o'clock the following Wednesday evening, the city can be entirely freed of that noisome vermin, the housefly, and of its shadow, typhoid fever the deadly!

This calculation is not visionary. It is sober fact, proved by two years of practice in Cleveland, O., which has thereby won fame under the enviable nickname of "The Flyless City."

Led by two women, Mildred Chadsey, Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Sanitation, and Dr. Jean Dawson, professor of civic biology at the Cleveland Normal School, the Forest City has set an example almost sensationally successful in exterminating the typhoid fly—an example by which all fly-afflicted cities may well profit.

Almost incredible, with something of the magical in their seeming impossibility to citizens of communities in which visitations of flies are accepted as something inevitable, like the coming and going to the wind—are certain statements recorded as plain matters of fact in civic reports issued last summer in Cleveland.

"Thousands of householders have found it possible to dispense entirely with screens at doors and windows," reads one sentence. "A lone fly now creates more excitement," says another, "than a great swarm would have aroused a few years ago" "A recent inspection of the city markets," runs another astounding assertion, "where quantities of meats and provisions are exposed, found ONLY TWO FLIES!"

How did Cleveland accomplish these marvelous results? Upon the familiar slogan—"Swat the Fly!" — Cleveland superimposed another and a more important one, namely, "Head 'em Off!"

It was snowy February and blustering March, not the prolific season of summer, which Dr Dawson, active general in charge of the campaign, chose as the time to deliver a strategic blow upon the enemy. The attack was directed against the "winter flies," those that had survived the cold season and would soon begin to repeople the city with their innumerable progeny.

"What harm can a few sluggish, half-frozen old flies do?" asked the doubting Thomases. Dr. Dawson replied impressively: "One pair of flies, beginning to breed in the Spring, would produce before winter if all their offspring survived, 191,010,000,000,000,000,000 flies, enough to bury the entire earth 47 feet deep!"

"But we can't find any flies," was the next objection. Dr. Dawson showed how sharp eyes could detect them lurking in the cracks of attic windows, in barn lofts, and in all sorts of odd, out-of-the-way hiding places.

Under the stimulation of a bounty of 10 cents a hundred for all flies brought into Dr. Dawson's office at the city hall, they began to pour in at a rate of 10,000 a day. This was not in the summer time, but during a boisterous March and a wild and rainy April. When the "winter campaign" closed on May 15, 490,835 flies had been killed and paid for—and this before the beginning of what is considered the fly season in other cities!

"My pets are starving," was the picturesque lament of a man who had six chameleons to feed. "You have brought about a famine in flies." This man was compelled to offer and pay good prices for flies with which to feed his chameleons. Two years before he could have had thousands of flies for the mere swatting, in any market or alley of the city.

How would St. Louis proceed, if it determined to adopt the Clevland model of combating the fly pest? It would first decide upon a fundamental working theory, and then arouse public sentiment and systematize it into a force of action.

The working theory adopted by Miss Dawson is that 90 per cent. of the houseflies are derived from unclean stables; and thereby hangs a story of the enthusiasm of a number of college girls. In the Spring of 1911, when she was a student in the senior class of the Normal School, a lecture was given in which the housefly was held responsible for the death of 10 times more Americans than were slain by bullets in the war with Spain

One of the girls asked the queston: "If the housefly is so dangerous to health why don't we get rid of it?" With that simple query began the movemnt which two years later made Clevland flyless

It so enlisted the interest of several of the girl students that throughout the summer they set fly-traps in various places and kept a statistical record of the numbers caught. Their report pointed unmistakably to the unsanitary stable as the chief offender. In the fall of 1911, the results of the experiment were published in the newspapers, and that was the public inauguration of the Cleveland anti-fly crusade. The Board of Health, the Board of Education, the Mayor, the churches, the newspapers and the moving picture all joined forces to wipe out the pest.

If public interest were thus excited in St. Louis, how could it best be converted into action? Cleveland found the solution by organizing all the boys in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades of the public schools into "junior sanitary police."

In each school district the force was officered by a chief, an assistant chief and four assistants. The principal of each school appointed the officers. To the boyish enthusiasm of privates as well as officers it semed no small honor to be a member of the "junior sanitary police" and to wear the official badge of the "force." Some of the girls were given a part, too, as "sanitary aids."

Each school district was divided into sections, and for the sanitary condition of each litle section one boy was made responsible. He was required to make regular inspections. If he found, on his "beat," a dirty stable, a rubbish-filled back yard, a heap of fermenting lawn clippings, or a leaking garbage can, he went to the person accountable and politely asked him to abate the nuisance. In nine cases out of ten, it was found, the request of the diminutive "health policemen" was promptly complied with.

But there were instances in which men laughed at their badged little critics. Such exceptions were visited by a boy inspector and then by a boy chief. If their efforts were without avail, the offenders suddenly found themselves haled before the Board of Health and menaced with the penalties of the law. The threat of a suit would not only bring them sharply to time, but inspire them with a wholesome respect for the "junior sanitary police," who had behind them the awakened conscience of the whole city.

By utilizing the school boys, the movement acquired an enthusiastic force, which without cost, save the bounty for swatted flies, covered every nook and cranny of the city. Besides, the children acted as missionaries in every home, taking to their parents educative fly pamphlets and circulars. Where other school children of parents lacking educational advantages would proudly display at home their triumphs in algebra, drawing and music, these exhibited with as much pride their knowledge of the germ theory of disease and of the fly's activity as a microbe carrier.

Clergymen were urged to preach "fly sermons," and many consented. A picture film, "The Life of the Fly," showing the pest at its birth in offal and in its habitual prefefence for filth, was displayed simultaneously in four leading theaters. Another slogan of good effect was: "Make a garden in your back yard." As a result, hundreds of back-yard gardens began to blossom where before there had been fly-breeding piles of rubbish.

A private firm, for the sake of the advertising, gave away 200,000 swatters to school children. In the manual preference for filth, was displayed simultaneosly were set to constructing fly traps. Sanitary officers gave regular instruction in lectures to their small aids.

Miss Dawson caught this man when he was prepared for work. She told him his badly kept yard was a disease breeder, threatening the lives of his children then advised him to get rid of it.

Miss Dawson carries her fly crusade into quarters where it is most needed. In this picture Miss Dawson and a number of assistants from Cleveland Normal School are holding an "anti-fly convention" in a tenament district.

A GIRL . . . YOU KNOW

Written and Illustrated

for the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine.

NUMBER EIGHTEEN:

HER OWN MONEY

DOROTHY had often bought presents for people, but they had been paid for by her "Dad." This was the first time she had ever paid for a present with money of her own earning. Her mother was delighted with the stole and muff and said to Dorothy: "That was very naughty of you, dear!" You know how mothers talk!

Of course, Brother Bill had his joke about how many people's teeth Dorothy must have ruined with her candy to be able to buy such an expensive present. And Pa Perkins had his joke about the income-tax-collector getting her if she didn't watch out. He also added that he supposed Mrs. Perkins would need a new suit to go with the furs. He was only being jocose, but Mrs. P. took him up and declared she would go down and select the material at once.

Dorothy laughed at the wry face that her "Dad" made and told him that it didn't pay to be too funny!

Mrs. P. also remarked that now she could give her old chinchillas that were getting yellow and mangy to poor, dear Cousin Lily. Cousin Lily would be very glad to get them and she wouldn't mind their being a little passe, as she never went anywhere.

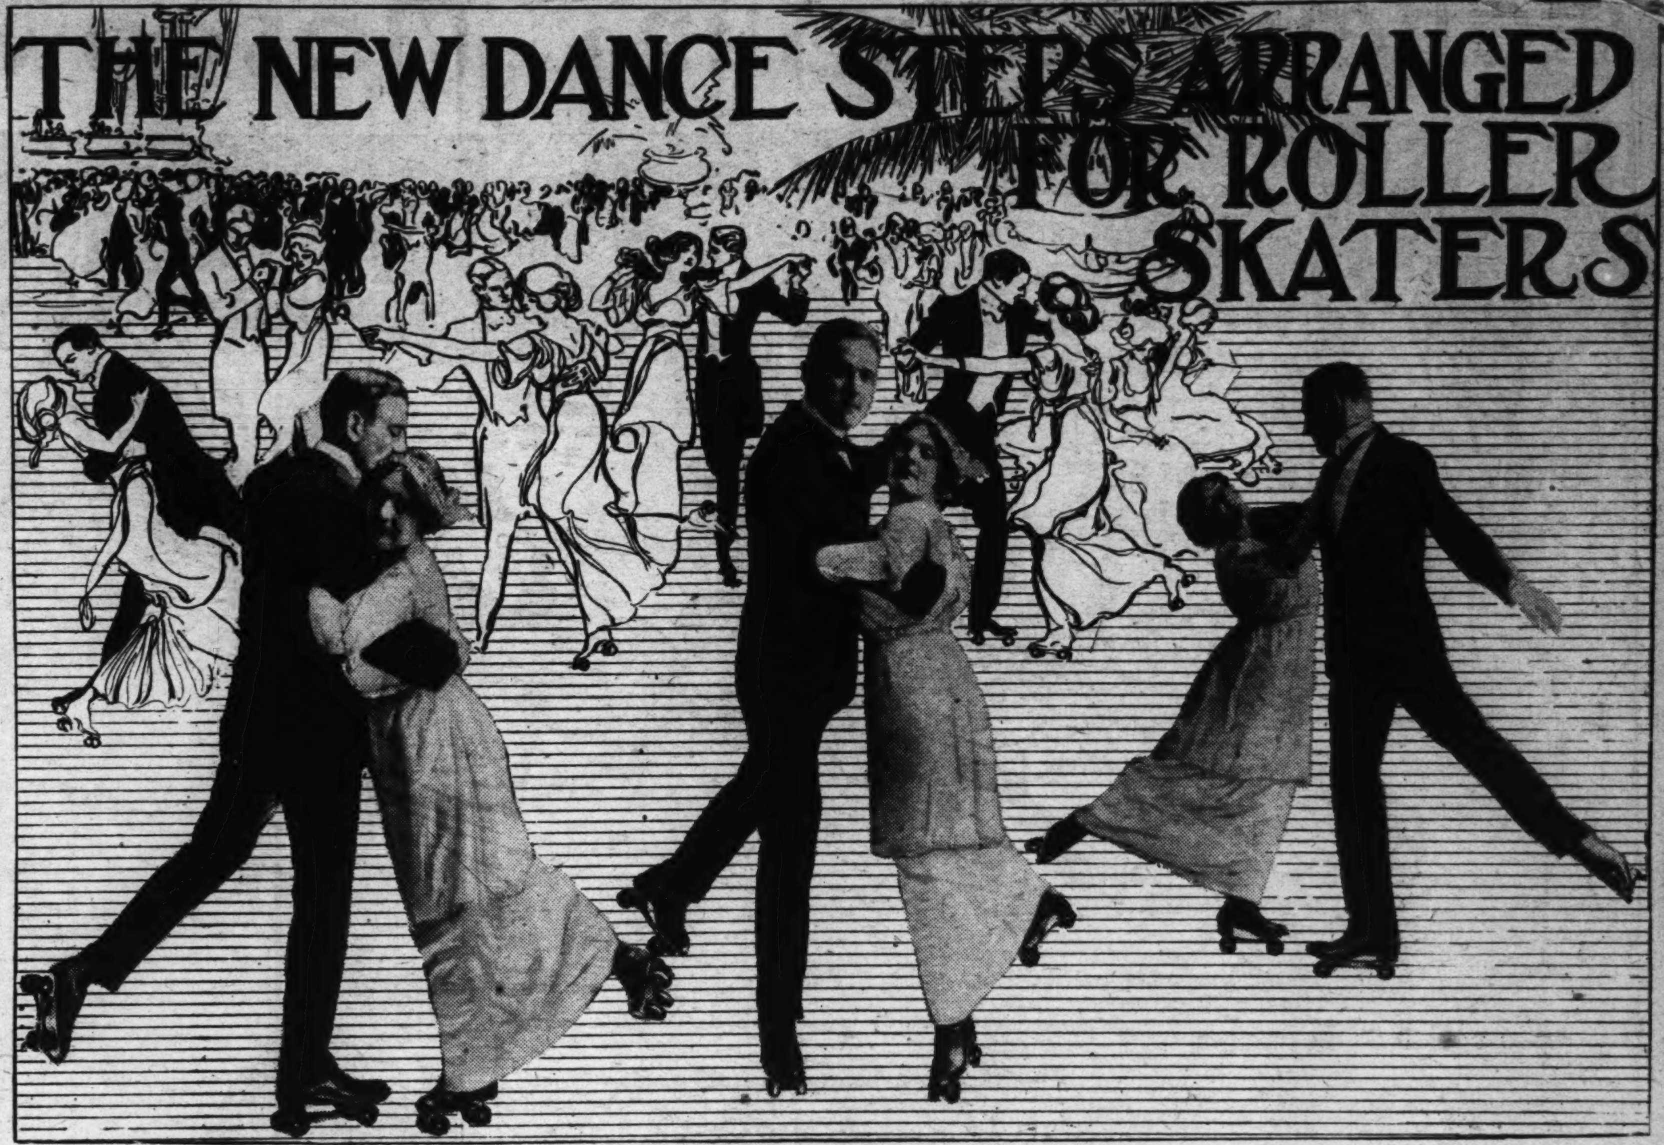
THE NEW DANCE STEPS ARRANGED FOR ROLLER SKATERS



No. 1. No. 2. No. 3.

English adept tells how to adapt the waltz, hesitation, etc., for skaters' entertainment

DANCING on the parquetry of the ballroom floor is not enough now. Devotees are beginning to find further outlet for this latter-day furore. Tango and turkey trot, maxixe and hesitation are now all done on skates with all the grace and poise imaginable. Ernest Worsley of Manchester, England, who has been teaching dancing on skates in New York and roundabouts all the winter, has prepared the following article especially for this magazine, giving a complete lesson in the hesitation waltz on skates, and he and Mrs. Worsley have posed for the accompanying photographs illustrating the steps.

By ERNEST WORSLEY.

IT requires no extraordinary skill to achieve the new steps of the modern dances on skates. If you know the dance in the ball room, and can skate the "outside edge" and the "figure three," all the steps of the most complicated dances are at your command on skates. Practice and confidence—no more than one needs on the ballroom floor—is all that the skater then requires. And with these essentials in time will come all the graceful pirouettes and spirals, edges and turns, which make up the finished dance on skates.

Suppose the beginner, having mastered the "edges" and the "threes," starts with the beautiful hesitation waltz, one of the most charming of the new dances and one of the easiest learned, either on the ice or on the floor. There are five steps to it—the simple waltz, the hesitation step proper, or "rise and fall;" the Merry Widow; the Texas tommy and the dip. Just as one passes into the two-step in the maxixe to change from one step to another or into the cortez in the tango to pass to any one of the hundred and odd steps in that sprightly dance of the Argentinos, so in the hesitation on skates we pass into the waltz to change from one step to another.

The music is the same as for the old-fashioned waltz—one-two-three; one-two-three! with the accent on the "one."

So, here are the five steps, easily learned with a little practice:

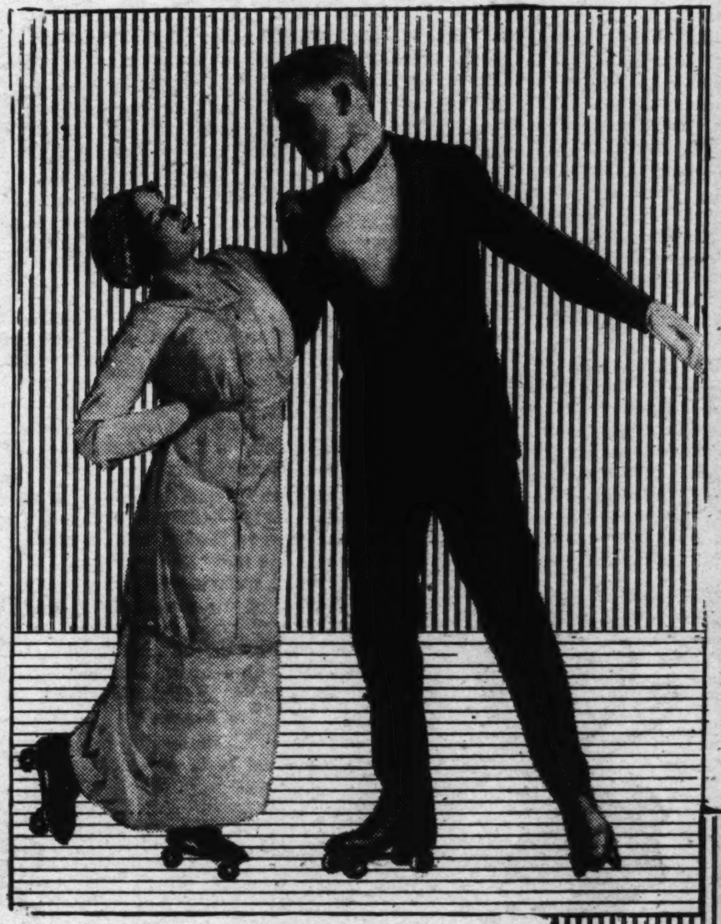
2. The Hesitation Step.—At any time the man is on the right outside back, the woman, instead of traveling forward as in No. 1, continues backwards, so that both partners are skating backwards on the right foot without changing the position of the arms. Both turn forward, springing lightly to the points of their skates (on the outer feet) and they hold this pose momentarily, balancing quite still, and then take up the waltz again.



3. The Merry Widow.—The man passes his right arm behind the woman's neck while waltzing, drawing her slightly towards him, while she rests both hands on his left shoulder, skating the waltz in this position. Now do the hesitation as in No. 2, without change of position.

4. The Texas Tommy.—This step is used to make an occasional change in the basis hesitation, say, every sixth or eighth turn. When the lady is skating backwards on the left back outside and the man forwards on the right forward outside in the ordinary No. 1 position, he takes his partner's right hand behind her back and allows her to travel beyond him until they are separated as far as their combined outstretched arms will allow. While the man still continues on his forward edge the woman waltzes back to him very quickly. He must be ready to catch her and support her with his right arm; then they continue waltzing.

5. The Dip.—Although the dip belongs more properly to the tango, the maxixe or the Boston, all of which may be danced with ease by those who know the steps on the ballroom floor and can skate, its introduction into the hesitation waltz is quite simple and effective.

Immediately after the man has made a "three" on the left foot in the plain waltz (the lady doing her corresponding change of feet) both go forward in the tango position on the outer feet (woman, right; man, left), spring together lightly from the toes and dip on the outer feet into the position. Both straighten up together, the woman by means of a forward "three," passing under the man's right arm, without loosing her hold, and so into the simple waltz again.

Repeat and you have the entire hesitation waltz on skates.

How Cleveland Became a "Flyless City"

Merchants were quick to sense the public demand for the extermination of the housefly, and soon there were advertised "flyless restaurants," "flyless markets," and "flyless dairies." Last summer 100 Normal School girls inspected 511 groceries, confectioneries, meat stores, restaurants and milk depots, and reported that in 60 per cent. of them not a solitary fly could be found.

Dr. Dawson, in her anti-fly circulars, repeatedly emphasized four rules, the faithful observance of which she declares will make any community in the world a "flyless city" like Cleveland. They are:

1. Kill all the flies that survive the winter. One fly killed in March is equal to killing millions in September or August.

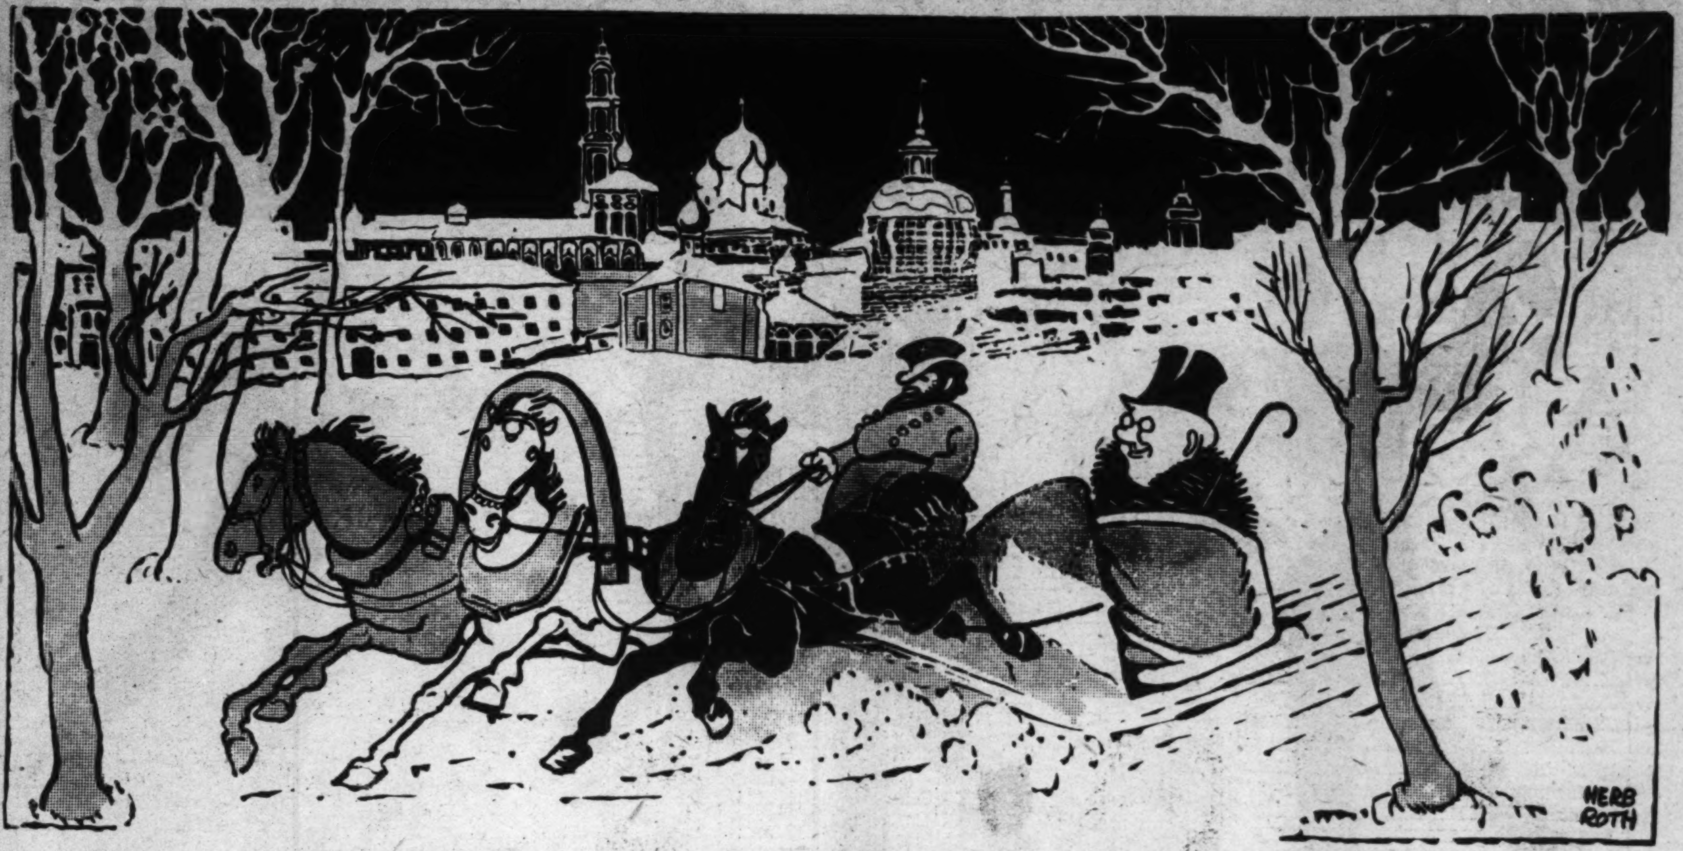
2. Be sure that no flies can either feed or breed on your premises.

3. Set a fly trap, baited with food, in the back-yard, so as to catch the insects on their way from their breeding places to your home.

4. Refuse to trade with dealers who do not screen their supplies and who permit even a few flies to be present in their dairies, restaurants, markets or bakeries.

At the end of the fly season last year Miss Dawson cast up the results. In Cleveland, within two years, a fly had become almost a curiosity. The cost, in money, had been less than $2000 annually, and Cleveland is not so very much smaller than St. Louis.

Money Talks in Moscow



Oil, mining and commercial development of South Russia have made scores of millionaires.

"Thomas," an American Negro, Has One of the Largest and Finest Cabaret Restaurants in Russia—"The Bat" Is an All-Night Theater Where 30 Playlets Are Given in an Underground Auditorium.

By Karl K. Kitchen

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.

IF your mental picture of Moscow has been formed from "Darkest Russia," "Siberia" and other similar Russian dramas, prepare to be disillusioned. The real Moscow is no more like that than the real Japan is like the prints of Hokusai.

Nihilists, police spies, cruel officials and the like exist only in the minds of fiction writers—so far as Moscow is concerned. This is a story of fact—hence the difference.

Moscow in the year 1914 is a city of nearly 2,000,000 people, with scores of millionaires who make most of our American spenders look like pikers, with cafes and restaurants that surpass anything in New York, and with the gayest, liveliest and naughtiest night life in the world You don't believe it? That's because you are not aware that Moscow, despite its age, is in the midst of a "boom." The tremendous oil, mining and commercial development in Southern Russia has made scores of millionaires almost over night. Moscow is the wealthiest and will soon be the largest city in the country. Naturally, "high living" follows. And here ends your lesson in Russian commercial history.

Like St. Petersburg, Moscow is not given to dining out. It is a city of merchants and business men, and they dine in the bosoms of their families. The Hermitage and Martijuish's, two of the leading restaurants, are never filled at dinner time. Nevertheless they are very interesting, especially the latter, which is in the great arcade.

So to the great arcade I went for dinner. It was fortunate that I was accompanied by a Russian friend, for at Martijuish's only Russian, Tartar and Gruisanan (honestly, that's a language) are spoken. One could easily get lost in this mammoth restaurant, which is as big as half a dozen American restaurants rolled into one.

There is no bowing, supercilious head waiter to show you to a table, agree with you on the weather and suggest celery and other dishes that the restaurant wants to get rid of. At Martijuish's you take any table you find empty and a Tartar waiter in an immaculate white kaftan and patent leather boots (like a Russian dancer) is on the job to take your order.

Like true Russians we began our meal with cold fish and vodka—which tastes not unlike hair tonic, but produces results. Between swallows I had an opportunity to survey the other diners. They're what a Biblical scholar would describe as a motley gathering. Not one was in evening dress. Many of them were in blue flannel shirts. High boots were more common than ordinary shoes. The few women at the nearby tables were also plainly dressed; but diamonds sparkled on their fingers and in their ears.

Dress plays a small part in Moscow. Aristocrats are few and far between. The diners at Martijuish's are only merchants; but there is more gold in their pockets than in the wallets of the fashionable official set in St. Petersburg. At the next table is Chartenonoki, the sugar king of Russia. Like ourselves, he is putting rye and sour cream in his beet soup. Yet he could buy out half the smart set in the capital.

Close by is an unkempt man who seems in imminent danger of cutting himself with his knife. My Russian friend tells me he is the owner of 8000 horses. In Moscow the apparel does not proclaim the man. Men who look like horsethieves order champagne with their dinner There is no sham or pretense here. Money talks with a big vocabulary.

It is now 8 o'clock. We call for our check. It is 14 rubles ($7), for we have had fish from the Caspian Sea, roast pheasant, endive salad and fruits from the Crimea in addition to several glasses of vodka and a box of cigarettes.

In Moscow one smokes a fresh cigarette between every course. We pay our bill and hurry to the street, for we are bound for the Art Theater, where the performance has already begun.

Moscow has three theaters devoted to grand opera and a dozen devoted to Russian drama and light opera. Of these the most famous is the Moscow Art Theater. Nowhere is realistic drama better acted than on the stage of this playhouse, the first theater of Russia. Seats are 5 rubles ($2.50) each, but they are worth it. The play is "The Possessed," a dramatization of one of Dostoievsky's novels of Russian life.

It is superbly staged and acted, but there is no applause. Applause and curtain calls are forbidden at the Art Theater, for art here is spelled with a capital A. So, you see, it is not a bit like "Dar est Russia."

It is now 11 o'clock—the hour when the ancient capital of Russia shakes off her lethargy. Theater going in Moscow is not very gay, especially at the Art Theater, which is too distinctly high brow. But at 11 o'clock the gay restaurants and music halls open their doors and life begins.

We elect to visit Thomas' for my Russian friend informs me it is presided over by an American, and I am anxious to see a fellow countryman. We hail an izvoztchick, as the one-horse sledges are called, and bargain for the trip. There are no regular cab rates in Moscow. The price depends upon several things—the absence or presence of other sledges in the vicinity, the quality of your fur coat and the degrees of hurry. However, we have no difficulty and arrive at Thomas' after a short drive.

Thomas' is indeed presided over by an American and a blacker American I never saw in all my life. "Mr. Thomas" is a "cullud" gentleman who came to Russia some years ago as a valet to a Grand Duke. His Highness took such a fancy to him that he started him in business, and today "Mr. Thomas" is the proprietor of one of the largest and finest restaurant music-halls in Russia. He expressed himself as delighted to meet an American and offered to show us his establishment—which saved us 10 rubles ($5) entrance fee.

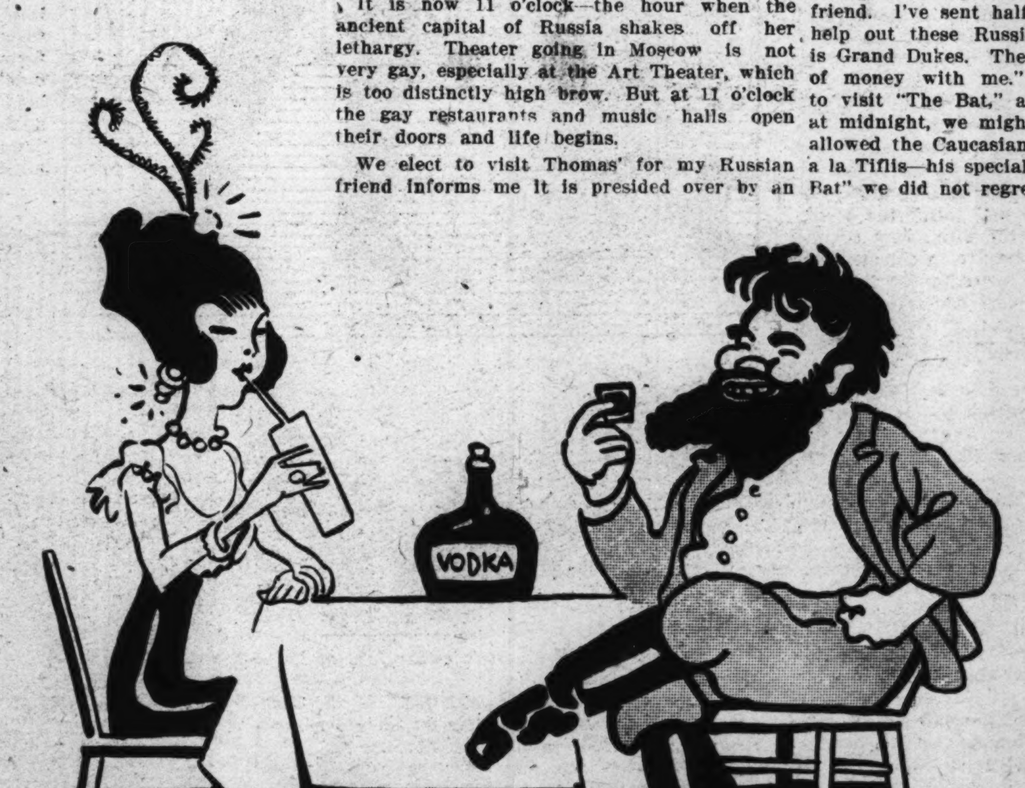
Thomas' is a huge building. In its main restaurant, where several hundred people can dine at one time, a crowd of people were finding their way to the tables, although the performance had not begun. They were a little better dressed than the diners at Martijuish's; but were far from distinguished in appearance.

"See that little feller over there," said "Mr. Thomas," pointing to a short man with an Oriental cast of countenance, "he's a Persian silk merchant—one of the best sports we have in Moscow. Always orders champagne by the dozen and spends five or six hundred rubles ($250 to $300) every time he comes in here."

The cabaret row was empty, "Mr. Thomas" explaining that it did not open until 2:30 a. m. The tango room was also deserted—not until 2 a. m. would the first dance begin. There were forty or fifty persons in the dimly lighted Turkish room, where a Hindu orchestra was playing, and as many in the "American champagne bar," where only bubble stuff at 13 and 14 rubles ($6.50 and $7) a bottle is served.

"The performance won't be very good tonight," explained "Mr. Thomas" when we returned to the big restaurant. "One of the Grand Dukes is givin' a party at his Moscow palace and I'm helpin' him out, jes as a friend. I've sent half my talent there; but I likes to help out these Russian gentlemen, especially if they is Grand Dukes. They is great sports and spends lots of money with me." If we had not been anxious to visit "The Bat," an all-night theater which begins at midnight, we might have remained at Thomas' and allowed the Caucasian chef to prepare a rack of lamb a la Tiflis—his specialty. But when we arrived at "The Bat" we did not regret our change. Every night from midnight until 5 a. m. 30 little playlets, more than half of them musical, are given in this underground theater.

It was 5 a. m., in fact, when we went to the restaurant "John," for caviar, pickled fish and champagne; but night was not yet over for a good many hundred Moscow citizens.



Blue flannel shirts and high boots are common in the expensive cafes.

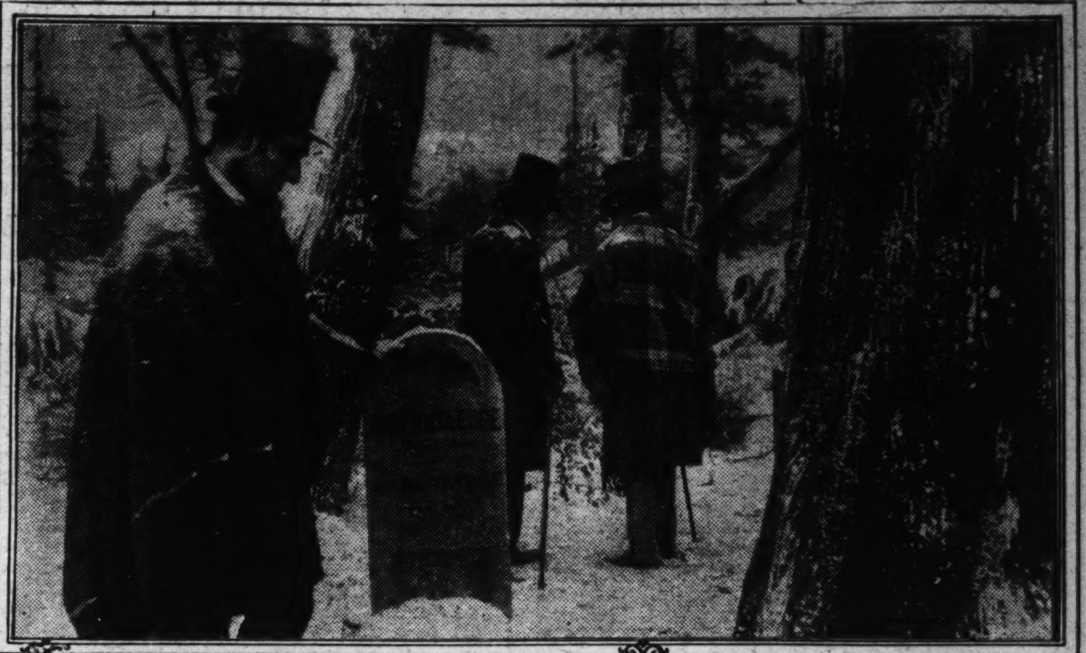
Hildebrand's Gate

ST. PAUL by the Tiber, last of the Roman basilicas, which has been restored, has a great bronze gate inlaid with silver, presented in 1070 by the Roman Consul Pantaleo. His agent in ordering the gate was the Archdeacon and the Abbot of St. Paul who happened to be in Constantinople where metal inlayers alone could be found. The agent's name is inscribed on the gate—"Hildebrandus Venerabilis Monarchus et Archidiaconus." In 1070 the "venerable Hildebrand" did not mean much, but he turned out Pope Gregory Seventh.

Ann Rutledge, First Love of Abraham Lincoln,

THE PATHETIC HEROINE OF A FILM PLAY

Greatest and Least Known Romance in the Martyr President's Life Shown in Moving Pictures



Standing in the snow by her grave he says: "My heart is buried here."

ANN RUTLEDGE has become a romantic figure lightening the too dry history of our country. We have had too much births of Presidents and dates of wars in the chronicles of the nation to grip the attention of young students. Nance O'Neil and Dolly Madison lend a little color to the otherwise dry narrative, while each year adds to the glamour of pretty, light-hearted Ann Rutledge, who might have been the bride of Lincoln had not death taken her to an early grave.

The truth about this early love of the great President is hard to find. Historians who wrote near the event were so hampered by consideration for the feelings of living kin that they ignored Ann altogether or passed over her relations to Lincoln swiftly and with small detail. Tradition, based on our human love for the romantic, and gossip of the oldest inhabitants—seeing events through a haze of years or, as it were, looking back on them through the big end of life's telescope—has built a story of Lincoln jilted for the handsomer man who went away and left the light-hearted girl to turn back to her faithful, homely lover, and of her death before the date set for marriage.

Ann tells Lincoln that she is engaged to McNeill.

John G. Nicolay and John Hay, who had been his private secretaries, wrote the standard life of Lincoln, in which they gave this brief mention of Ann Rutledge:

In New Salem, Ill., "he made the acquaintance of the best people the settlement contained and among them became much attached to a young girl named Ann Rutledge, the daughter of one of the proprietors of the place. She died in girlhood and, though there does not seem to have been any engagement between them, he was profoundly affected by her death."

But the next year he paid such attention to another young lady that he felt himself committed to her, though after a year he was greatly relieved by her rejection of his proposal. The biographers seem to intimate that there was another love affair before he met Mary Todd, who became his wife; at any rate, the state of his affections was so complicated that for a long time he was in a great state of psychical disturbance and desperately melancholy.

Those who had the data to verify and amplify these paragraphs from the biography kept silence and let myth grow until it has become as fact. At last the Vitagraph has given vitality to the story of Ann Rutledge in a moving-picture play, which is likely to be as fairly true to the real history of the episode as anything we shall be privileged to read in our generation.

This moving-picture play presents Abraham Lincoln, Ann Rutledge, her father—who is presented as a tavern keeper, which in that day was a position of prominence in a small community—and John McNeill, the handsomer man.

McNeill writes that he will never return and Ann turns to Lincoln for consolation.

The period is 1838, before the era of railroads, in the day when Illinois was far west—a pioneer State, in the first stage of its development. The people were from all parts of the country, few were native born. Most of them came from the Virginias and Kentucky; between them there was much rivalry and antagonism. Lincoln was of the Kentuckians. All his ancestors had been poor folk, who pioneered ahead of those who grew rich and cultured in the lands folk like the Lincolns reclaimed. McNeill, tradition has it, was a Virginian, of a well-to-do family and possessed of graces in person and manners; while Lincoln was notably homely, ungainly in movement, very tall and very thin. McNeill had a light tongue and Lincoln the slow utterance of the people from whom he sprang. This is the background before which the film story of Ann Rutledge is played.

As the reel unwinds this story is unfolded: Lincoln is President. He has sought privacy after his first inauguration, shutting himself away from the cheers of the crowd, the congratulations of his partisans, the sycophancy of place seekers and importunities of friends. He is realizing the full extent of the burden he has undertaken to carry and the loneliness of those who achieve the high places which he now occupies.

Ann consents to marry Lincoln.

As he sits before a fire, in the soft light, he seems to see as in a dream the grave of Ann Rutledge and himself standing in the snow above it, saying: "My heart is buried here." He dreams of the gladness that might have been his had she lived to see him win to his high estate, which without her seems so valueless.

His mind goes back over all the details of their relations. He sees Ann as he knew her before John McNeill came to charm her; when she was kind to him alone, leaned on him, depended on him and brought all her little woes to him. He sees her the spirit of happiness in her father's tavern, recalls the grammar he gave her and his futile efforts to educate her. He recalls how her father found the grammar and made a jest of the gift before the idle neighbors who lounged in the tavern, and twitted Lincoln to conjugate the verb to love. Then McNeill comes upon the scene and the girl's affections change. Lincoln is her friend, but McNeill calls her from his side and strolls with her along the river bank. McNeill proposes marriage and she consents. Full of her new happiness she flies to her friend, Lincoln, to tell the news, little knowing that her joy is his greatest grief. He struggles with himself and is at last able to tell her that he hopes for her happiness.

Soon McNeill is called away to the deathbed of his mother in the East. He is kept away for a long time attending to the business of his inheritance. At first his letters are warm and lover-like and as frequent as the mails of that day permit; but the letters cease. Ann turns to her friend, Lincoln, for comfort and he encourages her hope. The months pass and bring her no letter from McNeill.

Finally she does hear from him, and learns that he will never return. Again she turns to Lincoln in her hour of sorrow and he comforts her.

The following spring, her faith in men restored, she responds to Lincoln's devoted love, and consents to become his wife. Illness soon comes upon her, and in spite of all Lincoln can do to help her, she gets weaker and weaker and soon realizes, as do [illegible] friends, that her days on ea[illegible]e numbered. Lincoln to himself frames the words: "It might have been so wonderful; it was meant not to be." The end comes, and Lincoln, in spite of his manly strength can hardly bear his grief.

Again his mind reverts to her, he sees himself standing out in the snowstorm by her grave, with head bowed low, and an expression of great love on his face.

The soft light of the log fire gleams playfully on his countenance, as his old servant tiptoes in, and looks a moment lovingly at his master, but quietly goes out again without disturbing his sleep.

Ann dies in her lover's arms.

Thackeray's Platonic Love

IN the famous collection of Thackeray manuscripts gathered by the late Maj. William H. Lambert of Philadelphia is the correspondence of the novelist with Mrs. Brookfield. In May, 1840, Thackeray's youngest child, Harriet (later Mrs. Leslie Stephen) was born, and Mrs. Thackeray became very ill, and it became necessary to place her in charge of attendants, where she remained until her death 30 years later than her husband. Her necessities were carefully looked after by Thackeray, but the novelist felt the need of a woman's sympathy, and he found it in the person of Mrs. Brookfield, the wife of an intimate friend, to whom he poured out his affection in letters. The platonic friendship was well understood within their private circle.

SYNOPSIS

P. (PERCIVAL) SYBARITE on the eve of his thirty-second birthday is bookkeeper for Whigham & Wimper, hides and skins, for $15 a week. His wealthy cousin. Mae Alys, sends him tickets for a theater box. He invites George Bross, the latter's flame, Miss Prim and Madge Lessing to go with him to see "Kismet." Madge is in the gloves at Blessington's, a great department store owned by Marian Blessington who, to escape an engagement with the son of her guardian, Brian Shaynon, is said to have disappeared. Sybarite, Bross, Miss Prim and Miss Lessing live in the same boarding house.

CHAPTER V.

The Comic Spirit.

PAUSING at the foot of the stoop, Miss Lessing looked up at the two young men and smiled.

"Good evening," she said, with a pretty nod for P. Sybarite; and, with its fellow for George: "Good evening, Mr. Bross," she added.

Having acknowledged this salutation with that quaint courtesy which somehow seemed to fit him like a garment, P. Sybarite smiled strangely at the shipping clerk.

The latter mumbled something incoherent, glanced wildly toward the young woman, and spluttered explosively; all with a blush so deep that its effect was apoplectic.

Alarmed by this exhibition, Miss Lessing questioned P. Sybarite.

"George is a little bit excited," he apologized. "Every so often he becomes obsessed with a mad desire to impose upon some simple and credulous nature like mine. And failure always unbalances him. He becomes excitable—ah—irrational"——

With an inarticulate snort, Mr. Bross turned and fled into the house.

Confusion possessed him, and with it rage. Stumbling blindly on the first flight of steps, he clawed the atmosphere with fingers that itched for violent revenge.

"I'll get even," he muttered savagely. "I'll get hunk with that boob if it's the last act of my life!"

Fortunately, the hall was gloomy and at that moment deserted.

It was with a suggestion of stealth that he ascended the second flight—with an enforced deliberateness and caution that were wasted For as he reached the top, the door of the back hall bedroom opened gently for the space of three inches. Through this aperture were visible a pair of bright eyes, with the curve of a plump and pretty cheek and an adorable bare arm and shoulder.

"That you, George?" Violet Prim demanded with vivacity.

Reluctantly he stopped, and in a throaty monosyllable admitted his identity.

"Well, how'd it go off?"

"Fine!"

"He fell for it?"

"All over himself. Honest, Vi, it was a scream to watch his eyes pop. You could've clubbed 'em outa his bean without touchin' his beak. I 'most died."

Miss Prim giggled appreciatively.

"You're a wonder, George," she applauded. "It takes you to think 'em out."

"Ah, I don't know," returned her admirer with becoming modesty.

"He's gone on her, all right, ain't he?"

"Crazy about her!"

"Think he'll make a play for her now?"

George demurred. Downright lying was all very well; he could manage that with passable craft, especially when, as in this instance, detection would be difficult; but prophecy was a little out of his line. Though, with misgivings, he resorted to unvarnished truth:

"You never can tell about P. S. He's a queer little gink."

Footsteps became audible on the stairs below.

"Well, so long. See you at dinner," George added in haste.

CHAPTER VI.

Spring Twilight.

WHEN he had shaved (with particular care) and changed his linen (trimming collar and cuffs to a degree of uncommon nicety) and resumed his coat (brushing and hating it simultaneously and with equal ferocity, for its very shabbiness), P. Sybarite sought out a pipe, old and disreputable enough to be a comfort to any man and sat down by the one window of his room (top floor, hall, back) to smoke and consider the state of the universe while awaiting the dinner gong.

In fact, George had wrought more disastrously upon his temper than P. Sybarite had let him see. His hints, innuendoes and downright assertions had in reality distilled a subtle poison into the little man's humor. For in spite of his embattled incredulity and the clear reasoning with which he had overborne George's futile insistence, there still lingered in his mind (and always would, until he knew the truth himself) a carking doubt.

Perhaps it was true. Perhaps George had guessed shrewdly. Perhaps Molly Lessing of the glove counter really was one and the same with Marian Blessington of the fabulous fortune.

Old Brian Shaynon was a known devil of infinite astuteness; it would be quite consistent with his character and past performances if, despairing of gaining control of his ward's money by urging her into unwelcome matrimony with his son, he had contrived to overreach her in some manner, and so driven her to become self-supporting.

Perhaps hardly likely—the hypothesis was none the less quite plausible; a thing had happened within P. Sybarite's knowledge of Brian Shaynon.

Even if George's romance were only true in part, these were wretched circumstances for a girl of gentle birth and rearing to adopt.

Was this radiant spirit of youth and gentle loveliness (who might, for all one knew to the contrary, be Marian Blessington, after all) to be suffered to become one of that disconsolate crew?

What could be done to prevent it?

Nothing that the wits of P. Sybarite could compass; he was as inefficient as any gnat in any web.

Through the hall resounded the clangor of a cracked gong announcing dinner. Sighing, P. Sybarite rose and knocked the ashes delicately from his pipe—saving the dottle for a good-night whiff after the theater.

Being Saturday, it was the night of ham-and-beans. P. Sybarite loathed ham-and-beans with a deathly loathing. Nevertheless, he ate his dole of ham-and-beans. He sat on the landlady's right, and was reluctant to hurt her feelings or incur her displeasure. Besides, he was hungry. Between the home-exerciser and the daily walks to and from the Brooklyn Bridge, his normal appetite was that of an athlete in the pink of training.

Miss Lessing sat on the same side of the main dining table, but half a dozen chairs away. P. Sybarite couldn't see her save by craning his neck. He refused to crane his neck; it might seem ostentatious.

Violet and her George occupied adjoining chairs at another and smaller table. Their attendance was occasionally manifested through the medium of giggles and guffaws. P. Sybarite envied them: he had it in his heart to envy anybody young enough to be able to see a joke at that dinner table.

By custom, the landlady relinquished her seat some minutes in advance of any guest. When P. Sybarite left the room he found her established at a desk in the basement hallway. Pausing he delivered unto her the major portion of his week's wage. Setting aside another certain amount against the cost of laundry work, tobacco and incidentals, he had $5 left.

He wondered if he dared risk the extravagance of a modest supper after the theater; and knew he dared not—knew it in a wretchedness of spirit, cursing his fate.

Discontent bred in him a brooding despondency. He felt quite sure that the realists were right about life: it wasn't worth living, after all.

The prospect of the theater lost its attraction. He was sure he wouldn't enjoy it. Such silly, romantical nonsense was out of tune with the immortal truth about things, which he had just discovered. Life was a poor joke.

At his side, George Bross, on his behalf, was nursing his private and personal grouch. Between them they manufactured an atmosphere of gloom that would have done credit to a brace of dumb Socialists.

But presently Miss Prim and Miss Lessing appeared, and changed all that in a twinkling.

CHAPTER VII.

Aftermath.

"WELL," observed Violet generously. "I thought little me was pretty well stage broke; but I gotta hand it to Otis. He's some actor. He had me going from the first snore."

"Some actor is right," affirmed Mr. Bross with conviction, "and some show, too, if you wanta know. I could sit through it twicet. Say, I couldn't quit thinkin' what a grand young time I'd start in this old burg if I could only con this 'Kismet' thing into slippin' me my day of days. Believe me or not, there would be a party."

"What would you do?" asked Molly Lessing, smiling.

"Well, the first flop I'd nail down all the coin that was handy and then I'd buy me a flock of automobiles—and have a table reserved for me at the Knickerbocker for dinner every night—and"—— Imagination flagged.

With a resentful grunt, Mr. Bross clamped a warm, moist hand round the plump arm of his charmer, and with masterful address propelled her from the curb in front of the theater, where the little party had paused, to the northwest corner of Broadway, their progress consisting in series of frantic rushes, broken by abrupt pauses to escape annihilation in the roaring after-theater crush of motor cars. P. Sybarite, moving instinctively to follow, leaped back to the sidewalk barely in time to save his toes a crushing beneath the tires of a hurtling taxicab.

He smiled a furtive apology at Molly Lessing, who had demonstrated greater discretion, and she returned the smile in the friendliest manner. His head was buzzing—and her eyes were kind. Neither spoke; but for an instant he experienced a breathless sense of sympathetic isolation with her, there on that crowded corner, elbowed and shouldered in the eddy by the junction of the outpouring audience with the midnight tides of wayfarers surging north and south.

The wonder and the romance of the play were still warm and vital in his imagination, infusing his thoughts with a roseate glamour of unreality, wherein all things were possible.

The iridescent imagery of the "Arabian Nights" of his boyhood (who has forgotten the fascination of those three fat old volumes of crabbed type illuminated with their hundreds of cramped old wood-cuts?) had, in a scant three hours, been recreated for him by Knoblauch's fantastic drama, with its splendid investment of scene and costume, its admirable histrionic interpretation, and the robust, yet exquisitely tempered artistry of Otis Skinner.

For three hours he had forgotten his lowly world, had lived on the high peaks of romance, breathing only their rare atmosphere that never was on land or sea.

Difficult he found it now to divest his thoughts of that enthrallment, to descend to cold and sober reality, to remember he was a clerk, his companion a shop girl, rather than a Prince disguised as Calander esquiring a Princess dedicated to fatal enchantment—that "Kismet" was a quaint fallacy, one with that whimsical conceit of Orient fatalism which assigns to each and every man his day of days, wherein he shall range the skies and plumb the abyss of his destiny alternately lord and puppet.

But presently, with an effort, blinking, he pulled his wits together; and a traffic policeman creating a favorable opening, the two scurried across and plunged into the comparative obscurity of West Thirty-eighth street; sturdy George and his modest Violet already a full block in advance.

Discovering this circumstance by the glimmer through the shadows of Violet's conspicuously striped black-and-white taffeta, P. Sybarite commented charitably upon their haste.

"If we hurry we might catch up," suggested Molly Lessing.

"I don't miss 'em much," he admitted, without offering to mend the pace.

She laughed softly.

"Are they really in love?"

"George is," replied P. Sybarite, after taking thought.

"You mean she isn't?"

"To blush unseen is Violet's idea of nothing to do—not, at least, when one is a perfect 38 and possesses a good digestion and an infinite capacity for amusement a la carte."

"That is to say," the girl prompted.

"Violet will marry well, if at all."

"Not Mr. Bross, then?"

"Nor any other poor man. I don't say she doesn't care for George, but before anything serious comes of it he'll have to make good use of his day of days—if 'Kismet' ever sends him one. I hope it will," P. Sybarite added sincerely.

"You don't believe—really"——

"Just now? With all my heart! I'm so full of romantic nonsense I can hardly stick. Nothing is too incredible for me to believe tonight. I'm ready to play Hajj the Beggar to any combination of impossibilities 'Kismet' cares to brew in Bagdad-on-the-Hudson!"

Again the girl laughed quietly to his humor.

"And since you're a true believer, Mr. Sybarite, tell me what use you would make of your day of days."

"I? Oh, I"—— Smiling wistfully, he opened deprecatory palms. "Hard to say. "I'm afraid I should prove a fatuous fool in George's esteem equally with old Hajj. I'm sure that, like him, the sunset of my day would see me proscribed, a price upon my head."

"But—why?"

"I'm afraid I'd try to use my power to right old wrongs."

After a pause she asked diffidently: "Your own?"

"Perhaps. Yes, my own, certainly. And possibly another's, not so old, but possibly quite as grievous."

"Somebody you care for a great deal?"

Thus tardily made to realize into what perils his fancy was leading him, he checked and weighed her question with his answer, gravely judgmatical.

"Perhaps I'd better not say that," he announced, a grin tempering his temerity; "but I'd go far for a friend, somebody who had been kind to me, and—ah—tolerant—if she were in trouble and could use my services."

He fancied her glance was quick and sharp and searching; but her voice when she spoke was even and lightly attuned to his whimsical mood.

"Then you're not even sure she—your friend—is in trouble?"

"I've an intuition: she wouldn't be where she is if she wasn't."

Her laughter at this absurdity was delightful; whether with him or at him, it was infectious; he echoed it without misgivings.

"But—seriously—you're not sure, are you, Mr. Sybarite?"

"Only, Miss Lessing," he said soberly, "of my futile, my painfully futile good will."

She seemed to start to speak, to think of it, to fall silent in a sudden, shy constraint. He stole a sidelong glance, troubled, wondering if, perhaps, he had ventured too impudently, pursuing his whim to the point of trespass upon the inviolable confines of her reserve.

She wore a sweet, grave face, en profile; her eyes veiled with long lashes, the haunts of tender shadows; her mouth of gracious lips unsmiling, a little triste. Compunctions smote him; with his crude and clumsy banter he had contrived to turn her thoughts to sadness. He would have given worlds to undo that blunder; to show her that he had meant neither a rudeness nor

"HE turned boldly up the steps, pressed the bell button, laid hold of the doorknob and entered into a vestibule as dark as his bewilderment and as empty as the palm of his hand. Instantly the bare and narrow vestibule was flooded with the merciless glare of half a dozen electric bulbs; and at the same time he found himself sustaining the intent scrutiny of a pair of inhospitable dark eyes set in an impassive dark face. Too dumfounded for speech, he contrived to return the stare with aggressive interest." : : : : : :

a wish to desecrate her reticence, but only an indirect assurance of gratitude to her for suffering him and willingness to serve her within the compass of his poverty-stricken powers. For in retrospect his invitation assumed the proportions of an importunity, an egregious piece of presumption; so that he could have groaned to contemplate it.

He didn't groan save inwardly; but respected her silence, and held his own in humility and mortification of spirit until they were near the dooryard of their boarding house. And even then it was the girl who loosed his tongue.

"Why—where are they?" she asked in surprise.

Startled out of the deeps of self-contempt, P. Sybarite realized that she meant Violet and George, who were nowhere visible.

"Violet said something about a little supper in her room," explained the girl.

"I know," he replied: "crackers and cheese, beer and badinage; our humble pleasures. You'll be bored to extinction—but you'll come, won't you?"

"Why, of course! I counted on it. But"——

"They must have hurried on to make things ready—Violet to set her room to rights, George to fetch the wash pitcher to the corner for the beer. And very likely, pending our arrival, they're lingering at the head of the stairs for a kiss or two."

The girl paused at the gate. "Then we needn't hurry." she suggested, smiling.

"We needn't delay," he countered amiably. "If somebody doesn't interrupt 'em before long, George will be too late to get the pitcher filled. This town shuts up tight at midnight, Saturdays—if you want to believe everything you hear. So there's no need of being too indulgent with our infatuated fellow inmates."

"But—just a minute, Mr. Sybarite." she insisted.

"As many as you wish," he laughed. "As a matter of fact, I loathe draft beer."

"Do be serious," she begged. "I want to thank you."

He was aware of a proffered hand, slender and fine, in a shabby glove; and took it in his own, uneasily conscious of a curious disturbance in his bosom, a strange and not unpleasant sense of commingled expectancy, pleasure and diffidence (as far as he was able to analyze it—or cared to—at that instant).

"It was kind of you to come," he said jerkily in his embarrassment.

"I enjoyed every moment," she said warmly. "But that wasn't all I meant when I thanked you."

His eyebrows climbed with surprise "Your delicacy in letting me know you understood"——

Disengaging her hand, she broke off with a startled movement and a low cry of surprise.

A taxicab, swinging into the street from Eighth avenue, had come up to the curb before the gate and, pausing, discharged a young man in a hurry; witness the facts that he had the door open when half-way between the corner and the house and was on the running board before the vehicle was fairly at a halt.

In a stride this one crossed the sidewalk and pulled up in silence, trying to master the temper which was visibly shaking him. Tall, well-proportioned, impressively turned out in evening clothes, he thrust forward a handsome face marred by an evil, twisted mouth, and peered searchingly at the girl.

Instinctively she shrank back inside the fence, eying him with a fascinated look of dismay.

As instinctively P. Sybarite bristled between them.

"Well?" he snapped at the intruder.

An impatient gesture of a hand, immaculately gloved in white, abolished him completely—as far, at least, as the other was concerned.

"Ah—Miss Lessing, I believe?"

The voice was strong and musical, but poisoned with a malicious triumph that grated upon the nerves of P. Sybarite; he declined to be abolished.

"Say the word," he suggested serenely to the girl, "and I'll bundle this animal back into that taxi and direct the driver to the nearest accident ward. I'd rather like to, really."

"Get rid of this microbe," interrupted the other savagely, "unless you want to see him buried between glass slides under a microscope."

The girl turned to P. Sybarite with pleading eyes and imploring hands.

"If you please, dear Mr. Sybarite," she begged in a tremulous voice, "I'm afraid I must speak alone with this"—there was a barely perceptible pause—"gentleman. If you won't mind waiting a moment—at the door"

"If it pleases you, Miss Lessing—most certainly." He drew back a step or two. "But speaking of microbes," he added incisively. "A word of advice. don't tease 'em. My bite is deadly. Neither Pasteur nor your family veterinary could save you."

Ignored by the man, but satisfied in his enjoyment of the last word, he strutted back to the brownstone stoop, out of ear shot but within easy hail.

Hearing nothing, he made little more of the guarded conference that began on his withdrawal. The man, entering the dooryard, had cornered the girl in an angle of the fence. He seemed at once insistent, determined and thoroughly angry; while she exhibited perfect composure, with some evident contempt and implacable obstinacy. Nevertheless, in a brace of minutes the fellow seemingly brought forth some telling argument. She wavered, and her accents rose in doubt:

"Is that true?"

His reply, if inaudible, was as forcible as it was patently an affirmative.

"I don't believe you!"

"You don't dare doubt me."

This time he was clearly articulate, and betrayed a conviction that he had won the day—an impression borne out by the evident irresolution of the girl prefacing her abrupt surrender.

"Very well," she said in a tone of resignation.

"You'll go?"

"Yes."

He moved aside, to give her way through the gate. But she hung back, with a glance for P. Sybarite.

"One moment, please," she said. "I must leave a message."

"Nonsense!"

She showed displeasure in the lift of her chin. "I think I'm my own mistress—as yet."

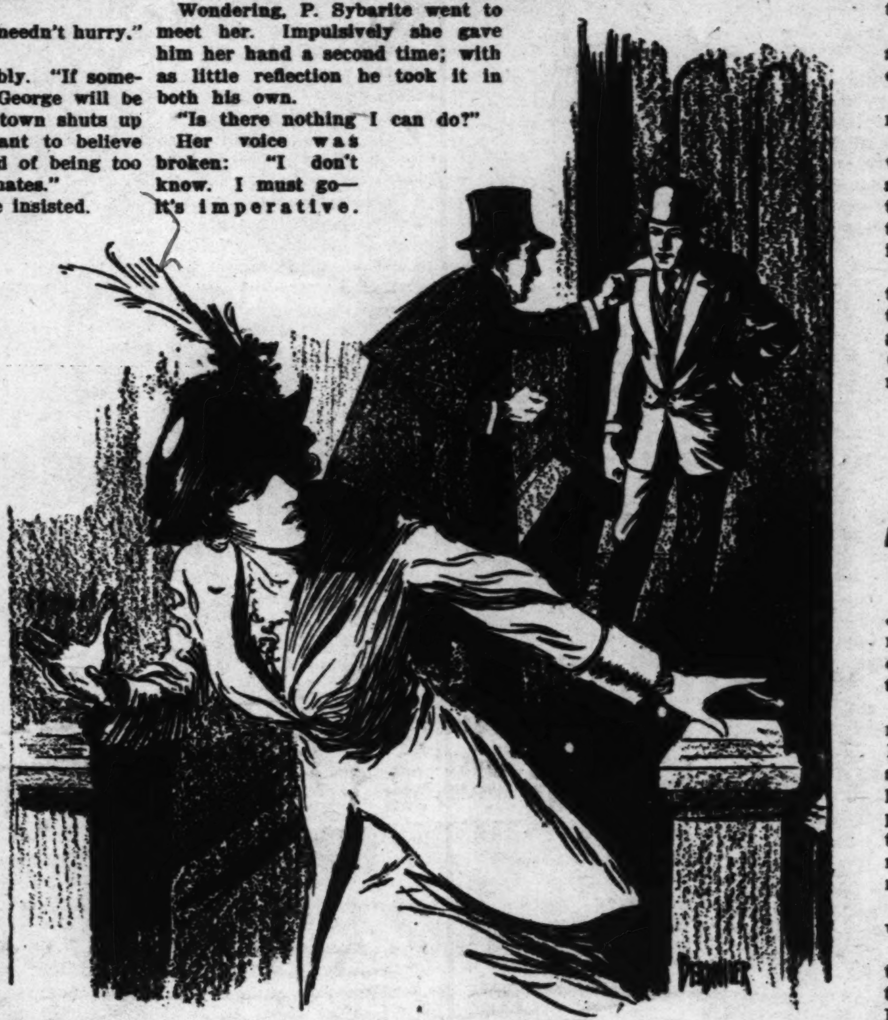
He growled indistinguishably.

"You have my promise," she cut him short coldly. "Wait for me." And she turned back to the house.

Wondering, P. Sybarite went to meet her. Impulsively she gave him her hand a second time; with as little reflection he took it in both his own.

"Is there nothing I can do?"

Her voice was broken: "I don't know. I must go—it's imperative. Could you—I wonder!"



"'We were discussing your nose,' P. Sybarite persisted.

"At discretion, he interrupted himself to duck beneath the swing of a powerful fist."

"Anything you ask,' he asserted confidently.

Hesitating briefly, in a tone little above a whisper: "I must go," she repeated. "I can't refuse. But—alone Do you understand?"

"You mean—without him?" P. Sybarite nodded toward the man fuming in the gateway.

"Yes. If you could suggest something to detain him long enough for me to get into the cab and say one word to the chauffeur"——

The chest of P. Sybarite swelled.

"Leave it to me," he said with rare simplicity.

"Molly!" cried the man at the gate.

"Don't answer," P. Sybarite advised. "If you don't, he'll lose patience and come to fetch you. And then"—

"But I'm afraid he may"——

"Molly!"

"Don't you fear for me. God's good to the Irish."

"Molly!"

"Do be quiet," suggested P. Sybarite, not altogether civilly.

The other started as if slapped.

"What's that?" he barked in a rage.

"I said hold your tongue."

"The devil you did!" With a snort the man strode in to the stoop. "Do you know who you're talking to?" he demanded wrathfully, towering over P. Sybarite, momentarily forgetful of the girl.

Stepping aside, as if in alarm, she moved behind the fellow, and darted through the gate.

"I don't," P. Sybarite admitted amiably; "but your nose annoys me."

He fixed that feature with an irritated glare.

"You impudent puppy!" stormed the other. "Who are you?"

"Who—me?" echoed P. Sybarite in surprise. (The girl was now instructing the chauffeur.) "Why," he drawled, "I'm the guy that put the point in disappointment. Surely you've heard of me?"

At the curb the door of the taxicab closed with a slam. Simultaneously the drone of the motor thickened to a rumble. The man with the twisted mouth turned just in time to see it drawing away.

"Hi!" he cried in surprise and dismay.

But the taxi didn't pause; to the contrary, it stretched out toward Ninth avenue at a quickening pace.

With profanity, appreciating the fact that he had been tricked, he picked up his heels in pursuit. But P. Sybarite had not finished with him. Deftly plucking the man back by the tail of his full-skirted open cloak, he succeeded in arresting his flight before it was fairly started.

"Here!" he protested. "What's your hurry?"

With a vicious snarl, the man turned and snatched at his cloak. But P. Sybarite adhered implacably.

"We were discussing your nose," he persisted.

At discretion, he interrupted himself to duck beneath the swing of a powerful fist. And this last, failing to find a mark, threw its owner off his balance. Tripping awkwardly over the low curbing of the dooryard walk, he reeled and went a sprawl on his knees, while his hat fell off and (such is the impish habit of toppers) rolled and bounded several feet away.

Releasing the cloak, P. Sybarite withdrew to a respectful distance, and held himself coolly alert against reprisals that never came. The other picked himself up quickly, cast about for the taxicab, discovered it swiftly making off—already 40 yards distant—and with a howl of rage bounded through the gate and gave chase at the top of his speed.

Gravely, P. Sybarite retrieved the stranger's hat and followed to the curbing.

"Hey!" he shouted after the fast-retreating figure. "Here's your hat!"

But he wasted breath. The taxicab was nearing Ninth avenue, its pursuer sprinting bravely a hundred feet to the rear, and, as he watched, both turned the northern corner and vanished like shapes of dream.

Sighing, P. Sybarite went back to the stoop and sat down to consider the state of his soul (which was vainglorious) and the condition of the hat (which was soiled, rumpled and disreputable).

CHAPTER VIII.

Wheels of Chance.

TURNING the affair over in his mind, and considering it from every imaginable angle, P. Sybarite decided (fairly enough) that it was, on the whole, mysterious; lending at least some color of likelihood to George's gratuitous guesswork.

Certainly it would seem that one now had every right to assume Miss Molly Lessing to be other than as she chose to seem; nowadays the villain, in shining evening dress, doesn't pursue the shrinking shopgirl save through the action of the obsolescent mellerdrammer or of the ubiquitous moving picture reel.

In short, Molly Lessing might very well be Marian Blessington, after all!

In which case the man with the twisted mouth was, more probably than not, none other than that same Bayard Shaynon whom the young lady was reported to have jilted so arbitrarily.

Turning the topper over in his hands,, it suddenly occurred to P. Sybarite to wonder if he did not, in it, hold a valuable clew to this enigma of identity.

Promptly he took the hat indoors to find out, investigating it most thoroughly by the flickering, bluish glare of the lonely gas jet that burned in the hallway.

It was a handsome and heavy hat of English manufacture, as witness the name of a Bond street hatter in its crown; by the slight discoloration of its leather had seen service without, however, depreciating in utility, needing only brushing and ironing to restore its pristine brilliance; carried neither name nor initials on its lining and lacked every least hint as to its ownership—or, as it seemed, until the prying fingers of P. Sybarite turned down the leather and permitted a visiting card concealed therein to flutter to the flood.

The hall rack was convenient; hanging up the hat, P Sybarite picked up the card. It displayed, in conventional script, the name, Bailey Penfield; with the address, 97 West Forty-fifth street; one corner, moreover, bore a penciled hieroglyphic which seemed to read: "O. K.—B. P.".

"Whatever," P. Sybarite mused "that may mean."

He turned the card over and examined its unmarked and taciturn reverse.

Stealthy foosteps on the stairs distracted his studious attention from the card. He looked up, blinking and frowning thoughtfully, to see George descending with the wash pitcher wrapped in but by no means disguised by brown paper. Arriving at the bottom of the stairs, he expressed amazement in a whisper—to avoid rousing their landlady, who held, unreasonably, that it detracted from the tone of her establishment for gentlemen boarders to rush the growler.

"Hel-lo! We thought you must've got lost in the shuffle."

"Did you?" said P. Sybarite absently.

"Where's Molly?"

"Miss Lessing?" P. Sybarite looked surprised. "Isn't she upstairs—with Violet?"

"No!"

"That's funny."

"Why, when'd she leave you?"

"Oh, 10 minutes ago, or so."

"She must have stopped in her room for something."

"Perhaps."

"But why didn't you come up?"

"Well, you see, I met a man outside I wanted to

In the Good Old Days When Steamboats Raced on the Mississippi

Reproduction of a rare print, first made in 1860, to commemorate a famous contest on the Father of Waters

Steamboat racing, now forbidden, was once a romantic phase of life on the Mississippi River. The race between the Eclipse and the Natchez from New Orleans to St. Louis is historic. It was won by the Natchez.

"HE turned boldly up the steps, pressed the bell button, laid hold of the doorknob and entered into a vestibule as dark as his bewilderment and as empty as the palm of his hand. Instantly the bare and narrow vestibule was flooded with the merciless glare of half a dozen electric bulbs; and at the same time he found himself sustaining the intent scrutiny of a pair of inhospitable dark eyes set in an impassive dark face. Too dumfounded for speech, he contrived to return the stare with aggressive interest." : : : : : :

a wish to desecrate her reticence, but only an indirect assurance of gratitude to her for suffering him and willingness to serve her within the compass of his poverty-stricken powers. For in retrospect his invitation assumed the proportions of an importunity, an egregious piece of presumption; so that he could have groaned to contemplate it.

He didn't groan save inwardly; but respected her silence, and held his own in humility and mortification of spirit until they were near the dooryard of their boarding house. And even then it was the girl who loosed his tongue.

"Why—where are they?" she asked in surprise.

Startled out of the deeps of self-contempt, P. Sybarite realized that she meant Violet and George, who were nowhere visible.

"Violet said something about a little supper in her room," explained the girl.

"I know," he replied: "crackers and cheese, beer and badinage; our humble pleasures. You'll be bored to extinction—but you'll come, won't you?"

"Why, of course! I counted on it. But"——

"They must have hurried on to make things ready—Violet to set her room to rights, George to fetch the wash pitcher to the corner for the beer. And very likely, pending our arrival, they're lingering at the head of the stairs for a kiss or two."

The girl paused at the gate. "Then we needn't hurry," she suggested, smiling.

"We needn't delay," he countered amiably. "If somebody doesn't interrupt 'em before long, George will be too late to get the pitcher filled. This town shuts up tight at midnight, Saturdays—if you want to believe everything you hear. So there's no need of being too indulgent with our infatuated fellow inmates."

"But—just a minute, Mr. Sybarite," she insisted.

"As many as you wish," he laughed. "As a matter of fact, I loathe draft beer."

"Do be serious," she begged. "I want to thank you."

He was aware of a proffered hand, slender and fine, in a shabby glove; and took it in his own, uneasily conscious of a curious disturbance in his bosom, a strange and not unpleasant sense of commingled expectancy, pleasure and diffidence (as far as he was able to analyze it—or cared to—at that instant).

"It was kind of you to come," he said jerkily in his embarrassment.

"I enjoyed every moment," she said warmly. "But that wasn't all I meant when I thanked you."

His eyebrows climbed with surprise "Your delicacy in letting me know you understood!"——

Disengaging her hand, she broke off with a startled movement and a low cry of surprise.

A taxicab, swinging into the street from Eighth avenue, had come up to the curb before the gate and, pausing, discharged a young man in a hurry; witness the facts that he had the door open when half-way between the corner and the house and was on the running board before the vehicle was fairly at a halt.

In a stride this one crossed the sidewalk and pulled up in silence, trying to master the temper which was visibly shaking him. Tall, well-proportioned, impressively turned out in evening clothes, he thrust forward a handsome face marred by an evil, twisted mouth, and peered searchingly at the girl.

Instinctively she shrank back inside the fence, eying him with a fascinated look of dismay.

As instinctively P. Sybarite bristled between them.

"Well?" he snapped at the intruder.

An impatient gesture of a hand, immaculately gloved in white, abolished him completely—as far, at least, as the other was concerned.

"Ah—Miss Lessing, I believe?"

The voice was strong and musical, but poisoned with a malicious triumph that grated upon the nerves of P. Sybarite; he declined to be abolished.

"Say the word," he suggested serenely to the girl, "and I'll bundle this animal back into that taxi and direct the driver to the nearest accident ward. I'd rather like to, really."

"Get rid of this microbe," interrupted the other savagely, "unless you want to see him buried between glass slides under a microscope."

The girl turned to P. Sybarite with pleading eyes and imploring hands.

"If you please, dear Mr. Sybarite," she begged in a tremulous voice, "I'm afraid I must speak alone with this"—there was a barely perceptible pause—"gentleman. If you won't mind waiting a moment—at the door"

"If it pleases you, Miss Lessing—most certainly." He drew back a step or two. "But speaking of microbes," he added incisively. "A word of advice. don't tease 'em. My bite is deadly. Neither Pasteur nor your family veterinary could save you."

Ignored by the man, but satisfied in his enjoyment of the last word, he strutted back to the brownstone stoop, out of ear shot but within easy hail.

Hearing nothing, he made little more of the guarded conference that began on his withdrawal. The man, entering the dooryard, had cornered the girl in an angle of the fence. He seemed at once insistent, determined and thoroughly angry; while she exhibited perfect composure, with some evident contempt and implacable obstinacy. Nevertheless, in a brace of minutes the fellow seemingly brought forth some telling argument. She wavered, and her accents rose in doubt:

"Is that true?"

His reply, if inaudible, was as forcible as it was patently an affirmative.

"I don't believe you!"

"You don't dare doubt me."

This time he was clearly articulate, and betrayed a conviction that he had won the day—an impression borne out by the evident irresolution of the girl prefacing her abrupt surrender.

"Very well," she said in a tone of resignation.

"You'll go?"

"Yes."

He moved aside, to give her way through the gate. But she hung back, with a glance for P. Sybarite.

"One moment, please," she said. "I must leave a message."

"Nonsense!"

She showed displeasure in the lift of her chin. "I think I'm my own mistress—as yet."

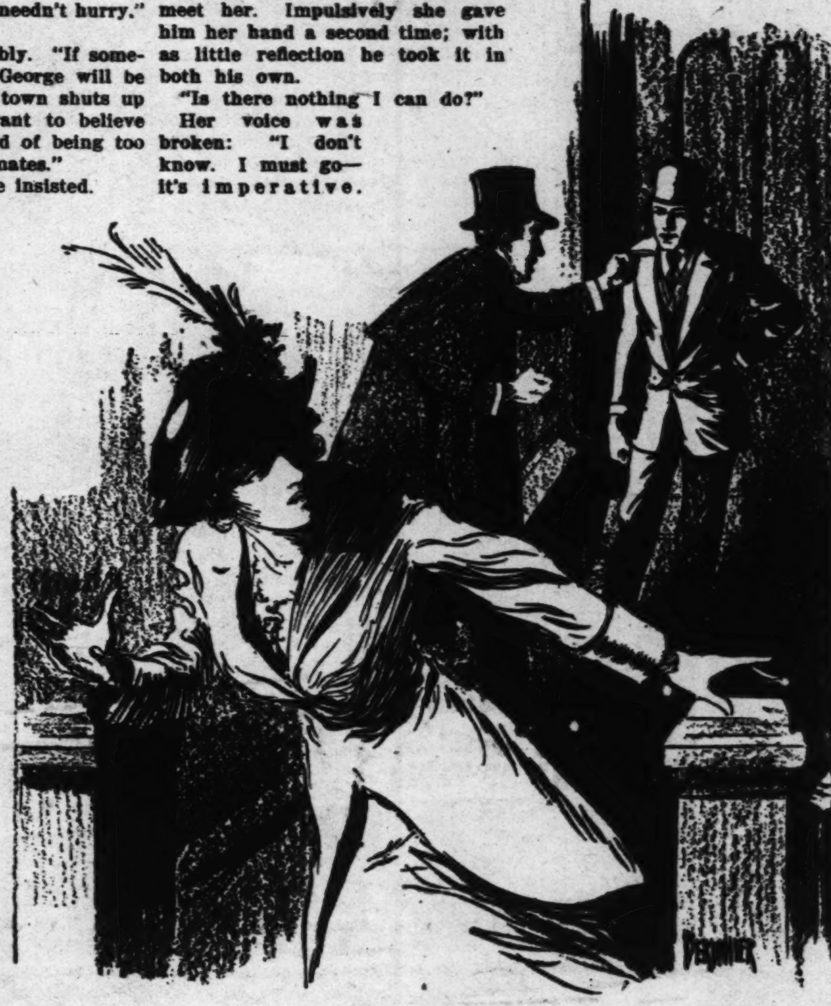
He growled indistinguishably.

"You have my promise," she cut him short coldly. "Wait for me." And she turned back to the house.

Wondering, P. Sybarite went to meet her. Impulsively she gave him her hand a second time; with as little reflection he took it in both his own.

"Is there nothing I can do?"

Her voice was broken: "I don't know. I must go—it's imperative. Could you—I wonder!"



"'We were discussing your nose,' P. Sybarite persisted.

"At discretion, he interrupted himself to duck beneath the swing of a powerful fist."

"Anything you ask,' he asserted confidently.

Hesitating briefly, in a tone little above a whisper: "I must go," she repeated. "I can't refuse. But—alone Do you understand?"

"You mean—without him?" P. Sybarite nodded toward the man fuming in the gateway.

"Yes. If you could suggest something to detain him long enough for me to get into the cab and say one word to the chauffeur"——

The chest of P. Sybarite swelled.

"Leave it to me," he said with rare simplicity.

"Molly!" cried the man at the gate.

"Don't answer," P. Sybarite advised. "If you don't, he'll lose patience and come to fetch you. And then"—

"But I'm afraid he may"——

"Molly!"

"Don't you fear for me. God's good to the Irish."

"Molly!"

"Do be quiet," suggested P. Sybarite, not altogether civilly.

The other started as if slapped.

"What's that?" he barked in a rage.

"I said hold your tongue."

"The devil you did!" With a snort the man strode in to the stoop. "Do you know who you're talking to?" he demanded wrathfully, towering over P. Sybarite, momentarily forgetful of the girl.

Stepping aside, as if in alarm, she moved behind the fellow, and darted through the gate.

"I don't," P. Sybarite admitted amiably; "but your nose annoys me."

He fixed that feature with an irritated glare.

"You impudent puppy!" stormed the other. "Who are you?"

"Who—me?" echoed P. Sybarite in surprise. (The girl was now instructing the chauffeur.) "Why," he drawled, "I'm the guy that put the point in disappointment. Surely you've heard of me?"

At the curb the door of the taxicab closed with a slam. Simultaneously the drone of the motor thickened to a rumble. The man with the twisted mouth turned just in time to see it drawing away.

"Hi!" he cried in surprise and dismay.

But the taxi didn't pause; to the contrary, it stretched out toward Ninth avenue at a quickening pace.

With profanity, appreciating the fact that he had been tricked, he picked up his heels in pursuit. But P. Sybarite had not finished with him. Deftly plucking the man back by the tail of his full-skirted open cloak, he succeeded in arresting his flight before it was fairly started.

"Here!" he protested. "What's your hurry?"

With a vicious snarl, the man turned and snatched at his cloak. But P. Sybarite adhered implacably.

"We were discussing your nose," he persisted.

At discretion, he interrupted himself to duck beneath the swing of a powerful fist. And this last, failing to find a mark, threw its owner off his balance. Tripping awkwardly over the low curbing of the dooryard walk, he reeled and went a sprawl on his knees, while his hat fell off and (such is the impish habit of toppers) rolled and bounded several feet away.

Releasing the cloak, P. Sybarite withdrew to a respectful distance, and held himself coolly alert against reprisals that never came. The other picked himself up quickly, cast about for the taxicab, discovered it swiftly making off—already 40 yards distant—and with a howl of rage bounded through the gate and gave chase at the top of his speed.

Gravely, P. Sybarite retrieved the stranger's hat and followed to the curbing.

"Hey!" he shouted after the fast-retreating figure. "Here's your hat!"

But he wasted breath. The taxicab was nearing Ninth avenue, its pursuer sprinting bravely a hundred feet to the rear, and, as he watched, both turned the northern corner and vanished like shapes of dream.

Sighing, P. Sybarite went back to the stoop and sat down to consider the state of his soul (which was vainglorious) and the condition of the hat (which was soiled, rumpled and disreputable).

CHAPTER VIII.

Wheels of Chance.

TURNING the affair over in his mind, and considering it from every imaginable angle, P. Sybarite decided (fairly enough) that it was, on the whole, mysterious; lending at least some color of likelihood to George's gratuitous guesswork.

Certainly it would seem that one now had every right to assume Miss Molly Lessing to be other than as she chose to seem; nowadays the villain, in shining evening dress, doesn't pursue the shrinking shopgirl save through the action of the obsolescent mellerdrammer or of the ubiquitous moving picture reel.

In short, Molly Lessing might very well be Marian Blessington, after all!

In which case the man with the twisted mouth was, more probably than not, none other than that same Bayard Shaynon whom the young lady was reported to have jilted so arbitrarily.

Turning the topper over in his hands,, it suddenly occurred to P. Sybarite to wonder if he did not, in it, hold a valuable clew to this enigma of identity.

Promptly he took the hat indoors to find out, investigating it most thoroughly by the flickering, bluish glare of the lonely gas jet that burned in the hallway.

It was a handsome and heavy hat of English manufacture, as witness the name of a Bond street hatter in its crown; by the slight discoloration of its leather had seen service without, however, depreciating in utility, needing only brushing and ironing to restore its pristine brilliance; carried neither name nor initials on its lining and lacked every least hint as to its ownership—or, as it seemed, until the prying fingers of P. Sybarite turned down the leather and permitted a visiting card concealed therein to flutter to the flood.

The hall rack was convenient; hanging up the hat, P Sybarite picked up the card. It displayed, in conventional script, the name, Bailey Penfield; with the address, 97 West Forty-fifth street; one corner, moreover, bore a penciled hieroglyphic which seemed to read: "O. K.—B. P.".

"Whatever," P. Sybarite mused "that may mean."

He turned the card over and examined its unmarked and taciturn reverse.

Stealthy foosteps on the stairs distracted his studious attention from the card. He looked up, blinking and frowning thoughtfully, to see George descending with the wash pitcher wrapped in but by no means disguised by brown paper. Arriving at the bottom of the stairs, he expressed amazement in a whisper—to avoid rousing their landlady, who held, unreasonably, that it detracted from the tone of her establishment for gentlemen boarders to rush the growler.

"Hel-lo! We thought you must've got lost in the shuffle."

"Did you?" said P. Sybarite absently.

"Where's Molly?"

"Miss Lessing?" P. Sybarite looked surprised. "Isn't she upstairs—with Violet?"

"No!"

"That's funny."

"Why, when'd she leave you?"

"Oh, 10 minutes ago, or so."

"She must have stopped in her room for something."

"Perhaps."

"But why didn't you come up?"

"Well, you see, I met a man outside I wanted to

"'AND this,' she said, between her sobs, 'is the man I have loved for more than ten years. I wish I had died before ever I saw you again. I wish I could die now.' She turned blindly away from him down the path between the coco palms, but Hull sprang after her and caught her in his arms. He was shaking and had to fight for his words."

"Ghastly true, old girl. As true as death itself."

She kept silent for a little after that. Then:

"What is it you want me to do?" she asked in a low voice. And Hull drew a quick breath and said: "Ah!" in a tone that was sharp with relief and satisfaction. He said:

"Only talk to the chap. Chaff him a bit. Cheer him up. Get his—well, get his confidence, you understand. Smooth down any suspicions he may have. He's been through such a lot that he doesn't trust anybody. I want him off his guard. Of course, the trick could be done without that, but there'd be a row about it and an uproar and—I can't have rows, you know; not without more elbow room than there is in these islands.

"Of course, you know"— His voice began to sound reflective, as if he were thinking aloud. "Of course, the safest, most ship-shape thing would be for young Mr. Fairford to—just to—disappear on the voyage between here and Suva. Just quietly disappear some dark night. People do fall overboard, now and then. Oh, yes, indeed! often. That'd be the proper way, eh, what? No uproar then. No rows and talk and fingers pointing and you and I having to run for it. That's what I"——

"Tony," said the woman quietly.

And he said: "Yes, old girl, what is it?"

"Tony," she said, "let's have one thing understood clearly between us. There's to be no—nothing like that in this affair. I'm very serious, Tony; I mean what I say. That's never to occur whatever may happen—whatever risks may be run—whatever corners you or I get into. Not that!" She leaned closer to him in the starlight and held him by the shoulders, looking into his face.

"Tony, tell me the truth now! Swear it! Have you ever—taken that way of getting what you wanted? Have you ever at any time done—murder? It's important, I've got to know."

Hull shook his head.

"No, Nellie! So help me, never!" And at that she sat back with a sigh of relief.

"And you shan't, my dear," said she "Not while I'm alive to prevent it."

"It's the surest of all ways, this time," he urged, and the woman could hear and feel the thought grow into conviction in his tone.

"We've not only got to get the Harvest Moon," said he, "but we've got to get away with it. We've got to have a clear field to run in."

She made no answer and he pressed on—feeling his way with her.

"This young chap's half dead as it is. You said that yourself. You'd better let me use my own judgment, Nellie, when the time comes."

"Tony," she said, "you'll promise me here and now not to take that step, whatever the provocation, or I'll warn young Fairford before I go to bed tonight. I mean it. Now promise!" And he promised her in a reluctant and none too gracious a tone.

They sat there talking for some time longer—an hour perhaps—before they started back to Joe's, and in that interval Hull's good humor had returned once more. He paused a moment on the edge of the path and looked down at the starlit water of the bay beneath him.

"A couple of hours ago," said he, "you were making out that the world would be a better place if you and I could step off this hill into the sea." He gave a little exultant, half-jeering laugh. "Instead of that you and I are going to—what's the phrase? 'live respected' for a great many years yet, and die lamented. And we're going to be as good as gold, you and I—as good as the gold the Harvest Moon will bring us. It's easy to be good when you're rich, Nellie. Wait and see!" He leaned forward to look and gave a little whistle of surprise.

"By Jove, that tide runs like a mill race! Look at it!"

But Mrs. Nevil answered without looking: "Yes, I know. It's the shape of the bay or something. On this side there's a narrow channel like the handle of a jug where the tide goes tearing in and out. A native was caught on some rocks only the other day and drowned He could swim like a fish, of course, but no one could swim in that tide rip. It's terrific. Come along back to Joe's. I'm tired."

She turned away, but Hull stopped her and took her in his arms. He said:

"Thank God! I've found you again! There's never been anybody else for me in all these year. Never anybody like you. We'll make a better go of it this time. Believe me! We're going to be happy, old girl!"

"I hope so, Tony," she said. And she kissed him rather solemnly.

"You'll do what you can for me in this—this business about the pearl? It's everything to us, you know. It's sink or swim."

"I'll do what I can, Tony," she said.

And he said: "There's a dear!" And they turned away homeward.

But the next afternoon she came to him white and shivering. She had been sitting on a remote stretch of the beach with Fairford She said:

"Tony, I can't go on with it. I can't. If this thing means life or death to us it means life or death to that boy as well. I've been talking to him. He's told me the whole story."

"Well?" said the man who called himself Hull. He watched her face keenly, with a hard, alert eye, and there was a hard tone in his voice, too, if the woman had listened.

She said: "That magnificent young imbecile has been through nearly three years of the most incredible, the most unthinkable horrors, because he loved a girl in Sydney, and because she sent him, to prove his love, on a wild-goose chase after the Harvest Moon."

"The girl," said Mr. Hull, "was either a fool or a blackguard, and doesn't deserve the Harvest Moon. That's plain enough."

"Oh, Tony!" cried the woman. "She was a fool. Of course she was a fool. She didn't know what she was doing. This poor boy was a gay, light-hearted young flaneur who'd never been serious about anything in his life—so far as anyone could tell. She couldn't believe he was serious about her. She had to find out somehow and so she did this fantastic thing. She must have done it half as a joke. It must have seemed to her like saying: 'Go and fetch me the sun and stars!' She wanted to see how he'd take it, don't you understand? She didn't know what she was sending him into. How could she know?"

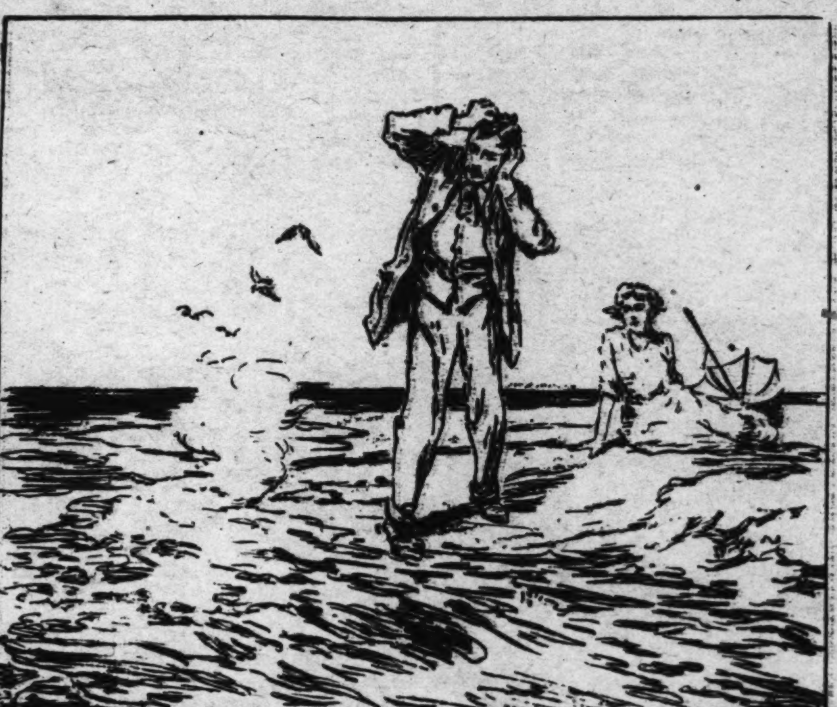
The man who called himself Hull walked up and down before Mrs. Nevil with his head between his hands. He wasn't quite a monster of iniquity. He wasn't hard all through and through. Mrs. Nevil watched him, gripping her hands tight together in her lap.

"It'll be the end of young Fairford, Tony," she said, very white. The man gave a sudden savage little laugh.

"Yes, I think it'll be the end of him," he conceded But at that Mrs. Nevil came close to him and stared into his face. She touched him with her hand.

"Did you make me a certain promise or did you not?"

"Did I?" asked Mr. Hull politely. "Did I, now? If so, I've quite forgotten it."



"With an inarticulate cry Hull turned away from her, ran down to the edge of that green torrent and began once more to scream for help. He called until he was hoarse, and at the end there came again the faint, far-away whistle of the departing copra steamer that seemed to mock him in his defeat and helplessness."

Mrs. Nevil put her hands over her face with an exceedingly bitter cry.

"And this," she said between her sobs, "is the man I have loved for more than ten years. I wish I had died before ever I saw you again. I wish I could die now." She turned blindly away from him down the path between the coco palms.

But she laid siege to him again the next morning, and Hull, who had had a bad night and was irritable, flew out at her and said some hard things.

"What if I warn the boy?"

Hull answered her: "If you put Fairford on his guard against me, I'll shoot him down at sight, take the pearl and run for it. I know some natives here who'd hide me, and I'd manage to get away to the southern group in a canoe. At least I'd try it. It would be worth the gamble. Just you hold your tongue, Nellie, and don't be a fool!"

She turned away from him with earth and sky wheeling before her and went off to a lonely spot beside the sea.

"Oh, what shall I do? What shall I do?" She prayed again desperately, begging God for a sign, but God was as silent as the blue sky behind which she imagined him to live, and she had to face her anguish alone—unaided.

That Hull meant to do murder in order to possess himself of the Harvest Moon and to be rid of subsequent suspicion or pursuit she had no longer any doubt. The man was desperate—his back against the wall. He would stop at nothing, not even that. She hid her eyes before that terrible word—tried to stop her ears against it, but it seemed to her to fill all the universe—to be written across the world in gigantic fiery letters.

And there was no way to stop him. If young Fairford were told Hull would infallibly do as he had said.

They were to sail on the next day at noon, but toward 10 o'clock Mrs. Nevil came to Hull where he was packing the last of his effects into a small handbag, the heavier articles having already gone on board the steamer.

"What a nuisance!" she said. "We're not to sail until four. Anderson has just sent word."

Hull, as jumpy as a chased cat, flew into a rage and was all for dashing down to the pier and telling Anderson just what he thought of him.

"By all means go down if you like," agreed Mrs. Nevil "Only you'll have to climb that hill again in a hot sun. I shall stay here—or no, on second thought, I think I'll walk along the shore road under the palms. There's always a breeze there. You can come with me if you care to."

Hull was still ill-tempered, growled over his packing, seemed inclined to lay the blame for this delay upon Mrs. Nevil, but in the end, when he had strapped the little handbag, allowed himself to be borne off up the shore road, where the two had walked together that first evening. Once he asked abruptly where Fairford was, and Mrs. Nevil said with some indifference that she didn't know.

"I dare say he's down at the wharf."

They settled themselves on the shelving rock, Hull flat on his back with his head against the woman's knees, his face upturned to the sky.

From time to time she turned her head to look landward, and at length, after the last of these glances, gave a sudden convulsive shiver. Hull, who was somnolent and blinking like a cat in the sun, roused himself so far as to say:

"Hullo, old girl! What's wrong?" He made as if to raise his head, but Mrs. Nevil pressed him down again, saying:

"It's nothing. A stitch of pain." But after a moment she bent over him and said very seriously: "Tony, this time has been too heavenly to spoil. I've been very, very happy, my dear. But I've got to spoil it by asking a question. Tell me honestly and truly—the truest that ever was—will nothing in the world—nothing but death itself—stop you from doing what you mean to do—about the Harvest Moon?"

She saw the man's face harden as she spoke, and she was prepared for his answer.

"Absolutely nothing We won't talk about that, if you please. We'll just say that it doesn't concern you."

Mrs. Nevil's face was upturned to the sky, and it was white and drawn. But after a moment she bent once more over the man she had loved and took his face between her hands and kissed him. The act had somehow a solemn air. She looked once more behind her and said:

"You may sleep if you like, Tony. I'll watch."

Hull said lazily: "All right old girl; I believe I could, you know." His eyes closed and he slept lightly for perhaps half an hour, while Mrs. Neville looked somberly before her and scarcely seemed to breathe. But at length she roused him, shaking him a little by the shoulders. She said in his ear:

"You must get up now, Tony, please."

And the man sighed sleepily and pushed himself up to a sitting posture. He gave, after an instant's wild staring, a great cry: "My God! We're cut off! We're trapped!" He sprang to the shoreward side of the rock and the green water was tearing past six feet deep and swift as a mill race. No living being, not even one of the amphibious natives, could have swum in that torrent. On the other side it was worse still. Hull turned furiously upon the woman:

"You said you'd watch! D'you see what you've done? You've got us trapped here on this beastly shelf. And the tide's not full, either. We're done for! D'you understand? We're done for."

She shook her head with a pale smile.

"No. Not in the sense you mean, at least. We shan't be drowned. The tides don't cover this rock. I watched yesterday." Hull turned away from her and began to shout, holding his hands to his mouth.

"It's no good calling for help," Mrs. Nevil said. "The settlement is two miles away and the wind is against you." He shouted again at the top of his lung power, and, as if in answer, there came to them down wind from the far-away harbor, out of sight around the island, a faint, hoarse blast of whistling.

Hull swung about with a yellow-white face.

"My God! What's that?"

"It's the steamer sailing," said she.

"Sailing? Sailing! Sailing without us? You're crazy. She can't go without us. And besides, she wasn't to sail until four."

Mrs. Nevil took a long breath.

"I couldn't let you do it, Tony," she said presently behind him. She, too, was trembling and very white.

"You wanted to save that boy, eh?"

"I couldn't see you with blood on your hands. I couldn't."

Hull tossed his arms in the air and covered his face. The woman heard his words as he spoke to himself—bitter, choking, hard-wrung words.

"Sold! Done for! Smashed! Back to cadging and cheating and card-sharping—the old bag of tricks! * * * No, by God! I'll finish it here and now." He struggled up to his knees, but remained so, his back still turned, his arms hanging beside him. He looked in every drooping line what he was—a beaten man.

Then Mrs. Nevil said:

"Tony, you needn't go back to all that. I've got—a little, you know. Oh, it was come by honestly enough. A legacy. I couldn't say anything about it before because it would have looked so very, very little beside the Harvest Moon. But now! We could go to England and live, if you liked, or we could stay here in the islands and grow copra and get to be richer. That's what I'd meant to do. That's what brought me to Morea. I heard of a chance to buy some land. It's a good thing in a small way."

She moved closer to where the man knelt.

"We might be—happy, Tony, after all," she said wistfully, "you and I, living quietly here where no one ever comes who—who knows anything. It doesn't sound—so very bad, does it? It would be an easy life—restful. And I'm tired. I should like to rest. Do you think"——

Hull covered his face once more, and she waited. Then at last, without looking round, he put out a hand to her, and Mrs. Nevil caught it between hers and held it against her breast and began to cry

THE END.

Neighborhood Theaters: Astonishing Growth in St. Louis

BEGINNING as tent shows and then replaced by more pretentious airdomes, nearly every residence section has its permanent amusement house, one costing nearly $100,000—The business side of the venture : : : : : :

JUNIATA
NEW GRAND CENTRAL

IF one of the big league baseball parks in St. Louis should have an attendance of 20,000 at an ordinary mid-season Sunday game, the managers probably would faint. Probably twice in the history of baseball in St. Louis this has occurred. Advocates of the sport would cite it as an extraordinary instance of the hold the national game has on the public of St. Louis.

But almost any old rainy, disagreeable night in St. Louis will see 20,000 persons at the neighborhood theaters. The statistical department of the Business Men's League declares in a bulletin that the average Sunday crowd at the "movies" the year around is eight times 20,000 in St. Louis alone; that an average weekday crowd is more than six times 20,000.

Admitting that the Business Men's League, in the enthusiasm of the true booster, has exaggerated the attendance—discount the figures 25 per cent, for the sake of argument—and the disparity is still great.

If there are any energetic and enthusiastic young gentlemen with a yearning for forensic fame, they might engage in a little spirited debate on this proposition: "Resolved, That the public of St. Louis is more interested in moving picture shows than in big league baseball."

Nor is the fan—that volatile, hypercritical, enthusiastic, loyal individual, half gamin and half philosopher—lacking at the picture shows.

He is in his regular seat regularly. He compliments a scene or a vaudeville turn by clapping his hands, stamping his feet and, occasionally, whistling. Sarcastic remarks to the fellow next to him are his thumbs down for anything that displeases him. In a picture, he knows whether an important detail has been omitted or overdone, whether the "stuff is old," and whether an actor has "pulled a bone" or a "hit."

When a face appears on a screen, he knows whether it is that of a "big league" star, a recent importation from the "brush" or a "ham." If it is a star, he knows that star's professional history, just as the baseball fan knows the batting, fielding and base-running percentages of his favorites. Some of the stars have nicknames. And whenever this fanatic of the neighborhood theater has any objection to anything that goes on, he loses no time in getting it out of his system within the hearing of some representative of the house: usher, doorman, cashier or manager.

In most neighborhoods, the managers soon learn the faces of regular attendants. Almost every manager knows a dozen or more individuals who will be in a certain row of seats at a certain time on a certain night. Where can baseball show the beat of this for constancy?

The books at the License Collector's office at the city hall show that more than 150 neighborhood theaters are doing business in St. Louis. They are listed as tents, airdomes and houses. The airdomes are run only in the summer. Of the houses there are 97, which range in size from the small storeroom, seating perhaps 200, to the big theater buildings seating 2500. At an average it is estimated conservatively that each house is filled once and a fourth times each day. Besides the neighborhood theaters there are 16 regular theaters.

The revenue the city derives from them each year is considerable. To suit the varying needs of different houses, three schedules of license fees have been arranged. A flat charge of $25 a month is arranged for each house that wishes to pay its fees monthly. Those which wish the discount may get a year's license for $150 or a six months' license for $100. Most of the airdomes, which can be run only in the summer, adopt the monthly payment plan.

Strangers in St. Louis often comment on the lack of downtown street life at night. By 9 p. m. of most evenings, the downtown streets are comparatively deserted. "Where are your people?" the stranger will ask. The wise St. Louisan will answer: "At the movies." This is literally true.

Last summer, it will be remembered, the New Grand Central, at Grand and Lucas avenues, exhibited a series of motion pictures based upon the greatest of Victor Hugo's novels. While this bill was running, automobiles lined both sides of Grand avenue from the University Club to Finney avenue. One line of persons, waiting to get in, extended for more than a block north on Grand. Another extended around the corner almost a block on Lucas.

Recently the new Park Theater, at Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, was thrown open to the public. Early in the evening the streets were jammed with automobiles and persons who had bought tickets previously had to wait fifteen or twenty minutes to get through the crowd and inside the doors.

If one stands at King's highway and Delmar any night around 9 o'clock, when the crowds for the first and second bills are leaving King's and the Delmar, he will see more people on the street than are, at the same time, at Olive street and Broadway or Washington avenue and Broadway, two of the busiest downtown corners.

He will find virtually the same thing further south, on Grand and Shenandoah avenues, when the Shenandoah Theater is receiving and discharging its multitudes, or at Grand and Juniata, where the Juniata Theater is. As for Grand and Olive, near both the Princess and Empress theaters, there is always a crush at that time of evening. Instances of this sort might be multiplied, as at the Mikado, at Easton and Hamilton avenues. North, south and west—in whatever residence district one may be—the same thing is repeated nightly in many neighborhoods.

A peculiar condition exists in many of the quieter neighborhoods. For experiment, the other night, a man stopped at Easton and Blackstone avenue and counted the number of people on the street. All he could see numbered 27. Near the corner was a movie theater called The Fairy. Its lobby was deserted. The cashier sat forlornly in her window. From external appearances there was no life about the place.

The man passed inside. He was amazed to find a rather large hall jammed to the doors with people. Many passed out when the first show was over, but the place was still crowded when the second show was half through.

By far the greater number of the smaller houses are owned by individuals. But there are several syndicates which control many large places.

"THE DAY OF... DAYS"

talk to for a moment. So I left her at the door."

"Well, Vi's waitin'. Run on up. I won't be five minutes. And knock on Molly's door and see what's the matter."

"All right," returned P. Sybarite serenely.

His constructive mendacity light upon his conscience, he permitted George time enough to leave the house and gain Clancy's, then quietly followed as far as the gate, from which point he cut across the southern sidewalk, turned west to Ninth avenue, and then north to Forty-second street. Here he boarded a cross-town car.

This was quite the most insane freak in which he had indulged himself these many years; and, frankly admitting this much, he was rather pleased than otherwise. He was bound to call on Mr. Bailey Penfield and inform that gentleman where he might find his hat. Incidentally, he hoped to surprise something or other informing with regard to the fortunes of Miss Lessing subsequent to ner impulsive flight by taxicab.

At all events, he meant to know more about Mr. Bailey Penfield before he slept.

Alighting at Sixth avenue, he walked to Forty-fifth street, turned off toward Fifth avenue, and in another moment was at a standstill in the extremest bewilderment before No. 97.

By every normal indication, the house was closed and tenantless. From roof to basement its every window was blind with shades close drawn. The front doors were closed, the basement grating likewise. An atmospheric accumulation of street debris littered the area flagstones, together with one or two empty and battered ash cans, in whose shadows an emaciated cat skulked apprehensively. The one thing lacking to signify that the Penfield menage had moved bodily to the country was the shield of a burglar protective association in one of the parlor windows. P. Sybarite looked for that in vain.

Disappointed in the conviction that he had drawn a false lead, the little man strolled on eastward a little distance; then, on sheer impulse, gave up his project and, swinging about, started to go home.

But now, as he approached No. 97 the second time, a taxicab turned in from Sixth avenue, slid to the curb before that dwelling, and set down a smallish young man, dressed in the extreme of fashion—a person of physical characteristics by no means to be confused with those of the man with the twisted mouth—who, negligently handing a bill to the chauffeur, ran nimbly up the steps, rang the doorbell, and, promptly letting himself into the vestibule, closed the door behind him.

The taxicab swung round and disappeared. Not so P. Sybarite. Profoundly intrigued, he waited hopefully for this second midnight caller to reappear, as baffled as himself. But though he dawdled away a patient five minutes, nothing of the sort occurred. The front doors remained closed and undisturbed, as little communicative as the darkened windows.

Here was mystery within mystery, indeed! The circumstances annoyed P. Sybarite. And why (he asked himself with impatience) need he remain outside when another entered the house without let or hindrance?

Upon this thought he turned boldly up the steps, pressed the bell button, laid hold of the doorknob and entered into a vestibule as dark as his bewilderment and as empty as the palm of his hand; proving that the young gentleman of fashion had experienced no difficulty in penetrating farther into fastnesses of this singular establishment. In reflecting that where one had gone another might follow, P. Sybarite pulled the door to behind him.

Instantly the bare and narrow vestibule was flooded with the merciless glare of half a dozen electric bulbs; and at the same time he found himself sustaining the intent scrutiny of a pair of inhospitable dark eyes, set in an impassive dark face—which last was abruptly disclosed in the frame of a small grill in one of the inner doors.

Though far too dumfounded for speech, he contrived to return the stare with aggressive interest, and to such effect that he presently wore through the patience of the other.

"Well?" he was gruffly asked.

"The saints be praised!" returned P. Sybarite. "I find myself so. And yourself?" he added civilly—not to be outdone, as the saying is.

"What do you want?"

Irritating discourtesy inhered in the speaker's tone. P. Sybarite stiffened his neck.

"To see Mr. Penfield," he returned firmly, "of course."

"What Mr. Penfield?" asked the other, after a pause so transient that it was little more than distinguishable, but which to P. Sybarite indicated beyond question that one Mr. Penfield at least was known to his interlocutor.

"Mr. Bailey Penfield," he replied. "Who else?" During a pause slightly longer than the first, the hostile and suspicious eyes summed him up a second time.

"No such party here," was the verdict. The man drew back and made as if to shut the grille.

"Nonsense!" R. Sybarite insisted sharply. "I have his card with this number—got it from him only tonight."

"Card?" The face returned to the grille.

P. Sybarite made no bones about displaying his alleged credential.

"I believe you'll find that authentic," he observed with asperity.

By way of answer, the grille closed with a snap; but his inclination to kick the door was nullified when, without further delay, it opened to admit him. Nose in air, he strutted in, and the door banged behind him.

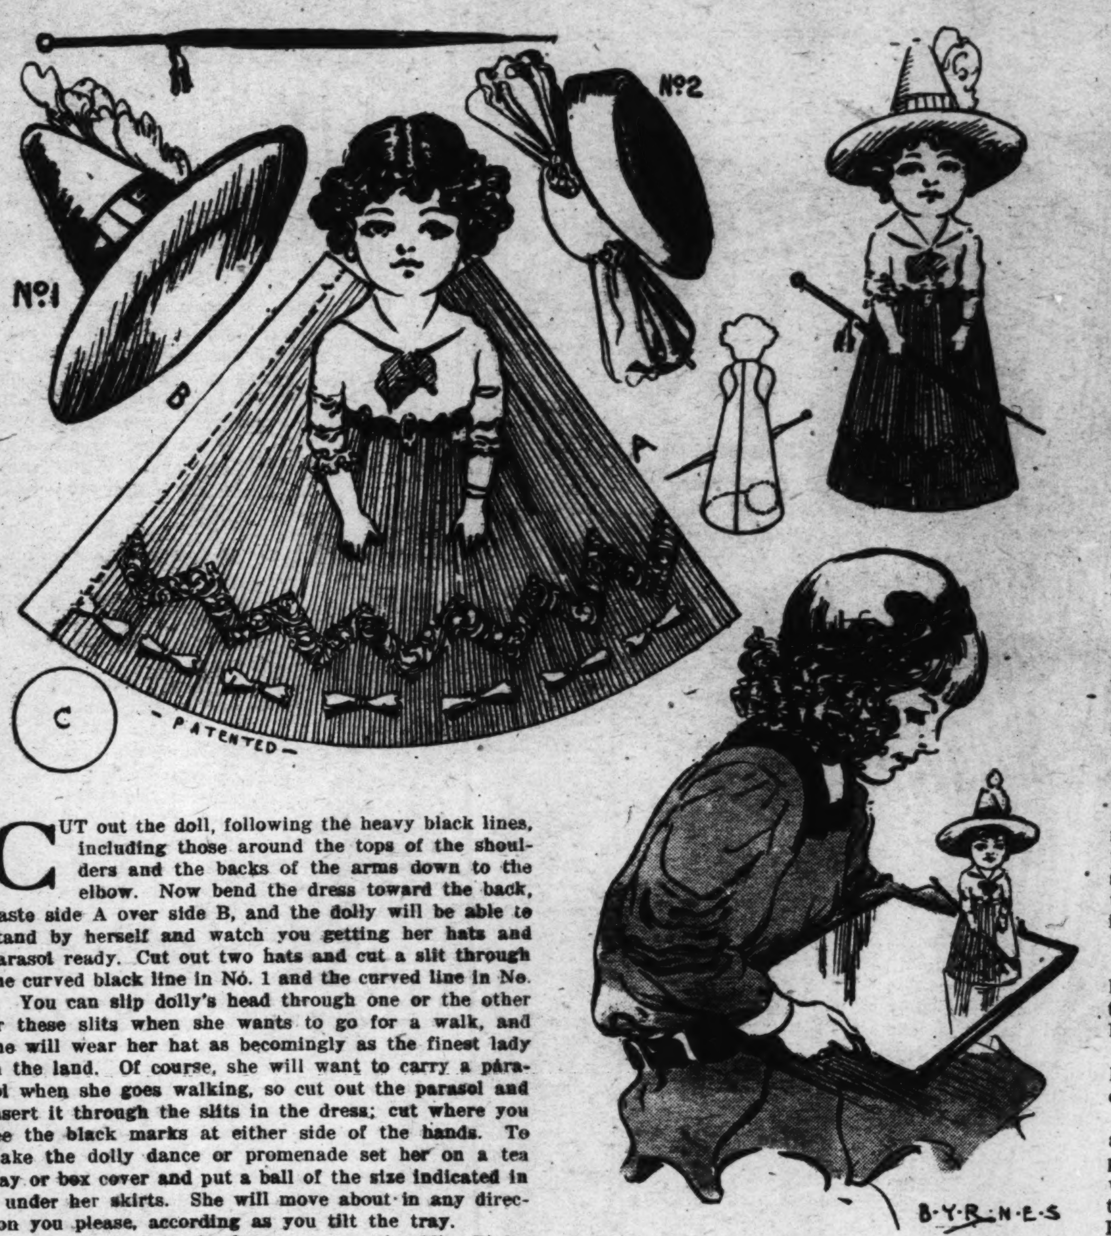
MAKE MISS PINKY PRIM WALTZ FOR YOU

Another Magic Cut-Out for the Little Ones



CUT out the doll, following the heavy black lines, including those around the tops of the shoulders and the backs of the arms down to the elbow. Now bend the dress toward the back, paste side A over side B, and the dolly will be able to stand by herself and watch you getting her hats and parasol ready. Cut out two hats and cut a slit through the curved black line in No. 1 and the curved line in No. 2. You can slip dolly's head through one or the other or these slits when she wants to go for a walk, and she will wear her hat as becomingly as the finest lady in the land. Of course, she will want to carry a parasol when she goes walking, so cut out the parasol and insert it through the slits in the dress; cut where you see the black marks at either side of the hands. To make the dolly dance or promenade set her on a tea tray or box cover and put a ball of the size indicated in C under her skirts. She will move about in any direction you please, according as you tilt the tray.

If you have a box of colors you can paint Miss Pinky Prim very attractively.

The Associated Theaters Co. controls nine, the smallest of which seats about 750 and the largest 2500. The so-called Crawford Syndicate controls seven. The Koeln Syndicate controls two large ones, and there are several smaller syndicates.

According to Business Men's League figures the total capital invested in the nighborhood theater business in St. Louis is about $6,000,000 and the direct annual revenue is estimated at an equal sum. Some of this money is invested in manufacturing films, for, surprising as it may be to some St. Louisans, there are two large film studios in St. Louis, one of which has a branch outfit in California for Wild West and open-air films.

William J. Flynn, general manager of the Associated Theaters Co., said that three of their theaters—the Park, the Princess and the Shenandoah—have a total annual music bill of $10,000. Their other seven theaters average $100 a week each for music.

The weekly payroll of this concern is about $500 a week for house employes and about $5000 a week for players. Most of the large houses throughout the city have regular orchestras comparable to those of the downtown theaters. The musicians are paid, usually, according to union schedules.

All this business has sprung up, virtually, in the last five years. Before that time the "movie" theater was usually a vacant store building. The owner started out with a small capital in most instances. Often he lost money and quit. Sometimes he made money and his business expanded.

At the beginning he would have only a pianist and the pictures. Then he would get some young woman to sing for him. After that came the male quartet and then a dancer and—vaudeville.

It is almost axiomatic, in the business, that a house must have a permanent tributary population on four sides of it. It may have populous districts on three sides, but if the fourth is an open space, the theater may fail for lack of enough patronage. Managers in most districts go far to cater to the needs of their neighbors.

There is one theater, for instance, at Boyle and Manchester avenues, in a district occupied largely by railroad yards. The brakeman, fireman, conductor or engineer who has some leisure on hand drops into this theater. If he is wanted, the caller for his road goes to the box office. A minute later the man's name is flashed on the screen with an announcement that he has been asked for. The arrangement is popular both with the men and the roads; with the roads because they would rather their men idled in the theater than in some nearby saloon, and with the men because they can enjoy their breathing spell without fear of losing work.

Most houses seek to attract women and children. If a man must be away from home at night he can leave his family at the movie. In case someone is needed unexpectedly at home, a call can be flashed for him on the screen at any time. Flynn tells of a mother who was called to the box office in that way, one night recently, to be told that her daughter had eloped and married.

The movie theater appeals to many men who, without it, would seek entertainment downtown much more often than they do. One can step around the corner, pass away an evening and be back home again in half the time it would take to go to a downtown theater, and then be out only the price of carfare. It is doubtful that, in the long run, he saves money by not patronizing the more expensive theaters. In former times a man and his wife would spend $2 or $2.50 about once a month to see a show downtown. Now they go to the movies six times in the month and take the children along.

St. Louis boasts some of the largest and handsomest neighborhood theaters in the country. Some of them are as large as the average downtown theater and many are architecturally beautiful.

Little Swindles Within the Law ♣ and Without

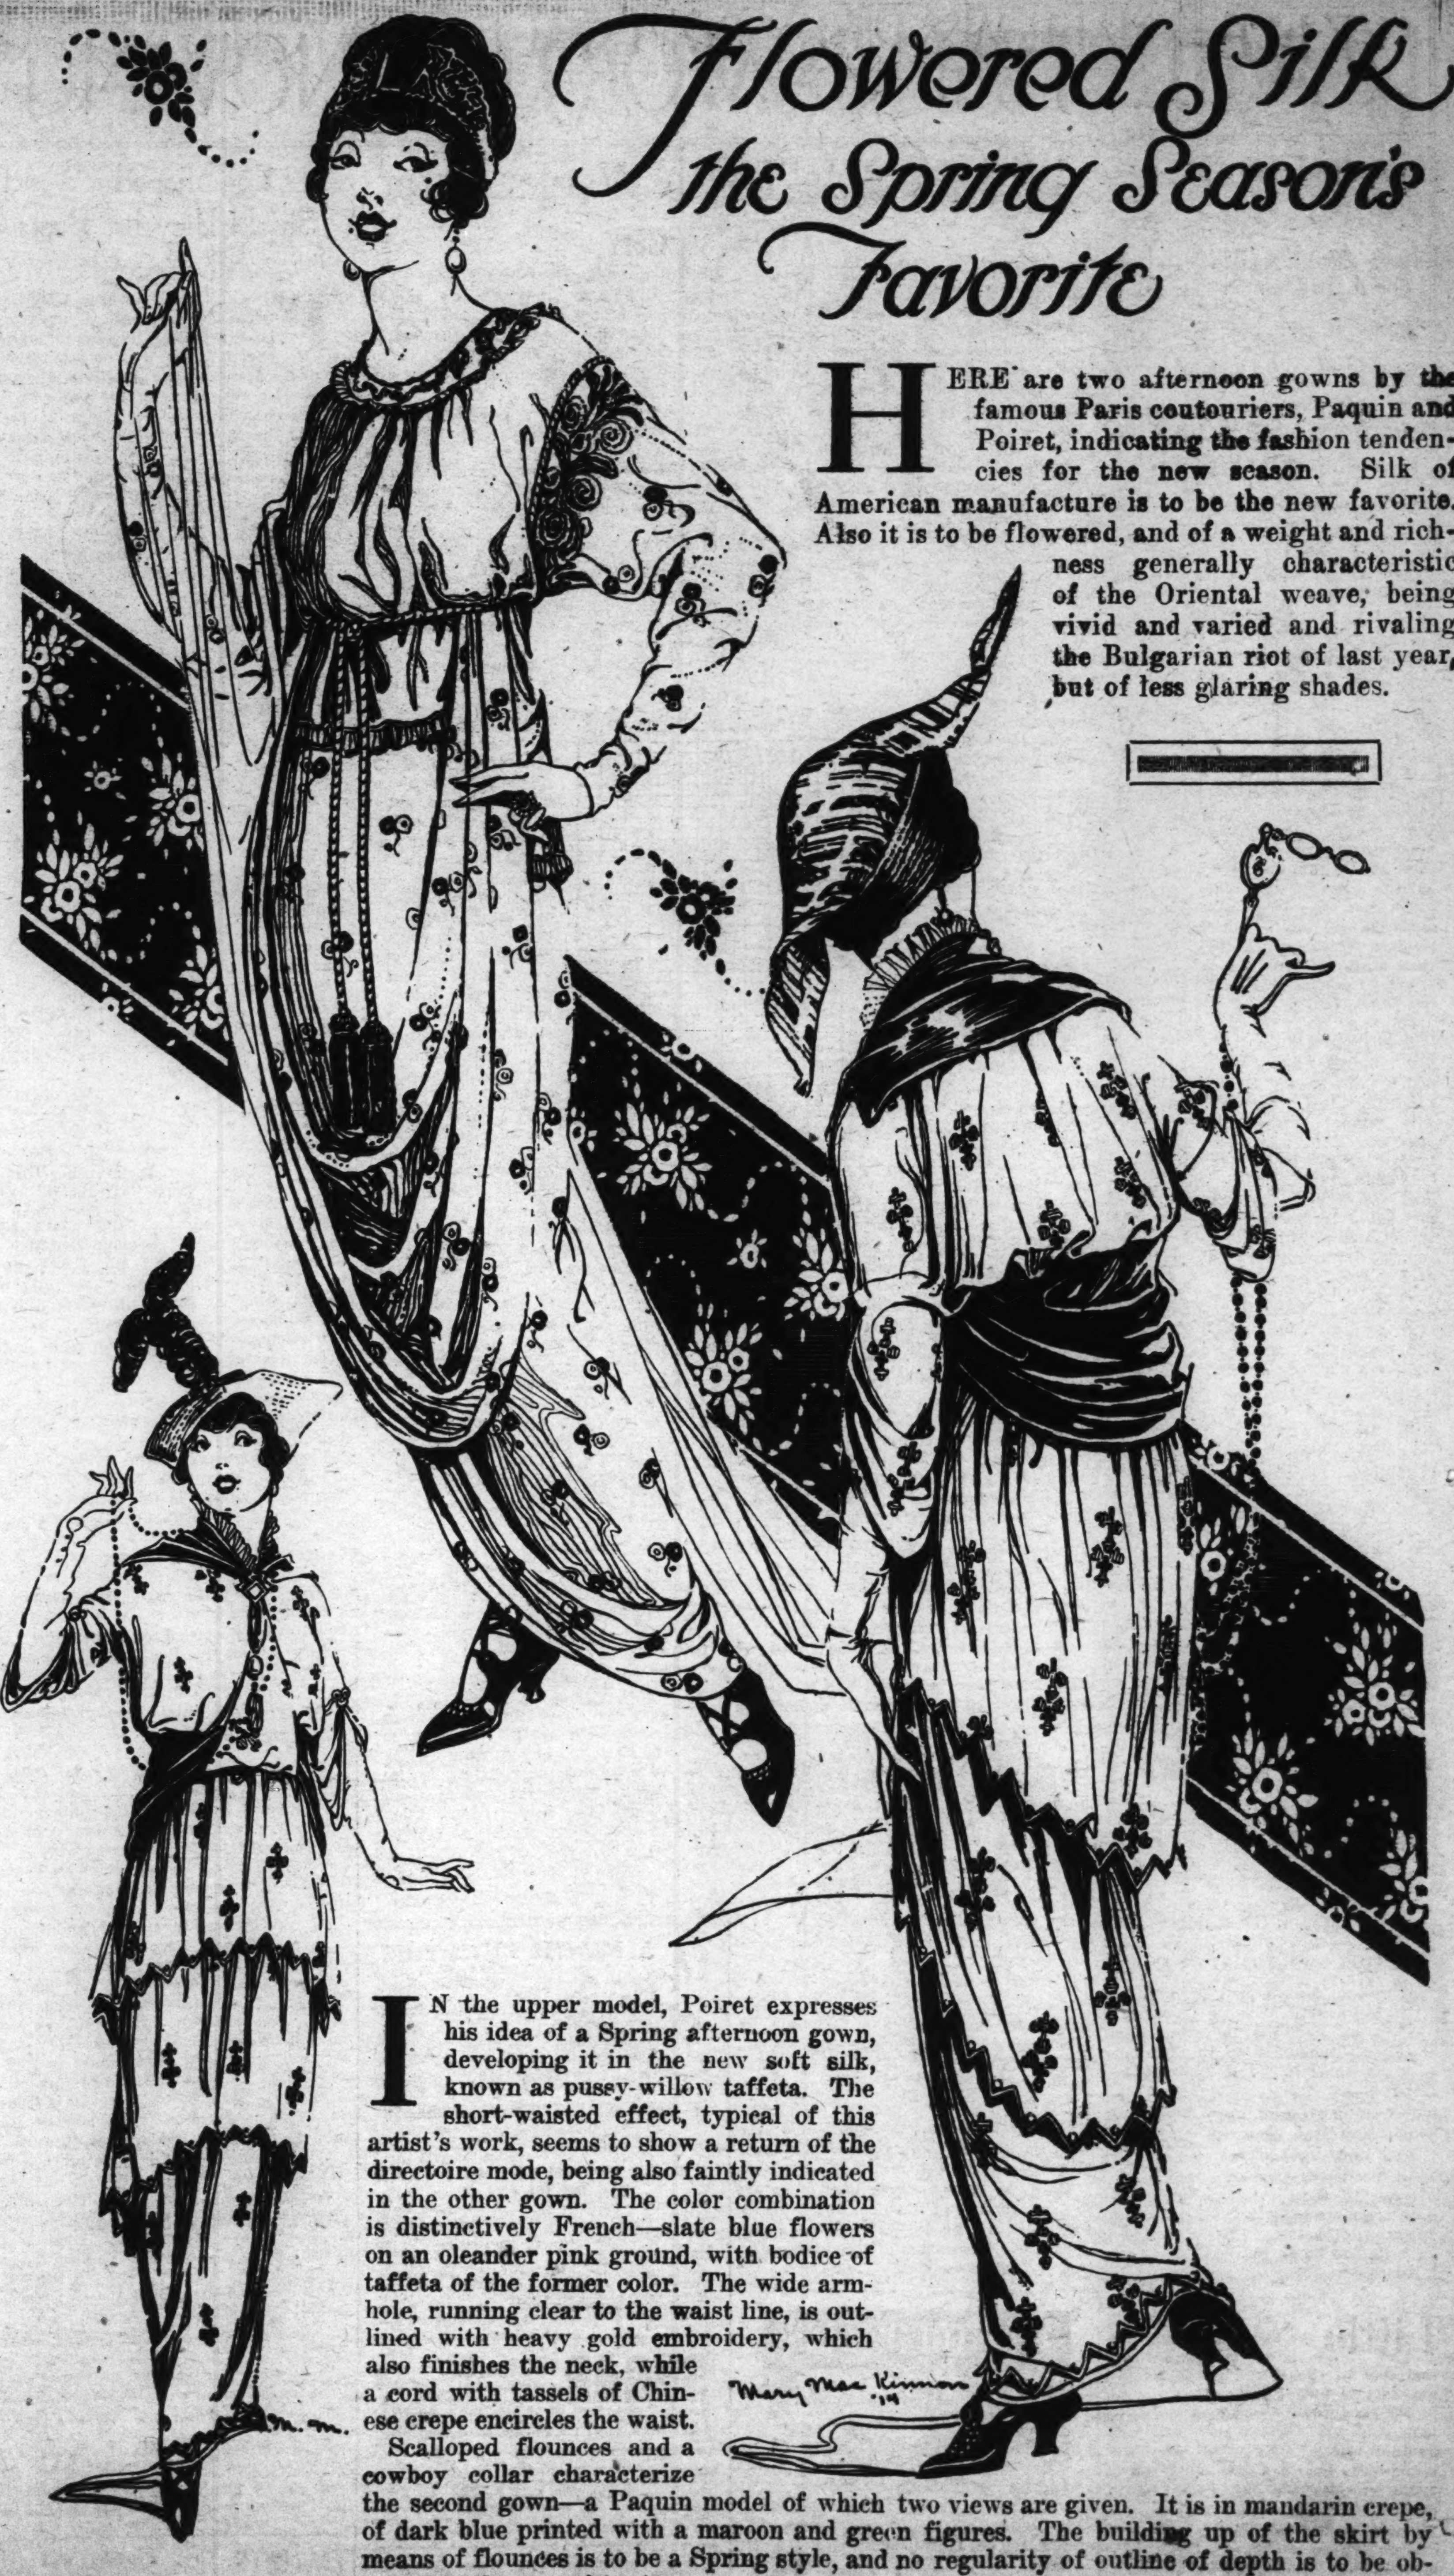
and seal it. But on counting the change, she finds it amounts to only $19.95.

"My goodness!" exclaims the man in surprise. "Here, take your $20 while I run around the corner and get another nickel." He tosses the envelope on the counter, sweeps up his $19.95 and disappears. The cashier waits a while and then opens the envelope. It contains a blank sheet of paper.

Rural visitors arriving in St. Louis at the Union Station are subject to ambuscade by a systematic band of swindlers. One of them sold the Eads Bridge to a farmer for a few hundred dollars, and another sold the Pierce Building to a second countryman. A third farmer was robbed of $150 in broad daylight in a "matching game" played on the head of a barrel on Olive street, between Third and Fourth streets; and another was so duped that he rushed home to Montreal to get $1000, which his sharper friends were planning to steal from his on his return. He was saved by the suspicions of his banker, who refused to give him the money and communicated with the St. Louis police. This eager gull was furious at his banker and the police, whose meddling he said prevented him from making a profit of $3000 on a horse race.

Women from the country are the prey of men who advertise for housekeepers, and on their arrival in the city steal their baggage or borrow their money and vanish. One such sharper, now under arrest in St. Louis, is 70 years old and has just been released from the penitentiary. A humorous sidelight on the case is that he is accused of stealing $20 which he did not know he took. He is charged with stealing a woman's suit case containing clothes. Among them was a pair of shoes, in the soles of which the owner had hidden two $10 gold pieces. The prisoner's chagrin when he learned he had overlooked this loot was tragi-comic.

Flowered Silk the Spring Season's Favorite



HERE are two afternoon gowns by the famous Paris coutouriers, Paquin and Poiret, indicating the fashion tendencies for the new season. Silk of American manufacture is to be the new favorite. Also it is to be flowered, and of a weight and richness generally characteristic of the Oriental weave, being vivid and varied and rivaling the Bulgarian riot of last year, but of less glaring shades.

IN the upper model, Poiret expresses his idea of a Spring afternoon gown, developing it in the new soft silk, known as pussy-willow taffeta. The short-waisted effect, typical of this artist's work, seems to show a return of the directoire mode, being also faintly indicated in the other gown. The color combination is distinctively French—slate blue flowers on an oleander pink ground, with bodice of taffeta of the former color. The wide armhole, running clear to the waist line, is outlined with heavy gold embroidery, which also finishes the neck, while a cord with tassels of Chinese crepe encircles the waist.

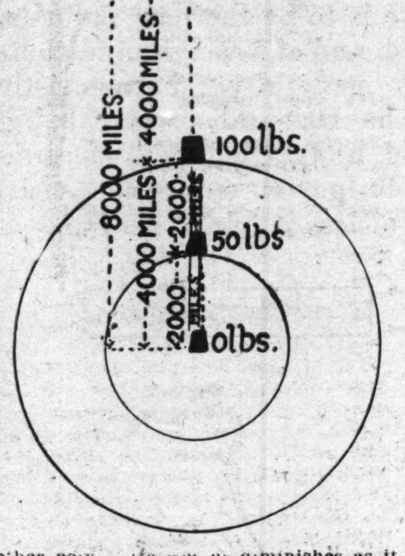
Scalloped flounces and a cowboy collar characterize the second gown—a Paquin model of which two views are given. It is in mandarin crepe, of dark blue printed with a maroon and green figures. The building up of the skirt by means of flounces is to be a Spring style, and no regularity of outline of depth is to be observed in these semi-tunics.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Why a Body Weighs Less as It Goes Above or Below the Earth's Surface

A CORRESPONDENT writes to ask whether a body weighs more or less at the surface of the earth than it would at the center of the earth or at a point midway between center and surface.

Every body weighs more at the surface of the earth than it can at any other point. Its weight diminishes as it is removed above the surface or below it. As it rises from the surface its weight decreases in inverse ratio to the squares of the distances from the center of the earth. As it descends below the surface its weight decreases directly as the distance from the center of the earth.



Thus, a body weighing 100 pounds at the surface of the earth, which is approximately 4000 miles from the center, would weigh only 25 pounds at a point 4000 miles high; at twice the distance it has one-quarter the weight.

If we drop the same body half the distance to the center of the earth, or to a point approximately 2000 miles below the surface, it will weigh 50 pounds.

The reason for this is that at 2000 miles from the center the body is on the surface of a sphere of 2000 miles' radius.

What causes weight is the mass of matter, combined with distance from the center. A globe of 2000 miles' radius contains one-eighth as much matter as a globe of 4000 miles' radius, the size of the earth; therefore only one-eighth as much matter attracts the body, which, if mass were the only factor, would at 2000 miles from the center weigh one-eighth as much as at the surface of the earth. But it is also only half as far from the center as it was at the surface and, if distance were the only factor, would weigh four times as much as on the surface. Four times one-eighth is one-half; therefore it weighs half what it would at the surface.

Now, suppose we drop this body to the very center of the earth and see what it would weigh. All the matter of the earth is now outside it and can exercise no attraction whatever upon it; therefore it weighs nothing at all.

Effect of Smoking on Boys' Scholarship

IN a large high school in a Middle Western city Thomas Warrington Gosling had the following questions propounded to the 103 boys of the senior class, "and no questions asked:"

1. Do you smoke now, or have you ever smoked, cigarettes, cigars or pipe?
2. How old were you when you smoked for the first time?
3. How long did you continue to smoke?

In the School Review he sums up the answers and compares the results with the records for scholarship. It was found that 43.7 per cent of the class smoked and that the scholarship of these for one term averaged 77.2 per cent, or 1.9 per cent lower than the average for the nonsmokers. It was shown that the average scholarship of those who never smoked at all was 3 per cent higher than that of boys who had formerly smoked but given it up.

It would be interesting to carry this questioning out on a larger scale, say in all the high schools of St. Louis, Chicago and New York, for such generalizations based upon such a small total number of subjects are always dangerous. The figures might be totally reversed, especially those for the boys who "formerly smoked and then quit."

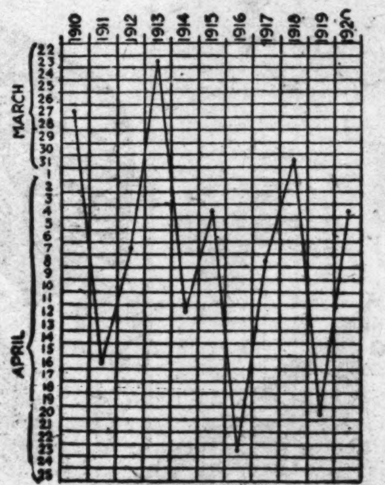
Why Lent Is Three Weeks Later This Year

LENT begins this year three weeks later than last year, being of course, based upon the date of Easter, which is April 12 this year, as against March 23 in 1913. Very few people can tell why Lent varies so from year to year and why Easter may come as early as March 22 or as late as April 25.

It is something of an anomaly from a theological point of view that the anniversary of Christ's death may fall on any one of 35 dates, while the anniversary of His birth is always on the same. It is no less an anomaly from the astronomical standpoint, for there seems no reason why we, having adopted the solar year as the basis of our calendar, should cling to the lunar year merely for the establishment of one date.

It is a mystery why, when the date of Christ's birth was fixed as Dec. 25, some dates in April were not at the same time settled upon as those of His death and resurrection. That would have been logical and would have banished from the calendar a lunar cycle that has long been abandoned by all civilized peoples.

It should not be difficult to fix the rational date for Easter If Christ were crucified on the 14th day of the March moon astronomers ought to be able to calculate on what date this fell. They say that in all probability it fell on April 7 of the year 30 of the Christian era. Why, then, not fix Easter once and for all as the first Sunday after April 7?



The sliding scale of Easter for ten years.

It is to the Council of Nicea that we owe the perpetuation of our anachronistic method of reckoning Easter. This council decreed that it should be the first Sunday after the first full moon that occurs after the vernal equinox, March 21 Pope Gregory XIII undertook at that time to reform the Julian calendar, which had been in use ever since Julius Caesar, in 46 B. C., had prescribed that a year should consist of 365 days, every fourth year having 366. This Julian calendar was a reform of a still more ancient system based upon the motions of the moon, which system varied widely in different lands. In Rome it had originated with Romulus, who established a year of 10 months, having alternately 31 and 30 days, making 304 days in all. Numa Pompilus added the months of February and January, and in the year 452 B. C. the Decemvirs placed them where they now stand.

When Pope Gregory undertook to reform the Julian calendar, that had by that time become incorrect by about ten days, the revolution of the earth around the sun was not yet fully understood, so instead of making a change that would be thoroughly scientific, the present form of year was adopted, the Julian calendar being modified by calling Oct. 5, 1582, Oct. 15, and by making all terminal years of centuries, 1700, 1800, 1900, etc., common years of 365 days, except when the year was a multiple of 400, as 1600, 2000, etc., which should be leap years.

In those days they were so accustomed to movable feasts that it never occurred to the reformers of the calendar that a day might come when their movability should be inconvenient. They knew so little about the relations between the sun and the earth that they did not want to renounce the lunar year entirely and so upset the order of feast days that had from time immemorial been based upon the movements of the moon.

Though the Gregorian calendar was issued in 1582, prejudice against anything that came from Rome was so strong in England that it was not adopted there until by an act of Parliament, passed in 1751, Sept. 3, 1752, was reckoned as Sept. 14 and New Year's day was set back from March 25 to Jan. 1, beginning with 1753.

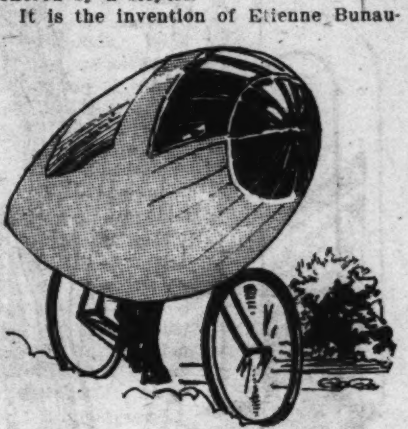
To fix one definite date for Easter would require a decree from the Pope. The whole Roman Catholic world and all Roman Catholics elsewhere would at once adopt it, and there is little doubt that the Protestant churches would follow. As it is a purely religious feast, this is all that would be necessary.

In Russia and Greece the Julian calendar is still in use, so their dates are now 12 days different from ours.

In Egg-Shaped Wind Shield Bicyclist Beats All Records

THIS unwieldy looking machine does not look as if it would beat a naked bicycle in speed, does it? Yet it is so scientifically planned as to its form that it offers much less resistance to the air than is offered by a bicycle.

It is the invention of Etienne Bunau-Varilla, son of Philippe Bunau-Varilla of Panama Canal fame. He got his idea from his experiences in aviation, in which it has been learned that bodies which in shape follow the stream lines of the currents made by cutting the air go through this more rapidly than those that are merely pointed. This windshield is mathematically designed to make no eddies in the air, which closes in behind the machine and materially reduces the resistance.



The Bunau-Varilla wind shield.

That it is successful seems to be proved by the following figures of records made by the cyclist Berchet at the Velodrome d'Hiver in Paris:

1 kilometer, with a standing start—1m. 16 3-5s., equalling Jaap Eden's unbeaten record made at Bordeaux in 1896.

1 kilometer with a flying start—1m. 7s., beating by 2 3-5 seconds Perchicot's unrecognized record of 1m. 9 3-5s., and by 2 2-5 seconds Dupre's record of 1m. 10 2-5s. made at Buffalo in 1911.

2 kilometers—2m. 23 4-5s.

3 kilometers—3m. 31 4-5s.

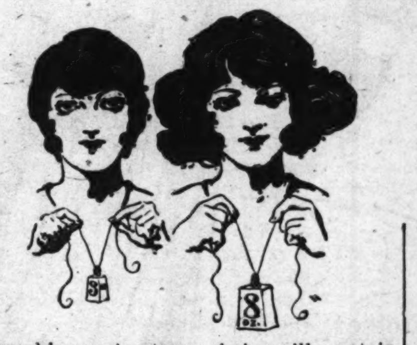
4 kilometers—4m. 39 3-5s.

5 kilometers—5m. 46 4-5s., beating the world record of 6m. 56 4-5s., made by Verlinden at Antwerp in 1910, by 1m. 10s.

Berchet's average speed with the wind shield in these tests was 51.902 kilometers an hour. The best he could accomplish in a race without the shield, was an average of 45.3 kilometers an hour. With the egg he covered the 250-meter track of the Velodrome d'Hiver in 15 2-5 seconds, or at a speed of 58.450 kilometers an hour.

Weight Test for Hair

THIS picture shows how you can test the quality of your hair. If it is coming out and you suspect that it is getting weak, pull a hair from your head and find out what weight can be hung from it without its breaking. A strong hair will sustain eight ounces; a weak hair will sustain only three ounces. Weak hair needs immediate treatment by a scalp specialist.



IN what we scornfully speak of as the "Dark Ages," before the Renaissance, professors at the University of Paris were teaching as facts the very laws of nature that Newton and Galileo subsequently codefied, such, for instance, as those that govern the movements of heavenly bodies and the fall of objects.

Danger on Railways

A CONTEMPORARY has estimated that since the average length of a railroad journey in this country is 34 miles, and a passenger may take 2,275,122 such journeys with only one chance of being killed, it would take him, at two trips per day, 3792 years to run the full gamut of risk. That is to say, if the one fatal accident happened to him in the present year, it would have been necessary for him to start his railroad traveling at two trips per day, in the year 1879 B. C. It must be borne in mind, however, that he might be killed on his very first trip.

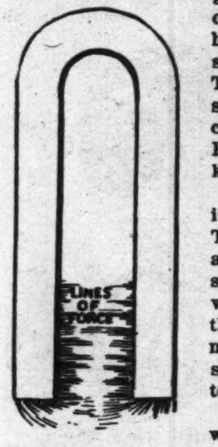
NEW and ODD THINGS in SCIENCE

How Mechanical Energy Becomes Electric Current.

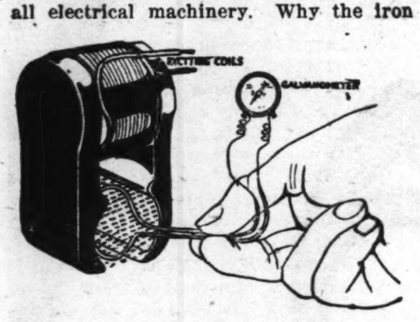
THE electric current that lights our houses, rings our bells, drives our trolley cars, cooks our food, turns the wheels of our engines, bears our messages from one side of the world to another; this giant that man has chained and made his indispensable slave—what is it? There is not a man so learned that he can tell. Even Edison does not know.



Where do we get it? How is it made? These are easier to answer, though it seems strange that we can make something that we can neither see, hear, smell, taste nor touch.

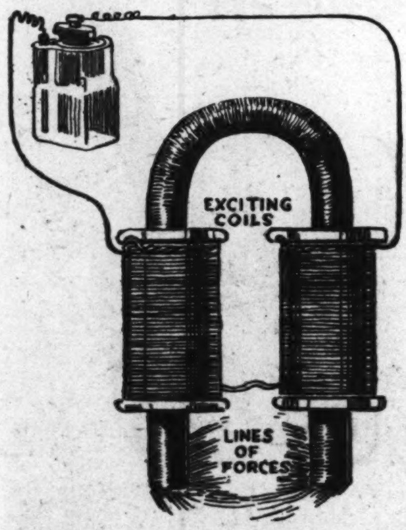
Everybody knows what a magnet is. This horseshoe-shape piece of steel that attracts needles, knives, anything containing iron, has a stream of invisible and impalpable lines of force radiating between its poles, like a multitude of invisible elastic bands. If, instead of steel, we take a piece of soft iron and wind around it a large number of copper wires covered with cotton or silk, and send through these an electric current from a battery, we shall get a much more powerful magnet, but it is only a magnet while the current is running through the wires that surround it.

A magnet thus made is the basis of all electrical machinery. Why the iron and copper behave as they do is a mystery.



Provided with such a magnet, let us now try an experiment which will reveal another phenomenon, inexplicable, but without which there could be no electric machinery. Take a copper wire covered with cotton or silk and make a loop of it, attaching the two ends to a galvanometer, insert it between the poles of the magnet, where the lines of force will act upon it. These pass through the cotton covering, which, however, is impervious to the electric current. The pointer of the galvanometer moves, then stops. Draw the loop of wire away. The pointer moves again and rests at zero.

This shows us that at the moment when the loop of wire cuts the lines of force—and only at this moment—an electric current is produced in the loop of wires. This is called induction. The mechanical energy of our hand has been transformed into electric energy.



If a steam engine or a gasoline motor or any other mechanism be substituted for our hand, if many loops of wire be added and these be made to revolve very rapidly in and out between the poles of the magnet, we have an electric generator. The loops of wire are called an armature.

Although no one can see how it is done, it is nevertheless true that this simple process causes a current of electricity to flow through the wires of the armature, which may be led out through suitable sliding contacts, or brushes, and sent out through the conducting wires of a circuit which may extend many miles. The current is supposed to flow out over one wire and back over another, keeping up a continuous flow through the armature and outside circuit.

Now, if you take an electric motor away out somewhere on the line and connect its terminals to the two wires in the circuit, the current which is being generated will flow through the armature of this second machine, and, lo and behold! the armature begins to spin. Put a pully on the shaft and you get mechanical power again, which is what you started out with. That is why motors are so economical and convenient where mechanical power is required. Huge generators in a power station generate current in vast quantities, and this is sent out over the line to be used by motors of all types and sizes from a thirty-second of a horsepower up to a thousand horsepower.

Wherein the Human Tongue Differs From That of a Beast

THAT a chin is necessary to articulate speech was the subject of an address made at the British Association meeting last summer by Dr. Louis Robinson, a synopsis of which was printed in this magazine early in the autumn, accompanied by the obvious question: "How, then, do parrots talk?" Replying to this question in an article in Knowledge, Dr. Robinson says it would be equally pertinent to ask "How, then, does a phonograph talk?" He explains that parrots don't talk as we do, articulating their words by means of their tongues, but by means of a "marvelously elaborate and versatile sound-producing apparatus, almost as different from any possessed by ourselves as is the mechanism of a phonograph." This is situated deep down behind a parrot's breast-bone and not in its mouth. Dr. Robinson describes, in no less than 81 photographs, drawings and diagrams, the amazingly beautiful structure of the mechanism with which human beings talk—a mechanism that differentiates them absolutely from the lower animals. And he shows that this mechanism is only crudely developed in such human races as the Bushman, the Pygmies and other primitive peoples whose speech is very simple and consists largely of gutteral sounds. Moreover, in the higher races of mankind it is not until about the sixteenth year that this mechanism is found in perfection. In books on anatomy you will find scarcely more than a mere mention of the genio-glossus muscle, which spreads fan-like from the chin to the surface of the tongue, and its attachment, the genial tubercles. Yet, according to Dr. Robinson, these are all-important, being the very organs that enable us to talk. All animals with tongues have genio-glossus muscles, but only in man are they large and capable of a great variety of motions. In animals the genio-glossus is small and compact, while in man it has become "a series of a large number of independent muscular strips which are, to all intents and purposes, separate muscles, each with its little fiber of the hypoglossal nerve (that which carries the message from the brain to the tongue) entering it in such a way as not to hamper its free movement, while in the apes it is apparently a single muscle, or a closely united group, acting en bloc."

DIAGRAMS OF THE GENIO-GLOSSUS MUSCLE IN ARTICULATING VARIOUS SOUNDS.

This muscle acts with lightning rapidity. "Public speakers frequently talk at the rate of 150 words a minute, while it seems possible to articulate quite clearly and correctly when speaking at the rate of 180 words a minute. If we analyze the action of the tongue when speaking at the rate of 150 words a minute, we find that there must be at least 500 different movements or adjustments. This gives eight or nine in every second. Such movements, it must be remembered, do not follow one another regularly in mechanical rotation like the piston-beats of a multiple-cylindered engine, but are continually varying their order. What wonder is it that co-ordination sometimes breaks down, with the result of a stutter or a stammer?" The action of the tongue in articulating words is due to the instantaneous shortening or lengthening of one or other of the glands of the genio-glossus muscle. "For instance, in pronouncing the letter T we place the tip of the tongue against the palate close to the upper incisor teeth and then snatch it away with great rapidity." Probably another muscle helps at least to put it there, but the essential action, that of rapid withdrawal, is "due to the front fibers of the genio-glossus, which become taut and braced for instantaneous action as soon as the tongue-tip is pressed against the palate." The operation of this muscle in pronouncing other sounds may be seen by examining the accompanying diagrams. This muscle needs room to act. In most animals the tongue lies flat in the mouth. Their genio-glossus is rudimentary. In all the monkeys provision is made for working-room for the muscle by a kind of pit on the inner surface of the lower jaw, from which the genio-glossus springs. Monkeys use the genio-glossus for rolling food about in their mouths and not for speech. When we look at the inner side of a human jawbone we find two bony prominences or lumps. These are the points to which the tendons of the genio-glossus muscle are fastened. They are called the genial tubercles. In all young children they are absent. The jaws of Pygmies and Bushmen have no tubercles. Deaf-mutes have none. These tubercles are probably not the cause but the effect of speech, being produced in civilized adults by constant exercise of the tongue. Dr. Robinson closes his article with these suggestive words: "There can be no question that the Irish speak our language with much greater precision than the average Anglo-Saxon, and further investigations seemed to show that in Irish jaws there was a fuller development of the genial tubercles than in those found in English museums. On following the same line of research a little further it became apparent that a greater symmetry and uniformity of the development of the genial tubercles was to be found in French and Italian jaws than in English. This seems to the writer to be a matter worth following up."

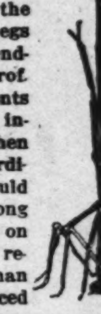
Tuberculosis Vaccine.

DR. ALBERT CALMETTE, head of the Pasteur Institute at Lille, France, has appealed to the French Government for an appropriation of $400,000 with which to carry on for 10 years his experiments with anti-tuberculosis vaccination.

He wants a small island off the coast of Guinea set apart as a home for anthropoid apes on which the tests shall be made; also two laboratory farms to be stocked with cattle for the same purpose.

Insects That Go Into Trances and Stay Put When Twisted.

SOME insects have fits. They go into trances of a cataleptic nature and stay that way for periods that last for many hours. Prof. Peter Schmidt of the Imperial University, St. Petersburg, has been observing this phenomenon in some specimens of an Asiatic species of "walking-stick" which remains absolutely motionless throughout the day with its fore legs close together and extended in front of it. Prof. Schmidt tried experiments with these sleeping insects and found that when distorted into extraordinary positions they would retain these for a long time. He stood them on their heads and they remained so for more than four hours. He placed them bridge-like across the gap between two books and weighted them till their bodies bent like bows. He bent them backward and supported their two ends by stones. In such attitudes they rested for several hours. He cut off legs, antennae, heads; he sliced their bodies, and they never gave a sign that they felt the injury. Their muscles, he says, were in a condition of slight contraction but perfectly plastic and without elasticity; they were not subject to fatigue and not sensitive to pain.



On its head.

Prof. Schmidt tried in vain to hypnotize his insects when they were in the active state. He found it very difficult to awaken them from their trances, succeeding only by prolonged excitation of their nervous systems, as with electric shock or sharply pinching the tail. The "walking-sticks" go into their trances in the morning and normally wake up when the twilight begins. What causes the daytime trance and the nighttime waking activity he has been unable to discover. He is convinced that many other insects are in a cataleptic state when they are believed to be asleep. The object of these periods of immobility is to make the insects appear as nearly as possible a part of their surroundings. The "walking-stick," for example, rest all day upon twigs. They look exactly like twigs and sway in the wind as if they were a part of the branch. Thus they are safe from birds that would like to eat them. At night they are able to walk about and search for their food, secure from the attacks of their natural enemies.

The Cause of Goitre.

THAT goitre is due to improper nutrition, is the theory advanced by Dr. David Marine of Western Reserve University, in an article in the Journal of Experimental Medicine. Dr. Marine found that trout fed upon liver developed goitre, while those that had their natural diet did not. He also noted that goitre was common in parts of Europe where one of the staple articles of diet is liver sausage. He is not prepared to call liver an actual cause of the disease, but suggests that it either lacks some necessary element of nutrition or contains an excess of something which makes the animal, in trying to utilize it, exhaust other elements necessary to nutrition.
